TAKE NEIGHBOR, NAIL MARKED, AS WIDOW'S KILLER

L. C. Palmer Seized; Villagers Tell of Trouble.

Leona "Louis" C. Palmer, 35 years old, a neighbor of Mrs. Nelson J. Brown, was arrested last night and charged informally with the murder of the aged widow in her Maywood home Wednesday night.

A companion, whose name was withheld, was also held incommunicado at the Maywood jail.

Palmer had several deep scratches on the left side of the face and others on his right wrist. He declared his wife had inflicted these in a family quarrel.

Chief of Police Louis Sweeney, after questioning him, declared that "if the case against Palmer falls down the murder will remain unsolved." He said he believes he had the right man.

Suggests Wealthy Connection.

During a cross questioning by the police Palmer's pretty wife, Mrs. Marie Palmer, 25 years old, said that her husband was a nephew of the late Potter Palmer of Chicago. This was denied by the Palmer family here.

Palmer's arrest was made by Detective Sergeants O'Brien and Folsom of the city detective bureau working under the direction of Chief Sweeney. It was the result of a carefully built web of circumstantial evidence.

The first clew came from the widow's diary. An entry found therein read:

"After three months' waiting I got some money from Stuhl."

Andrew A. Stuhl, father-in-law of the man under arrest, lives at 225 South Twenty-second avenue, Bellwood, hardly two blocks from the Brown bungalow.

Hear of Money Trouble.

The police soon learned that in December, Mrs. Brown had sold a horse to Stuhl for $100, receiving $25 down. She experienced considerable trouble in getting the remainder of the money, it was learned from the neighbors, and it was not until last Sunday, after George W. Carr, an attorney, called on Stuhl, that the latter's son-in-law, Palmer, visited the woman to complete the purchase by paying $35.

Mrs. Brown, it was learned, refused to do business on the Sabbath and Palmer returned Monday paying her in full. But the story of their differences was already neighborhood gossip.

Neighbors Aid Theory.

The final point which brought about Palmer's arrest, was the story of several of Mrs. Brown's neighbors. One, Mrs. Florence Desramond, living diagonally across the street from the Palmer and Stuhl home, told of seeing two men running past on the night of the murder from the direction of the Brown home toward the Palmer and Stuhl places. They were in their shirt sleeves.

Miss Emma Bonacker, 15, who lives five doors north of Palmer and directly across from Mrs. Desramond, also told of seeing one man, answering the description of one of the pair the latter saw, run from the front sidewalk back into the alley behind the Palmer house at about the same time.

Second Prisoner Questioned.

Palmer's acquaintance, who is held incommunicado, was asked whether or not they took their coats off on the way down the street Wednesday night. Men seen by both the Bonacker girl and Mrs. Desramond were coatless.

"Yes," the man said. "We had our coats off because it was so hot." Both of the men wore soft felt hats, also described by the woman and girl.

Palmer was arrested as he approached his home. Detectives O'Brien and Folsom walked up to him and showed their stars.

"We want you," said O'Brien.

"What for?" countered the man, it is alleged, "I didn't kill anybody."

"Who said you did?" they asked.

"Let me go into the house a minute," he asked.

"Nothing doing. You come with us."

He was taken to the Maywood police station, where he denied the murder.

"Where were you Wednesday

2000 Firemen in $5,000,000 Blaze in N. Y.

New York, Sept. 13.—More than two thousand fire fighters, perhaps the greatest force ever concentrated in New York at any one point, at midnight were battling with flames which not only caused damage to Standard Oil company property in Long Island city amounting to more than $5,000,000, but resulted in injury to more than two score of persons.

Three men on a fireboat were killed, according to early reports, but at a late hour this had not been confirmed.

The fire starting early this afternoon from the explosion of an oil tank in the Stone and Fleming works, a subsidiary of the Standard Oil, on Newton Creek, spread over vitrually the entire area of the plant, which covers twenty acres, and thence to the Columbia Distilling company's buildings on the same side of the creek, the Peter Cooper Glue works and American Agricultural company's plant across the water and the Green Point bridge.

Other Big Plants Periled.

At the same time, flames, carried across the stream by blazing oil, threatened the Platt works of the Standard Oil on the opposite bank.

Following a series of explosions this afternoon and evening the fire spread so rapidly that, in addition to a dozen fireboats and three score fire companies, a signal was sounded summoning back all members of the department who had gone off duty. This is the first time since the two platoon system was introduced in this city that an emergency has arisen necessitating a recall signal.

Every man who could be spared in Manhattan was sent across the East river. When late tonight it became evident little progress had been made in checking the flames, Fire Chief John Kenlon was recalled from his vacation to take charge of the situation.

Firemen Scorn Explosions.

Despite the constant danger from explosions which they faced, the fire fighters stuck to their posts, retreating only when the heat became intolerable. In the front lines the men worked on twenty-minute shifts, refusing to relinquish the fight in spite of severe burns.

In addition to several hundred thousand gallons of burning oil, which darkened the city by day and illuminated it by night, hundreds of tons of coal at the plant caught on fire. When naphtha and gasoline explosions occurred, the firemen were forced to fling themselves face downward in the mud and oily water. Turning their nozzles in the air, they laid down a heavy water barrage to protect themselves from the sparks.

Inhabitants of the district retreated as the flames swept on. Various fraternal organizations hastened to provide shelter over night for the refugees.

TRANS-CONTINENT FLIGHT PLANNED FOR "AIR LINER"

New York, Sept. 13.—Albert W. Lawson, whose airplane landed at Mineola, Long Island, today, making the 300 miles from Syracuse in less than three hours, plans a trip from New York to San Francisco.

The plane when it landed was carrying nine passengers. Some of them had been picked up en route, and others had made the trip from Chicago.

On the cross-continent flight Washington, D. C., will be the first stop, and it is expected that the plane will carry ten United States senators on the first part of the journey. Other stops will be made at Dayton, St. Louis, Omaha, and Salt Lake City.

Mexicans Kidnap as U. S. Lynches

Chihuahua City, Mexico, Sept. 13.—Dr. J. M. Smith and E. Monson, believed to be American mining men, were captured by a band of ten armed mounted Mexicans, nine miles from this city early today, according to an authentic report received here tonight. They were taken from a mining company train, which was robbed of the payroll of the Buena Tierra mines.

It is believed that Dr. Smith will be held for ransom and that Monson will be liberated.

The men were taken from the early morning train that carries mining men of the Santa Eulalia district from this city to their work.

Colonel Sebastian Allende dispatched four troops of Mexican federal cavalry in pursuit of the robbers.

Rob Mine Paymaster.

Eagle Pass, Tex., Sept. 13.—Mexican bandits today held up the paymaster of the Escondido mine, fifteen miles from here in Mexico, obtained $4,000, and fled in the paymaster's automobile. Carranza soldiers took up the pursuit.

Lynch Mexicans in Colorado.

Pueblo, Colo., Sept. 13.—Two Mexicans were taken from the city jail tonight by a mob of armed citizens, driven in an automobile to the Fourth street bridge, at the city limits, and hanged.

The bodies were found forty-five minutes after their capture. The lynching followed the arrest of two Mexicans charged with the murder today of Patrolman Jeff Evans.

The mob of several hundred citizens, all heavily armed, had entered the police station, held up the desk sergeant with revolvers under his nose, and forced the jailer to release the two Mexicans.

The two men, Jose Gonzales and Santos Ortez, section hands, were arrested today. Reports that the men had been transferred to the county jail and that two other Mexicans had been hanged proved erroneous.

Capture Hotel Robber After Chase Over Roof

After a chase up a fire escape and over a roof, Detective Sergeants Michael Bergin and William Kelly of East Chicago avenue station last night captured Harry Norwood, who said he was a former British soldier, and admitted having entered the room of Mrs. Rose Crowe at the Alexandria hotel and robbing it of jewelry. His companion escaped. He had the jewelry.

D'Annunzio Raids Fiume; Defies Rome

VENICE, Sept. 12.—[Delayed.]—Gabriele d'Annunzio Thursday night secretly joined the body of Italian volunteers which entered and occupied Fiume today. It is reported that Gen. "Peppino" Garibaldi is among the volunteers.

Said to Violate Orders.

ROME, Sept. 13.—[By the Associated Press.]—Gabriele d'Annunzio, the Italian poet-aviator, arrived in Fiume from Ronchi Friday with detachments of grenadiers and arditti provided with machine guns and armored automobiles, according to reports reaching this city.

The movement was made in violation of orders from the government. No disorders were reported up to late Friday.

Government officials have been instructed to investigate recent demonstrations at Fiume and determine who was responsible for them.

URGED ITALY TO FIGHT.

Capt. Gabriele d'Annunzio, who distinguished himself as an Italian aviator during the war, has been one of the most ardent advocates of Italian claims to territory on the eastern shore of the Adriatic.

During the controversy over the disposition of Fiume at the peace conference in May and later, following the resignation of Premier Orlando, appeals were made to the Italian people by Capt. d'Annunzio, who urged that Italy fight for her "just claims."

Reports reaching London Thursday stated that serious rioting between Italian and Jugo-Slav soldiers had taken place at Fiume and that allied units had been compelled to intervene.

COLLISION OF BOATS MENACE TO PRESIDENT

Wilson Ends Busiest Day of Campaign in Seattle.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 13.—[Special.]—President Wilson's review of the Pacific fleet in Elliott bay this afternoon was marked by an incident having the possibility of serious consequences when the president's launch collided bow-on with a naval whale boat.

Arriving at the dock it was found the barge of Admiral Hugh Rodman was not on hand. Commander P. W. Foote, personal aide to Secretary of the Navy Daniels, took over a naval launch on hand. Into this launch went President and Mrs. Wilson, Secretary and Mrs. Daniels, secret service men, secretaries and newspaper men.

As Commander Foote ordered the launch shoved off, the craft heeled over till the port rail was nearly awash.

Harbor Alive with Boats.

Elliott bay was alive with boats from the fleet taking off last minute spectators to the reviewing ship. Captains' gigs and whaleboats were crisscrossing among a hundred pleasure craft when Commander Foote ordered the naval launch to proceed.

With its powerful engine the boat shot forward virtually at full speed from the dock. It had proceeded several lengths when it collided with the naval whaleboat which was approaching the dock.

The jar of the collision sent those standing in the president's boat to their seats, but aside from the shaking up no damage was done. The president, in the after part of the boat, smiled through it all.

Busiest Day of Journey.

The mishap came in the middle of the busiest day the president has had on his trip. In the morning he made two addresses at Tacoma. The first and shorter one was before more than 30,000 persons, who filled and overflowed the great Tacoma stadium. The second was delivered to 5,000 persons in the Tacoma Auditorium.

Tonight Mr. Wilson was guest at a great public dinner at the hippodrome, for which 4,000 tickets were sold. He did not speak there. Later he was taken to the Arena, where he delivered his argument for the league of nations before a great and friendly crowd. He will rest tomorrow and will leave in the evening for Portland.

Says There Are Two Roads.

In all of his addresses today and tonight Mr. Wilson told the people of Washington that the issue squarely facing the country in the treaty debate was whether that program should be carried through or abandoned. He called to mind the cost in money and in human life, by which the war had been won, and asserted that those opposing the treaty proposed that the sacrifice be of no avail.

Repeating many of the arguments he had used previously against qualification of the treaty by the reservations or amendments, the president again appealed to Republicans of the country to "forget that there is an election in 1920."

It was an American program which the treaty proposed, he said, and to be an American was a thing bigger than being a Republican or a Democrat. He asserted his purpose to read "the riot act" to any one who let political conditions dictate his course in relation to the treaty.

Ready to Follow Republicans.

Applause repeatedly interrupted the president's speech tonight, while outside the hall a crowd against which the police had closed the doors kept up such a roar of cheering that his words sometimes were drowned out. Pounding on the walls and doors, the crowd, vainly trying to get in, at last settled down to shouting in unison:

"We want Wilson."

The president digressed to remark: "That applause is welcome but inopportune."

The president was cheered when he said the idea of the league had come originally from republicans.

"When the Republicans take that road I take off my hat and follow," he continued, "and I don't care whether I lead or not."

The president reviewed the fleet from

THE NEW WORLD

Its Coming Is Certain, Says Lloyd George, and in It Labor Shall Have Just Reward; Indolence Alone Shall Suffer Want.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—[By the Associated Press.]—Premier Lloyd George has issued a message to the people of Great Britain in "The Future," which will be distributed free throughout the country on Monday. The premier says:

"Millions of gallant young men have fought for the new world. Hundreds of thousands died to establish it. If we fail to honor the promise given them we dishonor ourselves.

"What does the new world mean? What was the old world like? It was a world where toil for myriads of honest workers, men and women, purchased nothing better than squalor, penury, anxiety, wretchedness; a world scarred by slums, disgraced by sweating, where unemployment, through the vicissitudes of industry, brought despair to multitudes of humble homes; a world where, side by side with want, there was waste of the inexhaustible riches of the earth, partly through ignorance and want of forethought, partly through entrenched selfishness.

"If we renew the lease of that world, we shall betray the heroic dead. We shall be guilty of the basest perfidy that ever blackened a people's fame. Nay! We shall store up retribution for ourselves and our children.

"The old world must and will come to an end. No effort can shore it up much longer. If there be any who feel inclined to maintain it, let them beware lest it fall upon them and overwhelm them and their households in ruin.

"It should be the sublime duty of all, without thought of partisanship, to help in the building up of the new world, where labor shall have its just reward and indolence alone shall suffer want."

ARCHDUKE MAX COMING TO U. S. TO "GET RICH"

BY FARMER MURPHY.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]

VIENNA, Sept. 10, via Paris, Sept. 13.—A man has just returned from Switzerland, where he saw former Archduke Max, brother of the former Emperor Charles.

Max is living at Lucerne with his wife and child in two rooms. He complained to his friend that it was hard to get along in such cramped quarters when used to living in Belvidere palace at Vienna.

Max said he was out of funds. As soon as possible he is going to America to go into business to make money and live, or to get rich, if he can. As Max is still young there is a chance for him, if he can learn how to work, which his friends doubt. His wife is a daughter of Prince Conrad of Hohenlohe.

Big Texas Veteran Told to End Strike Riots

Macon, Ga., Sept. 13.—Warren McWilliams, six feet four, reared in Texas and just back from overseas where he was a sergeant in the 123d infantry, today was made chief of police with orders to suppress strike disorders in the cotton mill district after Chief Charles L. Bowden had been given three hours to get off the job.

Bowden was forced to resign by the civil service commission because of the charge that he sympathized with rioters.

McWilliams recently was appointed a patrolman and is said to be a member of a union.

BRITISH ADMIT DISORDERS IN CURRAGH CAMP

Labor of Kingdom Favors Fight of Islanders.

BULLETIN.

CURRAGH, Ireland, Sept. 13.—(United Press.)—The commander of the 5th dragoon guards admitted today that "quite a few" members of the regiment had mutinied and were now in prison awaiting trial. He denied a report that 210 of the men had engaged in the mutiny.

The Curragh of Kildare, as the district is called, is a level tract near the center of the county of Kildare. One of the largest British military camps in Ireland is located there.

GLASGOW, Sept. 13.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Trades' Union congress ended today.

James Henry Thomas, labor member of parliament, acting together with Robert Smillie, the miners' leader, moved an emergency resolution deprecating military rule in Ireland and declaring that the only solution of the Irish problem was through the method of self-determination by which the Irish people could work out their own salvation. The result expressed profound sympathy for the trades unionists "Irish brethren in the hour of repression."

The resolution was carried unanimously.

The congress adopted resolutions reaffirming the right of free speech and protesting against the arrest and deportation of alien trades union officials for alleged connection with bolshevism. The resolutions also expressed the belief in the necessity for continuing the control of food prices.

More Raids Are Made.

CORK, Sept. 13.—[By the Associated Press.]—The military and police raids which began yesterday in connection with the proclamation of the suppression of the Sinn Fein parliament and Sinn Fein organizations throughout Ireland were continued today.

During the morning the raiders proceeded to the house of David Kent, a Sinn Fein member of parliament, and searched the place. The raiders met with no opposition, the search proceeding without incident.

Admit Menace Is Grave.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—[By the United News.]—With British government raids continuing in Ireland, the situation was regarded tonight as more pregnant with dangerous possibilities than at any time since the "Easter revolution."

Sinn Fein officials were openly defiant, while government authorities made no effort to disguise their apprehension.

The one factor which encouraged belief that no general uprising might result was that the raids so far have tended to show the Sinn Feiners have only negligible supplies of arms and ammunition, and no artillery or airplanes whatever. In view of this, the belief was held that the Sinn Feiners would attempt no determined resistance at this time. It was realized, however, there was danger of extreme radicals acting blindly, with the result they would become martyrs, inflame their own communities, and bring on more deaths.

Says They Stand Firm.

Arthur Griffiths, acting head of the Sinn Fein, said today:

"No jails, bullets, or bayonets will prevent the dail eireann [Irish parliament] representatives from performing the duty with which the Irish people intrusted them.

"Lord French's proclamation outlawing the dail eireann and the raids now being conducted have aroused the people's enthusiasm and are helping our cause. French tried to prevent four-fifths of the people from carrying out their views. If the government proceeds with suppression of the dail eireann, Ireland's representatives will stand where they stand today, the world will get its best lesson in militarism, and America will see the effect of the government's consultation with its Belfast advisers.

"I was never more sanguine of Ireland's success. The government's action is a sign of weakness and panic."

Trouble for Ministry.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Irish question has added to the other troubles of the ministry and it seems that an appeal to the country in the form of a general election cannot long be delayed.

The virtually unanimous vote of the trades union congress at Glasgow for the nationalization of mines and the vote on the subject of withdrawing British troops from Russia are regarded as evidence of a very determined attitude on the part of labor against the government. It is pointed out that there are suspicions as to the government's intentions concerning Russia and conscription, and that the Glasgow congress declined clearly to condemn the policy of direct action, but only strategically sidetracked the decision.

The reconstruction of the cabinet is long overdue and has been delayed only because ministerial changes would involve by-elections, which, it is said, would almost certainly provide additional evidence that the tide of feeling in the country is running strongly against the government.

To Discuss Whole Situation.

It is understood that as soon as Premier David Lloyd George returns from France he intends to summon the inner cabinet to discuss the whole situation.

Arthur Henderson, in an interview on his success in Widness, said his victory was "an emphatic condemnation of the coalition government's policy" and of "the cynical political compromise upon which the government rests."

"I believe," he continued, "that the origin of the demand for a policy of direct action lies in the fact that the present parliament is felt to be wholly unrepresentative of the nation and is dominated by reactionary influences. This has involved the country in proceedings which are the negation of democracy. It is shown in developments in Russia, Hungary, and, near home, in Ireland, where the situation is obviously grave. Widness is a warning the government can not afford to ignore."

ASSAILS BRITISH TRICK

Washington, D. C., Sept. 13.—[Special.]—The Irish national bureau here, through its director, Daniel T. O'Connell, issued a statement today stating that the British action in suppressing the Irish parliament yesterday is a forerunner of "bloodshed, disorder, imprisonment, and courts martial," to be applied by England to the Irish people.

"The proclamation issued by Gen. French, lord lieutenant of Ireland, suppressing the Irish parliament," the statement says, "is fulfillment of the prediction made by the Irish national bureau two weeks ago that the cabled reports of 'assaults' on the soldier constables and other alleged disturbances were but the preliminaries to drastic British methods to throttle the cry for liberty that has swept through every city and town of Ireland and is being echoed in all parts of the world, particularly in America.

Insults Failed of Purpose.

"Unsuccessful in forcing the Irish people to resort to arms in resenting insults and blood baiting tactics, Gen. French now proclaims the Irish parliament a 'dangerous association.' So was the continental congress, formed by Washington, Jefferson, Patrick Henry, Adams, Hancock, and the American patriots who sought liberty.

"The British, when the Irish parliament was formed on Jan. 21, 1919, adopted a policy of ridiculing its strength and laughing at its right to voice the thoughts of a people striving for nationhood. They acted likewise when, in 1776, the declaration of independence was proclaimed by American 'rebels.'

Irish Patience and Restraint.

"England has found that President De Valera as a leader of men has in the face of grave provocation held the Irish patriots to a true course of appealing by constitutional arguments and free speech to the conscience of the world. They have not been driven by British methods to bloodshed and disorder, 'justifying' the use of machine guns, bombs, etc., by the English soldiers. The provocation has been great, but the patience and restraint of the Irish people has been greater. The sympathy of the world has been gaining steadily in favor of Ireland, particularly in America.

"Ireland's love for liberty has thrived on English ridicule. We may expect that England, now having changed her policy, will resort to old tactics—bloodshed, disorder, imprisonment, courts martial, suppression of habeas corpus, and the shooting of leaders as well as innocent women and children.

"America will insist on fair play for the members of the Irish parliament, and the 20,000,000 Americans of Irish blood will demand that none of the lives of these patriots be sacrificed to the old time English methods."

BIG MEETING AND PARADE TO AID IRISH FREEDOM

There will be a massmeeting in the interests of Irish freedom in St. Ann's church, Garfield boulevard and La Salle street, this afternoon, preceded by a parade which starts at 2 p. m. The meeting is under the auspices of the Chicago Friends of Irish Freedom in coöperation with various Roman Catholic organizations.

Judge Deery of Indianapolis, ex-governor Edward F. Dunne, Congressman William Mason, Mayor Thompson, and Capt. O'Hern, chaplain of the 108th ammunition and supply trains, formerly the 7th regiment, I. N. G., and Col. Henry J. Reilly are expected to speak. The Rt. Rev. Mgr. Edward Kelly will act as chairman.

The parade will form at Garfield boulevard and Halsted street, headed by the 7th, I. N. G., and its route will be Garfield boulevard, Princeton avenue, Fifty-ninth street, Wentworth avenue, Garfield boulevard to La Salle street entrance of the church.

France to Contribute to U. S. Monument

PARIS, Sept. 13.—[By the Associated Press.]—Notice was given in the chamber of deputies today that a credit of 1,000,000 francs ($200,000) will be asked by the government to continue the government's subscription to the Pointe de Grave monument, commemorating the first landing of American troops to take part in the great war, the first stone of which was laid with appropriate exercises Sept. 6.

BULLITT BARES RUSSIAN REPORT WILSON SCORNED

U. S. Peace Envoy Urged Truce with Soviet to End Bolshevism.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 13.—[Special.]—William C. Bullitt, adviser to the American peace commission, made public today the text of the report he made to the commission of his investigation of Russian conditions last winter, which report, it is charged, was held up by President Wilson until too late for action.

The report, referred to by Bullitt yesterday before the senate foreign relations committee, submitted for consideration of the peace commission the following conclusions:

"1. No government save a Socialist government can be set up in Russia today except by foreign bayonets, and any government so set up will fall the moment such support is withdrawn. The Lenine wing of the Communist party is today as moderate as any Socialist government which can control Russia.

Peace With Rebels Vital.

"2. No real peace can be established in Europe or the world until peace is made with the revolution. This proposal of the soviet government presents an opportunity to make peace with the revolution on a just and reasonable basis—perhaps a unique opportunity.

"3. If the blockade is lifted and supplies begin to be delivered regularly to soviet Russia a more powerful hold over the Russian people will be established than that given by the blockade itself—the hold given by fear that this delivery of supplies may be stopped. Furthermore, the parties which oppose the Communists in principle but are supporting them at present will be able to begin to fight against them.

"4. It is, therefore, respectfully recommended that a proposal following the general lines of the suggestion of the soviet government should be made at the earliest possible moment, such changes being made, particularly in article 4 and article 5, as will make the proposal acceptable to conservative opinion in the allied and associated countries."

Soviet Firmly in Saddle.

"The soviet form of government is firmly established," the report said of Russian political conditions. "Perhaps the most striking fact in Russia today is the general support which is given the government by the people in spite of their starvation. Indeed, the people lay the blame for their distress wholly on the blockade and on the governments which maintain it.

"Within the Communist party itself there is a distinct division of opinion in regard to foreign policy, but this disagreement has not developed personal hostility or open breach in the ranks of the party.

"Trotzky, the generals, and many theorists believe the Red army should go forward everywhere, until more vigorous intervention by the entente is provoked, which they, too, count upon to bring revolution in France and England.

Lenine More Moderate.

"Lenine, Tchitcherin, and the bulk of the Communist party, on the other hand, insist that the essential problem at present is to save the proletariat of Russia in particular and the proletariat of Europe in general from starvation, and assert that it will benefit the revolution but little to conquer all Europe if the government of the United States replies by starving all Europe.

"They advocate, therefore, the conciliation of the United States, even at the cost of compromising with many of the principles they hold most dear. And Lenine's prestige in Russia at present is so overwhelming that the Trotzky group is forced reluctantly to follow him.

"Lenine, indeed, as a practical matter, stands well to the right in the existing political life of Russia. He recognizes the undesirability, from the Socialist viewpoint, of the compromises he feels compelled to make, but he is ready to make the compromises.

Concessions to Allies.

"Among the more notable concessions he already has made are:

"The abandonment of his plan to nationalize the land and the adoption of the policy of dividing it among the peasants; the establishment of savings banks paying 3 per cent interest; the decision to pay all foreign debts; and the decision to give concessions if that shall prove to be necessary to obtain credit abroad.

"In a word, Lenine feels compelled to retreat from his theoretical position all along the line. He is ready to meet the western governments half way."

TREATY FOES JUBILANT

The final stage of the battle in the senate over the peace treaty will begin Monday with the foes of the pact immeasurably strengthened by the developments of the last few days. This was the view taken by opposition leaders today as they surveyed the results of the contest during the week.

The chief developments contributing to the opposition gains were:

The revelations of Mr. Bullitt that Secretary of State Lansing was heartily displeasd with the terms of the treaty.

The fact that Mr. Lansing did not repudiate the statements attributed to him by Mr. Bullitt and started off on a fishing trip.

G. A. R. Among "Antis."

The action of the G. A. R. at its annual convention yesterday at Columbus, O., in condemning the league of nations.

The tremendous receptions accorded to Senator Johnson of California, Senator Borah of Idaho, and Senator McCormick of Illinois in their attacks on the league in the middle west.

The hopes of the proponents of the league were at low ebb. Leaders frankly admitted that the president's trip in the west was not producing the results they had expected. While the chief executive was being made welcom in the middle western and far western cities, they said, he had not succeeded in bringing about the slightest change in their favor in the senate.

SCENE OF BIG BOLSHEVIK DEFEAT

Gen. Denikine reports a decisive victory over the bolsheviki before Tsaritsyn, on the Volga. Nine thousand prisoners were taken, as well as eleven guns and 100 machine guns. For the last week Wrangel's volunteer army has held the right wing against all attacks by the reds. The main thrust was supported by an armed flotilla on the Volga, and continued for three days before the bolsheviki broke. The bolsheviki closed in on the town from the south and southeast, as is shown by black arrows on the map, and were repulsed by a blow in the center.

2—Moscow again makes peace proposals to Letvia. Inter-Baltic conference at Riga now in session to consider plans for concerted action against bolsheviki. British, French, and Japanese to be consulted as large supplies for Lettish army arrive.

DECIES OPPOSES BRITISH POLICIES ON SINN FEINERS

New York, Sept. 13.—[Special.]—Many prominent Americans and Britons were included in the list of passengers on the Cunarder Aquitania, which arrived from England today. The vessel carried 491 persons in the first cabin, 210 in the second, and 487 in the third or steerage.

Lord and Lady Decies, formerly Miss Vivian Gould, arrived for a visit.

Lord Decies, who served as a colonel in the 7th regiment, South Irish Horse, and also was attached to the British control office in Ireland toward the end of the war, criticised England's attitude toward the Sinn Feiners. He expressed regret that the government had taken such a stand and said it only meant greater trouble.

Prominent among the passengers were Lady John Hubert Ward, daughter of Whitelaw Reid; Lady Herbert, formerly one of the Vanderbilts; Miss Mabel Choate, daughter of the late Joseph H. Choate; Miss Virginia Gildersleeve, dean of Barnard college; J. Hartley Manners and his wife, Laurette Taylor, and Maxine Elliott, who is to appear in two motion pictures with William Faversham.

KAISER'S CECILIA SIGNS HERSELF CROWN PRINCESS

AMERONGEN, Sept. 13.—The former crown princess of Germany, with her two sons, arrived here Friday and was received by the former emperor and empress. She will remain for two or three days.

On her way to Amerongen former Crown Princess Cecilia stopped for an hour at Amsterdam, where she visited the art museum. She signed the guests' book at the museum, "Cecilia, crown princess of Prussia."

During her stay in Amsterdam her children were taken for a visit to the zoo by the burgomaster.

When they passed through the gates of the Von Bentinck castle the children seemed in excellent spirits, and smiled happily.

Roumanians Rob Orphan Asylums of Hungarians

PARIS, Sept. 13.—[By the Associated Press.]—Advices of further looting in Hungary by the Roumanian troops were received today by the supreme council of the peace conference.

On Sept. 10 the Roumanians seized 71,425 pairs of shoes from the orphan asylums in Rudapest. Of these the great bulk were shipped to Roumania, only 8,000 pairs being left to the orphanage.

The orphanage society expressed the fear that these also would be taken under the guise of military requisitions, leaving the orphans shoeless for the winter.

Many other cases of looting were reported to the supreme council.

WASHINGTON NEWS —IN BRIEF—

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Washington Bureau of The Tribune.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 13.

DR. RUPERT BLUE, surgeon general of the United States, warns the public and authorities generally of the probable recurrence of the influenza epidemic this fall and urges preparedness as the best means to deal with it.

THE senate military affairs committee is practically agreed that the army reorganization bill must be scrapped and rewritten. They say that the method by which it centers all power in the president and general staff is the most militaristic and Prussianistic scheme of modern times and wholly foreign to the United States.

SECRETARY BAKER, informed of complaints that Chicago citizens cannot obtain army food, while wholesalers who are not supposed to get it at all, are hoarding it, has directed the zone supply director to make an investigation.

THE provision of the Cummins railroad bill making strikes of railroad workers illegal is denounced in a statement prepared by heads of the fourteen railroad employés' organizations in the United States. They say it would enforce arbitration and economic servitude upon the workers and would spell the birth of revolution in the United States.

OPPONENTS of the peace treaty in the senate believe their position has been strengthened by the revelations of W. C. Bullitt of the opposition to the pact expressed in Paris by Secretary Lansing and other members of the American peace commission.

INCREASES of allowances for disability are provided in a bill revising the war risk insurance act passed today by the house. Besides increasing allowances the measure is designed to care for various classes of soldiers and sailors who have failed to benefit from the act.

Caillaux, in Bad Health, Quits Prison for Hospital

PARIS, Sept. 13.—Joseph Caillaux, former premier, who has been in prison for more than a year charged with treasonable dealings with the enemy, was transferred to a private hospital at Neuilly this morning. His counsel early in the week requested that he be removed from prison on the ground that his health is so bad as to cause anxiety.

British Land 1,200 at Scutari in Troop Movement

LONDON, Sept. 13.—[By the Associated Press.]—British forces have been landed at Scutari, across the Bosporus from Constantinople. It is officially explained, however, that this was an ordinary troop movement and that only 1,200 men were placed on shore.

LETTS AGREE TO PARLEY AS REDS SUE FOR PEACE

Soviet Tires of War and Sends Wireless to Foreign Chief.

BULLETIN.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—The government of Letvia has accepted the offer of the Russian soviet government to begin peace negotiations, according to a Moscow wireless dispatch.

RIGA, Sept. 12, via London, Sept. 13.—The Russian soviet government again has made a peace proposal to Letvia, I have just been officially informed. Bolshevik Foreign Minister Tchitcherin late yesterday sent a wireless message from Moscow to Meierowibch, Lettish minister of foreign affairs, asking that discussions begin as soon as possible.

No reply has been sent by the Letvian government as yet, as the cabinet has to confer on the question, but in view of the presence of the Esthonian premier and foreign minister in Riga, it is probable that the opinion of the latter officials also will be taken.

Made Offer to Esthonia.

It was only about a week ago that the bolsheviki made a similar proposal to Esthonia, but on unsatisfactory terms. Inasmuch as one of the questions being discussed at the inter-Baltic conference here is unified action against the common enemy, it is likely that the opinion of Esthonians and Lithuanians will therefore be given consideration and that the allies' missions—British, French, and Japanese—will also be consulted.

It is an interesting coincidence that the bolsheviki peace proposal is made practically simultaneously with the arrival of large supplies of equipment for the Lettish army.

Captures 9,000 Reds.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—[By the Associated Press.]—The war office announces a decisive victory over the bolshevik forces at Tsaritsyn by Gen. Denikine, in which 9,000 prisoners, 11 guns, and 100 machine guns were taken.

Three bolshevik regiments surrendered and two others were destroyed. The announcement says:

"The right wing of Wrangel's volunteer army was engaged for the last week in a stubborn and successful defense of Tsaritsyn against repeated bolshevik attack from the northeast and south. The main attack was supported by an armed flotilla on the Volga and continued for three days. The enemy was finally repulsed, leaving 9,000 prisoners, 11 guns, and 100 machine guns. Three bolshevik regiments surrendered and two others were destroyed."

Reds Overwhelm Amur.

The whole Amur territory from Khabarovsk to Hoengyred, in eastern Siberia, has been cleared by the bolsheviki, according to a wireless report from Moscow. It is said that the bolshevik forces, aided by 200,000 Chinese troops, attacked the White guard.

MRS. WILSON TO PAY FOR CARE OF ARMENIAN GIRL

New York, Sept. 13.—A check for $180 from Mrs. Woodrow Wilson to shelter, feed, and clothe and educate one of the many orphans picked up by the American committee for Armenian and Syrian relief in the war ravaged lands of the near east, was announced as having been received by the committee here today.

The child, a girl, for whom the "first lady of the land" thus will become a Lady Bountiful, will be cared for in one of the orphanages established by the committee in what it calls "a dead land."

INJURED IN ELEVATOR; DIES.

Fred A. Dolke, 52 years old, 3116 Lowe avenue, died in Mercy hospital yesterday of injuries received when he was crushed in an elevator. Dolke, employed as night watchman at Mandel Brothers' store, was loading some boxes on an elevator at the tenth floor when the elevator started to descend, causing one of the boxes to fall on him.

CABLE NEWS IN BRIEF

From Tribune Correspondents.

PARIS—Henry Wales cables that Col. House's sudden return to Paris instead of sailing home from London causes comment of friction over Frank Polk's conduct of the American peace commission, due to friction particularly with Roumania and Hungary and the deal granting east Thrace to Greece. Mr. Polk said that Col. House's arrival had no special significance, but it is known President Wilson cabled House at London to return to Paris. Those familiar with Col. House's work in Paris believe he is the best fitted to represent the United States, as he always worked smoothly with the foreign diplomats.

RIGA—Arthur Mann says that despite the fierce warfare on the Lettish front, where the towns are a scene of ruin, the crops are smiling, though a big fruit crop is going to waste.

WARSAW—Thomas Stewart Ryan quotes George Ivanovski, retiring Polish minister of labor, as optomistic despite the big bolshevik element in Poland. The Germans are trying to poison the Poles with red ideas. Poland's problems are coal supply, railroad rolling stock, cotton and wool supply, and employment of idle.

REVAL—Richard Henry Little sees no evidence of the $350,000,000 which England is reported to have spent among the White Russians. The latter's soldiers beg America for some prunes and rice instead of nothing but white flour.

BUDAPEST—John Clayton says the allies have lost Hungary a chance for liberal rule by failing to recognize the Heinrich government and permitting Friedrich to remain in power.

MRS. PANKHURST SAYS BOLSHEVIKI DEGRADE WOMEN

New York, Sept. 13.—Just at the time when the women of the world have battled their way to the conquest of the ballot, have even gone to jail and starved for it, up rises the menacing head of bolshevism and threatens to rob them of its privileges.

Thus did Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, British suffrage leader, express herself today when she arrived in New York with the announced and avowed intention of waging war on the bolsheviki.

"The women of the world must fight bolshevism to a finish," said Mrs. Pankhurst, a surprisingly meek, mild mannered woman in appearance. "In the first place, it strikes directly at their own welfare. Russia is an example of this. Bolshevik agents may deny it, but the nationalization of women has been practiced there. I have proof of that. Bolshevism also will rob women of their family life, and it will take from them their spiritual ideals. It is the grossest form of materialism."

FRENCH CHAMBER NOT TO ADJOURN BY ELECTION DAY

PARIS, Sept. 12.—Relayed.—All indications point that the eleventh legislature of the third French republic, whose mandate expired in May, 1918, will not be dissolved in time to proceed with the elections on Oct. 26, the tentative date semi-officially agreed upon.

Since the deputies resumed their sittings on Aug. 26, after two weeks' vacation, little headway has been made in clearing up the voluminous order of the day confronting them. With the ratification of the treaty a foregone conclusion, the deputies of all parties have busied themselves with the more personal matter of the electoral law as affecting the coming elections. Numerous amendments tending to postpone until 1923, or render ineffective, proportional representation have been proposed and voted down after lengthy speeches and tumultuous sessions.

The climax was reached today when Deputy Verance proposed an amendment to the electoral law of July 12, 1919, whereby the campaign literature, posters and propaganda of all candidates shall be paid for by the government.

DISABLE KAISER, BUT HEED LAW, ITALIAN VIEW

League May Provide Legal Punishment for Future Cases.

ROME, Sept. 13.—[By the Associated Press.]—Luigi Luzzatti, former premier, presented to the chamber of deputies a report to the parliamentary commission intrusted with the examination of the peace treaty with Germany.

Concerning the trial of former Emperor William the report says:

"Crimes attributed to the former emperor were not contemplated in any penal code.

"Nobody can be called to answer and be punished for acts which, when committed, did not constitute a crime contemplated by law.

"The society of nations may establish for the future the criminal status of offenses against international morals or disregard of treaties, lay down the procedure for judging the culprit, and provide for the penalty, but Count Hohenzollern's accusers can not appoint judges, and it is impossible to ask Holland to extradite her guest for political crimes not within the purview of present treaties.

"The former emperor must be placed in a condition where he can do no further harm, but the eternal ideals which guarantee public and private law must be saved."

SAYS PEACE PACT IS NOT VIOLATED BY GERMAN CODE

BERLIN, Germany, Sept. 11.—[By the Associated Press.]—Delayed.—Dr. Hugo Preuss, who drafted the new German constitution, recently promulgated at Weimar, in a statement today to the Associated Press severely arraigns the demand made by the peace conference that Germany must amend the constitution so as to prevent Austrian representation in German parliamentary affairs.

"The way in which our opponents brought up the matter shows they are following entirely different purposes than the clearing up of doubtful legal questions," said Dr. Preuss. "In article 178 of the new German constitution is this clause: 'The terms of the treaty of peace signed at Versailles will not be affected by this constitution.' This practically excludes any collision between the peace terms and the constitution, for if there should be any provisions of the constitution in contradiction of the peace terms, the latter would take precedence.

"Article 61 (providing for the admission of Austrian members of the reichstag) does not stand as a formal contradiction of the peace terms. The German government explained, in discussing this point, that Germany did not desire to violate the Austrian frontier, but that if Austria wanted to bring about a state of unity with Germany the latter could not obligate herself to oppose the wishes of 'German brothers in Austria.' Article 61 does not forcibly violate the Austrian frontier. Rather, everything is left to the free initiative of Austria on the basis of national self-determination."

30,000 Serb Children Die on Retreat to Coast in 1915

Washington, D. C., Sept. 13.—Of the 35,000 Serbian children sent with the Serbian army in the 1915 retreat only 5,000 survived, according to figures verified by American Red Cross workers and forwarded to national headquarters here. Most of these returned to their homes to find themselves orphans, and the Red Cross is seeking to aid them by the establishment of orphanages and other institutions.

When the Serbs realized they must evacuate their country and retreat to the coast boys between the ages of 14 and 18 were called to the colors.

DROPS DEAD IN HOTEL LA SALLE.

Heart disease is believed to have been the cause. Howard E. Hitchcock Jr., a son, who is in the adjusting department of Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., was notified.

ENGLAND WANTS U. S. FRIENDSHIP, DR. HOUGH SAYS

World Peace Hinges Upon Such Relations, Head of N. W. U. States.

New York, Sept. 13.—[Special.]—President Lynn Harold Hough of Northwestern university arrived in New York today on the Adriatic. During the summer Dr. Hough has been speaking in outstanding churches in England and has been in conference with many educational and intellectual leaders.

To the question regarding the attitude of England toward America he said:

"The typical Englishman of serious and informed mind believes very profoundly in Anglo-American friendship. Many men, such as Mr. Fisher, the president of the English board of education, have been ready to express their belief that it is the hope of the world.

Anxious Over Economic Phase.

"There is widespread anxiety about the economic situation. With a great debt to America and the balance of trade the wrong way, many Englishmen are very grave as they speak of the outcome. In England, with a population of more than 40,000,000, there is the possibility of producing food for something like 13,000,000.

"The rest of the food must, in the long run, come from exchange for English products which other countries desire. And a wrong balance of trade in this situation is a serious matter.

Refuse to Be Downcast.

"Some men with a dash of adventure in their estimate of the situation take the veiw that the dangers are overestimated and that England will quickly recuperate.

"It is probable that a matter about which little has been said will influence the actual outcome. England has had a long and successful experience in international banking, and before even resourceful Americans learn the psychological trick of it Britain will probably be competing with America on more even terms. And this is to the advantage of America.

"No business man able to look into the future would want to break down England's fundamental economic strength, even if such a thing were possible."

British Common Sense.

When asked about the labor unrest in England Dr. Hough replied:

"At times this summer the situation was grave. But an American needs to remember several things if he would estimate it wisely.

"The first is that there is a fundamental common sense in English character which keeps fighting, but somehow does not go to tragic extremes. England has a way of pausing just on the brink of what seemed about to be a bloody revolution. It has a national genius for wise compromise.

"The second thing is that the problem has to do with English workers. Our problem is infinitely complicated in America by the many races and the many languages involved.

"In the third place for all the vigorous language there is a curious appearance of understanding sympathy under the hostility, due to the community of interests and unity for Britain's welfare."

POLICE LOCKOUT BRINGS FEAR OF GENERAL STRIKE

Boston's Attention Now Turns to Unions Still to Vote on Tieup.

Boston, Mass., Sept. 13.—It is a fight to a finish. The places formerly held by striking policemen are vacant. New men will be recruited. The request of Samuel Gompers that the strikers be reinstated is refused.

The places will be offered to ex-soldiers at higher pay as soon as the civil service commission grants the authority asked by Commissioner Curtis under state law.

This is the attitude of Police Commissioner Curtis, and he has the backing of Governor Coolidge.

Attention now is turned to the Boston firemen, electrical workers, telephone operators, car men and other organizations affiliated with the policemen's union. A general strike has been threatened and if the threat is made good the most widespread labor trouble ever experienced in New England is imminent.

Gov. Coolidge was in conference with labor leaders this morning. He had earlier indicated that he would not interfere with any action decided upon by Commissioner Curtis.

Soldier Kills Civilian.

Raymond Gaist of Dorchester was shot and killed when he resisted a soldier near the corner of Tremont and Boylston streets. In the excitement that followed and while the troops were dispersing the crowds another shot was fired, wounding Mrs. Mary Jaques of Dorchester, who was passing, in the knee.

James McCourt, a bystander, was accidentally shot and slightly wounded n an attack on Robert P. Nolan, a volunteer policeman, in the South End district this morning.

Governor Answers Gompers.

The governor's reply to Samuel Gompers that the striking policemen be allowed to return, pending the conference called by President Wilson Oct. 6, concluded by saying:

"I shall support the commissioner in the execution of law and the maintenance of order."

Acting upon the advice of Attorney General Wyman that the offices formerly held by the police who deserted their posts have been rendered vacant, it was announced at the commissioner's office this noon, the police commissioner would proceed to fill these vacancies.

The commisioner's statement, in part, follows:

"I have submitted to the mayor of Boston recommendations for immediate adoption relating to a revision of salaries for the lowest paid members of the police force, and I shall later submit recommendations for a revision of the entire salary list.

Jobs for ex-Soldiers.

"I have further requested the civil service commissioner to grant me authority to appoint to the police force any veterans as defined by chapter 150 of the general acts of 1919, whether such veteran be a resident of Boston or not.

"The attorney general has ruled that such veteran must be a resident of the commonwealth, but need not be a resident of the city of Boston."

The governor met Frank H. McCarthy, Boston organizer for the A. F. of L., and other labor officials today and afterwards issued a statement which, in part, follows:

"The telegram of President Gompers was discussed.

Curtis Has Full Power.

"I told the committee that the matter suggested in the telegram was entirely in the hands of the police commissioner. I told them the question of whether the men who had not reported for duty were still policemen was a question of law and fact on which I should be guided by the opinion of the attorney general."

Commissioner Curtis, after refusing to meet the labor men whom the governor had seen, later consented to see on Monday Mr. McCarthy, President O'Donnell of the Central Labor unions, and President McInnis of the Policemen's union.

The Massachusetts branch of the American Legion today announced the adoption of resolutions declaring against sympathetic strikes in aid of the police as an abrogation of civil rights and liberty.

Would Curb Public Employes.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 13.—[Special.]—Strikes by policemen in the District of Columbia and by all government employés would be prohibited by a bill to amend the statutes of 1912. The new bill was introduced in the house today by Representative Blanton of Texas.

CHICAGOANS LEAD MOBS?

Hints that Chicago and Detroit radicals instigated much of the rioting in Boston streets were contained in a telegram to local officials of the United States bureau of investigation from Chief Burke of the same bureau at Boston, asking for the names and addresses of the Chicago reds who recently left for Boston.

It is said leaders of the mobs that wrecked and looted stores were strangers who had appeared in the city during the last week.

GOMPERS WARNS BOSTON OFFICIALS; UPHOLDS POLICE

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, placed the entire blame for the Boston police strike on Police Commissioner Curtis in a statement issued here tonight.

Mr. Gompers' formal statement follows:

"The unionizing of policemen is not of the seeking of the American Federation of Labor.

"Their voluntary organization and insistent demand for charters is the natural reflex of futile individual attempts to improve working conditions. Therefore the American Feedration of Labor was and is called upon to meet a situation created by incapable, negligent, or autocratic municipal authorities.

"When men are underpaid or made to work under bad conditions they seek redress. Unable to right their grievances or obtain better working conditions from their immediate superiors, they look for redress elsewhere. This was the case in Boston.

"When policemen accept charters from the American Federation of Labor it is with the distinct understanding that strike action will not be resorted to and no obligation is assumed which in any way conflicts with their oaths or duty.

"Unfortunate and regrettable as the strike of the Boston policemen was, surely sound public opinion will make the authorities in Boston admit and share their own full responsibility for it.

"The situation in which the policemen find themselves today was provoked and practically forced upon them by the autocratic action of Police Commissioner Curtis, who at any time might have honorably settled the dispute by such action as is naturally expected of a public official in his responsible position. Even now, vested with individual autocratic authority, with which even the governor states he has no power to interfere, he declares the places of approximately 1,400 policemen vacant.

"Surely there is some weight of justice in Boston that will prevent this individual, whose vision and interests probably do not extend beyond the scope of the Boston police area, from openly antagonizing the great American labor movement and making the work of its officers to lead along sound and progressive lines most difficult, if not impossible.

"If the authorities give no consideration to the human side of the question or to the advice and suggestion which I had the honor to make, then whatever betide is upon the head of the authorities responsible therefor."

MINERS APPROVE U. S. ACTION FOR CHEAPER LIVING

Cleveland, O., Sept. 13.—The convention of the United Mine Workers of America today approved legislation such as this week passed congress carrying heavy penalties to curb the profiteering.

The convention rejected a proposal for an economic commission to fix prices for all commodities of daily use.

It also turned down the idea of congressional legislation reducing food and clothing prices by 25 per cent under penalty of confiscation of the property of all those violating the law.

Another suggestion, that of the death penalty for food profiteers, was rejected.

A resolution introduced by Negro miners, but supported by the entire convention, demanded legislation making lynching and mob violence federal offenses.

No time will be lost in organizing the alliance with the four great railroad brotherhoods for joint political and industrial action to bring about the nationalization of railways and mines.

The miners' representatives and the heads of the four big railroad brotherhoods will meet Oct. 1 to discuss their alliance.

"We have not a chance in the world to pass the Plumb bill through the present congress," Glenn E. Plumb informed the miners this morning.

RETURNED NOTE INDICATES 'DEAD' SOLDIER LIVES

Anne Malooly, looking through her tears upon a letter she had written to her soldier sweetheart—officially reported dead—and which had come back to her unclaimed, suddenly saw a rainbow.

She saw on the back of the envelope the words, "Casuale 478, Central P. O. 5723."

"He is not dead," she cried, "but only wounded."

She took the letter to officers familiar with the markings of the French army postal officials and her statemen was confirmed.

"He's still alive, somewhere in France," she said. "I showed the letter to his mother and she has gone across the ocean to find him. Soon he'll be back and there will be a wedding day."

Anne lives at 1629 Ballou street. Her fiancé is Private P. J. Monaghan, who was a farmer of Ivesdale, Ill., before he went to war. He enlisted in Company G, 47th infantry.

Mine Workers Indorse Plumb Railway Scheme

Cleveland, O., Sept. 13.—The United Mine Workers' convention today indorsed the Plumb plan for the nationalization of railroads, pledged the support of the miners' organization to obtain its enactment, and invited the railroad brotherhoods to join with them in an alliance for joint action, to be later extended into an economic alliance with labor organizations in other basic industries. The convention's action was almost unanimous.

PROFITABLE STUNTS

The "Oh-Key-Oh" field day of Swift & Co., which was held yesterday afternoon in Comiskey park, netted between $1,500 and $2,000 for THE TRIBUNE free ice fund.

The field day was given not only for charitable purposes, but as a welcome home celebration for Swift employés who served in the war. There was a review of men in khaki and blue, and girls in yeomanette and nurse uniforms.

There was also a chicken race, funny stunts, games, and athletic events, and 50,000 tickets were sold. Warsavings stamps and thrift stamps were the prizes.

UNVEIL STATUE OF JOAN OF ARC AT FORT TODAY

When Arthur Kirk was discharged from the army hospital at Fort Sheridan he promised his comrades he would come back with a testimonial of his gratitude to the hospital service.

He is going back today with his family and his friend, the Rev. William Ryan of Everett. They have given the hospital an heroic statue of Joan of Arc, which is to be unveiled at high mass in the Knights of Columbus chapel. Capt. George F. McCarthy, chaplain, and the Knights of Columbus under General Supervisor Thomas F. O'Connell have made the arrangements.

Chaplain McCarthy, who celebrated mass Dec. 13 last at Domrey, France, at the altar where Joan of Arc was baptized and made her first communion, and who prayed then that President Wilson would be enabled to lead in the establishment of world justice, will sing the mass today.

A choir of twenty-five young men from the Quigley Preparatory seminary will sing in the hospital wards.

Police Chief Sympathizer in Strike Forced to Quit

Macon, Ga., Sept. 13.—Police Chief Bowden, charged with sympathizing with rioting union strikers in the cotton mill troubles here, was today given three hours in which to resign by the civil service commission.

Bowden resigned before the limit was up. One union organizer and two rioters have been put in jail and citizens are guarding them with riot guns against threats of liberation. The mayor has announced that the civil authorities will protect the mill operatives.

Court Enjoins Women from Coaxing Miners to Strike

Danville, Ill., Sept. 13.—Writs issued by Judge George W. English of the United States District court have been served on fifty-three persons, some of them women, at Marissa, St. Clair county, enjoining them from participating in the insurgent activities of the coal miners of that region by marching from one mine to another and coaxing or threatening miners found at work.

GHOSTLY CHECK WALKS BACK FROM FIRE OF '71

The past delivered up a ghost yesterday. In fact, the ghost walked.

Back in the fall of '71, when Hi Cost was not yet a citizen and auto accidents along the Boul Mish were very—O very—rare, Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicked over the well known lamp and ignited Chicago, Ill. Among other ruins was the five story building belonging to Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co. on the property now occupied by the Boston store.

A policy for $4,320 in the Irving Fire Insurance company was among the many documents in the old safe. It is now yellow… with age and the insurance company has long since gone into the receiver's hands on account of losses sustained in the big fire.

But yesterday a small check, a partial payment on the insurance due, wandered through the mail to the hands of J. T. Pirie. Only one employé of the days of '71 was there to greet it—James C. Rogers, head of the wholesale fur department. He dropped a reminiscent tear and murmured:

"Alas, poor jack. I knew you well. When you left the old town in the days before the war you were worth a hundred cents on every dollar. And now you paltry kale, you come back with not one-half the worth you used to have. O tempora, O mores!"

Demobilization Decimates Crews of Atlantic Fleet

Washington, D. C., Sept. 13.—Demobilization of the navy has demoralized the Atlantic fleet so far as man power is concerned, it was said today at the navy department.

Scores of battleships, cruisers, destroyers, and other vessels are moored at navy yards with crews so greatly reduced that in many cases it is difficult and in some cases impossible to keep up steam.

Only two battleships of the Atlantic fleet have anywhere near full crews.

Arrested as Fugitive on Charge of Moonshining

Frank Johnson, 35 years old, Winthrop Harbor, Ill., was arrested yesterday by Deputy Marshal William H. Streater on a fugitive warrant issued at Asheville, N. C. According to the warrant Johnson was indicted by the federal grand jury in Asheville in 1916 on a charge of operating an illicit still.

ALDERMEN WANT POLICE STRIKES BARRED BY LAW

Majority of City Fathers Favor Constitutional Provision.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

Shall the new Illinois constitution prohibit strikes among police?

A majority of the Chicago aldermen favor barring police strikes by a constitutional provision. A large percentage of them are strong union labor advocates.

Some would include strikes among firemen and others would also embrace all city employés.

All of the aldermen who attended the special council meeting yesterday —more than forty—were asked their opinions, in view of the Boston police strike and its results to date.

Three aldermen opposted a constitutional provision. Mulcahy thought that "a copper should have all the privileges of other workingmen." He continued: "I voted against this constitutional convention twice. It is going to be a slam against organized labor."

Useless, Says Fisher.

Smith said that a constitutional prohibition would be useless. Fisher, who believes it would be the proper and desirable function of the legislature to pass statutes in prevention of strikes among police and other governmental officials who are sworn to perform their prescribed duties, said that the subject should not be dealt with in the constitutional convention as properly a part of the fundamental organic law of the state.

All the others said they desired a constitution which would prohibit strikes among policemen.

"I'm for union labor first, last and all the time, employ nothing else," said Madderom, "but the police should be prohibited from striking."

Wants City Employés Barred.

"Prohibit every municipal employé from striking," said Toman. "The clerks went on their strike the last day special assessments were payable and left women with children in their arms waiting to pay their taxes."

"This Boston strike is deplorable," said Haderlein. "Let the policeman quit if he doesn't like his job."

"Prohibit police strikes? Positively," said Kunz. "Prohibit all city officials from striking."

"Let them resign. If they strike, punish them," commented Watson.

"It's an outrageous shame for police to strike," said Eaton. "Our only salvation is the firemen, policemen and soldiers."

"I'm unalterably opposed to police strikes," said Passmore. "But, of course, I want them to have good wages and good hours."

"I am always for union conditions," said Horne, "but under no circumstances for a police strike."

Should Go Through With It.

"The man who takes an oath should go through with it," commented Furman.

Louis Anderson also favored a constitutional provision. He said: "A policeman's paramount duty and first concern is to obey the constitution. That's his oath. Put it in the constitution."

"I'm union from soup to nuts, but I don't think the coppers should go on a strike," said Franz.

Link's view is: "The president was right. A police strike is an intolerable crime against civilizaton. The same should be said of firemen."

"A policeman, so far as the public is concerned, is in the same position as a soldier or a sailor in the navy," said Capitain.

"They take an oath to preserve law and order."

Public Must Pay.

"When there are strikes and riots the public must pay," said Bowler, "yet the public pays the police to preserve law and order. Something should be done with a policeman who repudiates his oath of office and quits, letting lawlessness reign."

"One oath is enough for a policeman," said Dorney. "No outside oaths go with me."

"Any one connected with city service who goes on a strike should be discharged and punished," said Krumdick.

"Absolutely, the constitution should prohibit police strikes," said Kenna.

"That's right," added Coughlin, "but I'd compel city employés to arbitrate hours and working conditions."

"I would require all grievances to be submitted to arbitration before a strike is declared whether in a private or public institution," said Armitage.

Should Be Punished.

Pretzel—"The man in city service who repudiates his promise and obligation should be punished."

Scott Hogan—"The constitutional convention should consider the subject. It is very serious."

Woodhull—"Every official sworn to do his duty should obey that oath as long as he is an official."

Adamowski—"Every one wants police strikes prohibited."

A. O. Anderson—"The subject is sufficiently important to be a part of the constitution."

Kavanagh—"Put it in the constitution."

Clark—"Police strikes should be prevented."

McNichols—"I want the police to get a living wage, and I don't want them to strike."

A few weak kneed aldermen thought that their holds on their jobs forbade them to express their opinions on something which President Wilson described as "an intolerable crime against civilization."

Hartz Was Only "Lost" in Milwaukee, It Appears

La Crosse, Wis., Sept. 13.—Lieut. Col. Hartz, flying the Martin bombing plane around the rim of the country, landed here this afternoon after a successful flight from Milwaukee, where he was delayed several days. The plane was due to leave here during the afternoon, to stop at Minneapolis.

LABOR DEMANDS MENACE RULE OF LLOYD GEORGE

May Avert Fall by Forming Nationalization Cabinet.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

LONDON, Sept. 13.—It seems entirely possible that the Lloyd George government may be upset in the next few weeks on the question of nationalization of the mines.

The trade union congress has declared by 4,478,000 votes to 77,000 in favor of immediate nationalization and in favor of compelling the government to grant this demand. The method of compulsion is not stated, but all signs point to a threat at least of a national strike, not only of the miners, but including all industries. All depends on the premier's reply to the officials of congress who are instructed to wait on the premier at the earliest possible moment and to obtain a plain yes or no reply.

May Form Labor Government.

It is suggested a way out for the premier lies in a dissolution of the present government and the formation of a new coalition, including a large element of labor, the new government to be pledged to nationalization. I am informed that Mr. Lloyd George may not be averse to such a solution, as he has been becoming tired of dictation by his Tory associates in the present coalition.

It is possible he may disclose his policy in his first public speech after his holidays, which will be made at City temple, the famous London church of Fort Newton, which has an American pastor, on Sept. 17. I am told he intends then to make a strong appeal for the cooperation of labor in the development of the government policy.

Prices Keep Up.

Meanwhile England is plunging along without much modification of wartime conditions.

Americans arriving in London tell me there is a general impression abroad in the United States that American staple goods are being dumped in England and sold at lower prices than at home, but this is not true.

Ford automobiles, for instance, are sold here at $1,250—that is, when they are sold at all, for it is impossible to secure delivery for many months ahead.

Standard typewriters sold at home for $100 cannot be bought here for less than $125 or $150. American shoes of the kind which used to sell for $4 a pair at home cost $12.50, or even more, and are hard to get at that. American hosiery, which used to come freely into this market, is unprocurable. American patent medicines are sold here, but are very expensive. The rule English prices are 50 per cent over home prices and the same applies to American toilet preparations, such as fancy soaps, tooth pastes, toilet creams.

Cannot Get Goods.

Harry Gordon Selfridge, formerly of Chicago, who runs the largest and most successful general store in the British capital, said he didn't know of a single line of goods being dumped in England from America.

"The whole trouble," Mr. Selfridge said, "is to get goods at all. The home demand is so great that American manufacturers do not seem anxious for foreign business. Of course, a man may occasionally have a little jag of stuff that he sells below cost, but that's not dumping."

SEIZE NEIGHBOR, NAIL MARKED, AS WIDOW'S SLAYER

Leoma C. Palmer Is Held; Witnesses Tell of Trouble.

night?" the detectives, reinforced by Chief Sweeney, asked.

Offers an Alibi.

"I took my wife to the city and we saw the show at the Hippodrome."

Q.—What else did you do? A.—We had a little lunch. Then we went home.

Q.—What time did you get back in Maywood? A.—About 12, I guess. I'm not sure of the time.

Q.—What happened then? A.—We met a friend of mine riding a bicycle near Twenty-second and Oak.

Palmer then told who the friend was. His name was suppressed for investigation.

Q.—Then what did you do? A.—My wife walked ahead and I walked with my friend about 100 feet behind, talking with him. I told my wife I would get some ice cream, as we usually have something to eat.

Q.—Did you get the ice cream? A.—No, we went to bed.

Blames Scratches on Wife.

Q.—Where did you get those scratches on your face and wrist? A.—I had a fight with my wife and she scratched me.

Palmer was asked what he did for a living.

"I haven't worked since I came here about five months ago. I have over a thousand dollars in the bank," he said.

Stuhl was questioned. He shed no light on the movements of his son-in-law. Then the police took Mrs. Palmer to the station. She was grilled for over an hour.

One Discrepancy.

The authorities declared that only on one material point did her story vary from that of her husband. When asked where they had the lunch before returning from the city, she looked surprised.

"Lunch? We didn't eat," she is reported to have said. "That is—I—I don't remember if we did."

She, too, told of the trip to the city, of walking home from the Madison street car line, of meeting the friend of her husband, and of the suggestion that he go and get some ice cream.

Later the point concerning the ice cream was put up to her.

"Did your husband get the ice cream?" she was asked.

"Yes, that is—I mean no," she said.

Says She Gave Scratches.

Q.—How did Louis get those scratches? A.—Didn't he tell you?

Q.—We didn't ask you that. How did he happen to get scratched up? A.—Well, he teased me and I did it. He's a torment at times.

Q.—You mean to say you scratched him all over the face and hands simply because he teased you? A.—Yes; he teased me pretty hard.

Weeps at News of Arrest.

She broke into tears when her husband's arrest was mentioned.

"It can't be true," she cried. "It can't be true. I know he didn't do it. He was with me all the time. Louis couldn't have committed this crime and it is a shame to charge him with it."

"What did you do on Wednesday afternoon and night?" she was asked.

"We went to the loop. During the afternoon we went through the stores and visited some friends with offices in the Woolworth building.

"At night we went to the show at the Hippodrome."

Spent Evening in Loop.

Q.—What time was this. A.—I don't know. I don't remember any particular time.

Q.—Well, about what time? A.—About 8, I guess. We saw part of the first show and then the rest of the second.

Q.—Then what did you do? A.—We went home.

Q.—How? A.—We caught a No. 7 car at State and Van Buren streets and changed for the Maywood Madison street car.

Q.—What then? A.—We walked home. Met a friend on the way. But we didn't stop. Went in and went to bed. How could he have killed any one when I was with him?

She burst into tears anew.

Says Husband Is Wealthy.

She was asked about the reputed wealth of her husband.

"He is wealthy," she said. "His father was a brother of Potter Palmer of Chicago. His father and mother are dead. Our home is in Los Angeles, and we were getting ready to go back. My father, a widower, was also going, and my sister, Minnie."

"How about the transaction concerning the horse?" was the question.

"Every cent owed Mrs. Brown was paid on this horse. My father got stung when he bought it, and he couldn't sell it. But that was Mrs. Brown's fault. He had a customer and she queered the deal. When he did manage to sell it he sent the rest of the money over by Louis. That's the cause of all this."

Faints After Questioning.

Friends of Mrs. Palmer counseled her not to talk further. She stood up to leave the porch upon which the interview had been held and fainted away. It was some time before she recovered consciousness and a physician was called.

According to the neighbors, both of the Palmers have been married before, and each had two children by the previous marriage. Stories of his supposed wealth were common gossip in the neighborhood, although none had heard of the Potter Palmer relationship alleged. One report had it that he had said he owned three automobiles and two mansions in the west.

Chief Believes Case Cleared.

Chief Sweeney was reticent about the case. He did say, however, that he thought the murder had been cleared up.

"If the case against Palmer falls down the murder isn't going to be solved," said the chief, who had spent night and day on the job since Thursday, when the bruised body was found with a stocking tied around the neck.

"At 10 a. m. Sunday I will make a statement. It will either clear or condemn Palmer. I won't say which now. But I think we have the right man. There are a number of angles to be checked.

"I certainly will not let any one talk to him."

The police planned to take the suspect today to the morgue where the body of Mrs. Brown lies and have him view it in the hope that he will break down and confess.

The chief decided to stay on the job all night to make sure that his orders to this effect were carried out.

Counsel Refused Interview.

One of those who asked to talk with Palmer was Attorney Jacob E. Dittus, sent to the station by the suspect's folks. When Dittus made his demand, the chief is supposed to have threatened to take the man to a Chicago police station. This seemed to satisfy the attorney, who agreed to wait until today. Dittus refused to talk to reporters.

Planned to Leave Village.

Both Palmer and Mrs. Brown would have been out of Maywood before the end of the coming week, if the murder had not occurred.

Palmer had intended to go to Los Angeles, his home, taking his wife, their children, his father-in-law, and his wife's sisters with him. He was unknown in the suburb until five months ago, when his arrival to attend the funeral of his mother-in-law created a furore of village gossip in which he figured as "the rich young fellow from the west."

Mrs. Brown, too, had planned on going. As in the Palmer home, her furniture had been packed and the widow of the late Rev. Nelson J. Brown intended to leave for the exactly opposite point of the continent, New Brunswick, N. J., where the relatives of her late husband live.

Two Days' Absence Unnoted.

Nothing was seen of the aged woman from Tuesday until Thursday, but this was not taken as foreboding by her neighbors.

Thursday night Mrs. Grace Schroeder, daughter of John Case, from whom Mrs. Brown was buying the cottage at 201 South Twenty-first avenue, called to collect a monthly installment.

No one answered the door bell, so Mrs. Schroeder walked back and found the kitchen door ajar. She walked in, a l on the floor, with the head covered by a rug, was Mrs. Brown's body. Bruises were numerous on her face, her nose was broken, her forehead scarred, and a black stocking tied around her neck as a noose. She had been strangled.

Robbery Motive Doubted.

Her trunk had been rifled and its contents scattered about. Her slayers had upset the furnishings which remained in the house, but it was thought strange that none of her money or jewelry was taken by the marauders.

This led the police to the theory that robbery was not the real motive for the killing, although the slayer had apparently intended to make it seem so. The idea that a moron had attacked her was dispelled by an examination.

The detectives then set about to find a motive which might have led a man to engage in a quarrel and fight with the aged woman, ending in her death. The diary furnished a possible instance in the horse sale.

When this was connected with the stories of the women who saw men running down Twenty-second avenue, the block west of the street upon which the Brown home was situation, toward the Palmer home, the authorities were convinced they had cleaned up their case. The arrest of Palmer and several of his remarks only served to strengthen this last night.

The news of this action spread around the gossipy village like wildfire. Persons entirely strange to one another stopped on street corners to discuss the case. Those who lived near the scene of the crime were especially avid.

The police announced that three other "suspects," arrested early yesterday, were wanted on an entirely different charge. The arrest of Palmer, therefore, was the first to be made in the case.

LAKE FRONT PLAN IS PROTESTED AS TRADE MENACE

Engineer Randolph Says Beautification Scheme Will Curb Industry.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

Isham Randolph has filed a protest against the proposed lake front development plan with Col W. V. Judson, district federal engineer in Chicago.

Mr. Randolph, former engineer of railroads and the sanitary district, has such a reputation for ability and integrity that his opposition is substantial. It may be a menace to the program.

He is opposed to any park development between Sixteenth and Forty-first streets other than a drive 200 feet wide, and this he would prefer to have west of the Illinois Central railroad rather than east. He desires the entire area between the two named streets be devoted to harbor and kindred purposes.

To indicate the seriousness of Mr. Randolph's expression is this statement by him, evidently referring to the government's refusal seven years ago to grant a permit:

"My views, as hereinbefore expressed, have been laid before the war department, and they have seemingly coincided with those held by the successive chiefs of the United States engineering corps, because they have insisted upon reserving a site between Sixteenth and Forty-first streets."

Asks Three Miles for Commerce.

Mr. Randolph attended the public hearing before Col. Judson on Aug. 27. Asked then for a public oral statement, he replied: "My views do not fit in with either side, and I think I will not talk. You know my views, colonel; I have talked with you privately."

"But I prefer to have them in the record," replied Col. Judson. Mr. Randolph did not express any opinions and it was assumed he would place nothing in the record. But he sent a communication to Col. Judson saying he had written a letter in 1916, regarding which he commented: "The contents of this letter point out conditions which obtain as thoroughly today as they did when the letter was written."

This outlines his program, of which the beginning is as follows:

"The first step which I urge is a vigorous effort to repeal the legislative enactment which gave the south park for beauty what the city needs for business (riparian rights to submerged land along the south shore). Give back to commerce and industry all of the lake front from Sixteenth to Forty-first street and let the parks have all the rest. Is three miles out of twenty-two of the water front too much to ask for Chicago's commerce?"

Urged as Commerce Builder.

Chairman Lipps of the council railway terminal committee has had his attention called to Mr. Randolph's letter and will see Walter L. Fisher today in an effort to have a convincing reply filed with Col. Judson.

Mr. Randolph points out the importance of commerce and compares his plan with the harbor development of Manchester, Eng., in the following language:

"Then condemn all riparian rights on the reclaimed stretch from Sixteenth to Forty-first street. This vast improvement should be undertaken and carried out not as a revenue bearing project per se, but to build up the commerce of the city.

"Manchester put $77,000,000 into its ship canal that it might be a seaport. The traffic on that canal has not earned a return in tolls which would justify its construction, but its building gave Manchester an impetus in growth, and wealth attendant upon growth so vast, that the millions put into the canal are insignificant contrasted with the results.

Beauty vs. Trade.

"Commerce has given Chicago its wealth and power. Can a pleasing panorama of parks and lagoons, beautiful drives and broad expanse of lake unvexed with vessels bearing commodities of trade compensate the city for the loss of that trade?"

Col. Judson intends to send these and other views of Mr. Randolph to the engineers in Washington together with his suggestions regarding a harbor development. His letter is not all negative. He summarizes his plan. For transportation to the harbor he would have a spur of the elevated run eastward from Eighteenth street, and he further indicates what surface lines he would have run lakeward. He goes into detail in showing how every railroad entering Chicago could have access to the harbor area.

BIG CROWD JAMS GERMAN TRAINS, SURPASSING LOOP

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Special Correspondence.]

DANZIG, Aug. 20.—The hundreds of thousands of office workers who are pushed and jostled about in the great crowds which leave the Chicago loop every night on the packed cars ought to have just one glimpse at the traffic situation in any German city today to be convinced that they are traveling with luxurious comfort in comparison to the Germans.

The strongest man gets a seat in a German train; there is no such animal as a seat hog here; everybody plunges into the cars when they stop. Not the slightest regard is shown for women.

Germany's traffic was crippled when the rolling stock demanded in the armistice was surrendered. Today they have not enough engines and cars to handle the traffic. German families continue to propagate with the same old well known rapidity, and the raising of restrictions on traveling has also increased the number of passengers many times. Great crowds are always present at the stations to take trains, and after as many passengers as can possibly squeeze into the coaches have been locked in, a big uniformed guard, who carries a bad looking club, paces up and down the platform shouting: "Zuruck Bleiben!" (Stay behind!) The train pulls away and the crowd which has to wait for the next train amuses itself by drinking beer or watching the hospital internes remove the injured.

Senate Will Investigate Charges Against Burleson

Washington, D. C., Sept. 13.—Plans to investigate charges by former Civil Service Commissioner Galloway that Postmaster General Burleson disregarded civil service rules and "debauched the civil service" in appointing postmasters were made today by the senate postal committee.

NICOTINE DEATH AN ACCIDENT.

A verdict of accidental death was returned by a coroner's jury yesterday in the case of Francis Dick, 7 years old, 4331 North Paulina street, who died after drinking a quantity of nicotine solution. The poison was administered by mistake when Francis' brother went to the family medicine chest to get some cough medicine for the boy. The nicotine was used to spray plants.

EMPTIED PURSE HINTS ROBBERY IN TOTH MURDER

New Clew Found Near Indian Trail Where the Woman Was Slain.

The empty purse of Mrs. Carolina Toth, stabbed to death on an Indian trail in the forest preserve Monday night, was found yesterday afternoon, 500 feet away from where the body lay. The purse was a small one Mrs. Toth had carried in her handbag. It was found by Detective Sergeant William Steffen of the Irving Park police station, who had been searching for clews.

Robbery the Motive?

Mrs. Toth's husband told the police his wife had $65 when she vanished. The police say the empty purse strengthens their original theory of robbery as a motive for the slaying. But they are continuing their search for a male friend with whom she might have visited the preserve.

Lombroso Test Fails.

The psychological theories of Lombroso, Italian criminologist, failed to help the police at a test in the morning. Eight detectives viewed mourners who appeared at the funeral of the murdered woman, on the theory the murderer would appear for a last look at his victim.

They scrutinized everybody appearing at the undertaking rooms of S. D. Ellison, 750 West North avenue, and seized one man, but he convinced them his better half had decorated his face with cuts and bruises, so they let him go and refused to give out his name.

Lost Nose Sewed Back On, Jubilant Patient Leaves

LONDON, Sept. 13.—A remarkable cure has been effected at King Edward VII. hospital, Windsor, in the case of William Robertson, a stable man. His nose was cut off by a piece of broken glass. He was taken to the hospital, where a surgeon asked for the missing nose. A doctor's son cycled off to the stable, found the nose in the straw, and returned with it to the operating theater, where it was replaced after an absence of nearly an hour.

EUROPE'S BREAD TICKET, HOOVER, RETURNS TO U. S.

Says Red Peril Is Over, Prices Bound to Fall; Wants League.

New York, Sept. 13.—Herbert Hoover, former director general of allied relief, came home today after five years' service abroad, during which he distributed more than 600 steamship cargoes, or 3,219,968 tons of foodstuffs, valued at $770,795,000, to starving Europe.

"I hope never to go back to Europe again," he declared in a statement soon after he landed from the Aquitania. "Since August, 1914, I have devoted my entire time and energy to war work, and with the exception of nine months I have spent the entire five years away from my family. I have no plans other than to go home. All of my official activities having been completed, I am once more a 'common or garden variety' of American. I am not a partisan and am not in politics in any form."

Not Presidential Candidate.

The last statement was elicited by a question as to whether he approved mention of his name as a presidential possibility.

"The turning point" in the relief of Europe, Mr. Hoover said, when asked as to what he considered the crowning achievement of his work abroad, came when he was appointed mandatory of the railroads and was able to ship food where it was most needed. Up to that time, he said, the situation looked hopeless.

The task of America in Europe now is greater than before the armistice, he declared, adding that it was chiefly economic and had to do with the restoration of trade and commerce, to accomplish which the United States should extend ample credits through "normal commercial methods" and not by government action.

Europe Must Live on Credit.

"If we are going to market our normal exports next year," he explained, "we shall have to extend these credits. Practically all Europe lives on its imports."

One hopeful sign of conditions abroad, Mr. Hoover said, was the subsidence of the wave of unrest. The danger of bolshevism, economically and politically, passed last February, he said, and it was rapidly disintegrating as a philosophy.

The Hungarian situation also, he said, was "clearing."

"An enormous struggle to get back to normal conditions is now going on in central Europe," he continued. "There are, of course, many disturbing and complex social currents which make it imperative that some peace treaty must be ratified quickly. There can be no political sentiment abroad until peace is consummated."

Prices Bound to Fall.

Discussing speculation in food, here and abroad, Mr. Hoover said he did not think international action against "profiteering" was necessary. He was of opinion that there were economic reasons why prices should fall of their own weight. A large amount of speculation was based on the assumption there would be an abnormal demand for food in central Europe as soon as peace came. There was such a demand, but central Europe, lacking the gold or products to pay for the food, was "tightening its belt" and going without.

$2.26 Wheat Proved Blessing.

Amplifying his advocacy of $2.26 wheat, Mr. Hoover said he ordinarily was opposed to government subsidy, but that wheat at $2.26 was below the world price today. He said the British and French had subsidized bread at a point not much above the prewar level and that while the price of other foods had gone up as much as 60 per cent, bread had risen only 35 per cent. He said the result was "a vicious economic circle," from which France and England would gladly escape. Every one, he said, was eating bread in those countries.

"I have no liking for any form of government control," he explained. "Efforts to stop speculation are all right, but it is better to have prices adjusted by economic law."

Can Germany Pay?

"Can Germany pay its indemnity and live?" Mr. Hoover was asked.

"That no mortal soul knows," he replied. "Certainly she can't pay unless she is given an opportunity to restore normal conditions and procure raw materials. Europe is filled with anxiety at the prospect of the withdrawal of our intervention. Every government lodged a protest. The delay in making peace has had a terrible effect.

"I stand for the league of nations as it is or as nearly as it can be obtained. The peace treaty is constructed around the idea of a league of nations instead of the idea of a 'balance of power.' If the league of nations is not carried through, the whole treaty, in my opinion, will fall. Attempts may be made even after the league of nations is a fact to reëstablish the 'balance of power,' but they would be sure to die.

Sees Need of League.

"There is not a frontier in Europe where there is not economic friction. It is impossible to start reconstruction until peace is settled. Large railroad systems, the arteries of the country, are dismembered."

Questioned about honors offered him by European rulers, Mr. Hoover said he "had refused to accept every button in Europe" and had not brought home a single decoration.

Mr. Hoover declared millions of men in Europe were yearning to get to the United States and urged rigid enforcement of immigration laws.

THREE SCENES POINT WAY TO AID REAL HERO

North Shore Begins a Drive for Miller and Children.

We submit for your contemplation three scenes.

Scene 1—The night of Sept. 1. On the railroad track at Hubbard Woods stand the parents of the Tanner children, locked in a death embrace. John Miller, the flagman, is tugging frantically at the couple, trying to tear loose the foot of Mrs. Tanner, which has become caught. With a sudden rush the locomotive tears into the trio and—

Scene 2—In a ward of the Evanston hospital lies John Miller. Both of his legs are broken and one arm has received a compound fracture.

Scene 3—Three children are playing in a small cottage in Glencoe. They do not know there is a $1,100 mortgage on the place—all they wonder about is why daddy does not come home. Their invalid mother tries to explain, but only Johnny, the eldest, is able to understand. He is 7; James is 5, and little Josephine is 15 months old.

Fund to Aid Him.

It is with these three pictures in mind that the members of the old Liberty loan teams on the north shore have been reorganized to canvass the homes from Chicago to Lake Forest for a $12,000 relief fund for Miller.

The drive opened yesterday in Evanston, with R. C. Pattison Kline, one of the old four minute speakers talking from the stage of the Hoyburn theater. Mrs. R. D. Cunningham, assisted by eight young society women, took charge of the collections, which totaled more than $200. In addition several pledge blanks were given out, so that about $300 is expected in all.

During the day a contribution of $100 was received from Mrs. Laird Bell. A washerwoman, who withheld her name, sent in a dollar bill "to help that brave flagman."

CHICAGO WOMAN SEEKS OFFICE IN WORLD 'AD' CLUBS

Mrs. Olivia Barton Strohm, 5473 University avenue, vocational director of the Chicago Women's Advertising club, will be a candidate for vice president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World at their convention in New Orleans Sept. 21-25.

The Chicago delegation is solidly supporting Mrs. Strohm. If elected she will be the first woman ever to win a place on the executive board of the international organization.

Mrs. Strohm is regarded as one of the leading women advertising copywriters in the country. Her work in the Liberty loan campaigns won national recognition.

CELEBRITIES OF LOOP ARRESTED

The State street sidewalk, athwart the alley between Washington and Madison streets, being blocked by a gaping crowd, Policeman William B. Creagh investigated. The attraction was Old Peter, whose years are 95, and who vends papers at the alley.

Old Peter was chattering more volubly than usual, so Policeman Creagh asked him to cease. Along came Robert Miller, the socialist Lazarus of the loop, and characterized Mr. Creagh as a capitalistic copper, an exponent of caste, peonage, etc. His philippic was punctuated with cheers by Old Peter.

Mr. Creagh, knowing that Mr. Miller has two wooden legs, each of which carries a painful wallop in the way of a solar plexus, took no chances, but seized him instanter and called the wagon. Both Miller and Old Peter were charged with disorderly conduct at the detective bureau.

Old Peter's wife gave bond for him, but Miller spent the night there.

Suit for $25,000 damages was filed in the Superior court yesterday morning by Mrs. Iona Carruthers against Mrs. Emma Litchfield, 6235 Kenwood avenue.

Mrs. Carruthers charged in her bill that Mrs. Litchfield alienated the affections of Robert W. Carruthers, her husband. Before his marriage, according to the bill, Carruthers, a conductor for the Illinois Central, was a boarder at the home of Mrs. Litchfield and acted as the head of the house on special occasions.

Since the marriage it is charged Carruthers has continued his friendship with Mrs. Litchfield. Mrs. Carruthers also has a suit for separate maintenance pending.

RICH AURORAN TRAPS WIFE AND MAN AT DE KALB

Frameup, Says Woman of Latest Volintine Romance Chapter.

Aurora, Ill., Sept. 13.—[Special.]—Daniel Volintine, 21 years old, last night trailed his wife and another man to De Kalb, where he caused their arrest in a room at the Hotel Glidden on a charge of disorderly conduct. The episode marked a new effort of Aurora's "richest young husband" to free himself from his wife, in order, it is declared, to marry Mildred Wesner, a beautiful girl who was his sweetheart in high school.

Mrs. Volintine and the man seized with her spent the night in jail. He gave the name Dan Russell, but told Chief Riddell of De Kalb his real name was A. W. Miner and his home was in Chicago.

Frameup, Says Wife.

Arraigned before Justice W. H. Rowe today, the couple pleaded guilty to the charge of disorderly conduct after Volintine had taken the stand. Mrs. Volintine, who is 21, did not seem to comprehend what was going on. She was fined $5 and costs and Miner $10 and costs. He paid both fines.

"It was a frameup," said Mrs. Volintine this afternoon.

She was supported in her statements by Chief Riddell. He said Miner had been out auto riding with Mrs. Volintine and his machine had broken down, so he sent her to a hotel for the night. Later he went to her room to tell her the machine was fixed and they could go home.

While he was in the room Volintine, who had gone to De Kalb from Aurora, sprung the trap.

"The girl had done no wrong," said Chief Riddell. "If she had fought the case and not been afraid of publicity the charge would have been dismissed.

"Miner had registered under the name of Russell. He and Mrs. Volintine had separate rooms."

Asks Marriage Annulled.

A few days ago Volintine filed a bill in the Circuit court at Geneva asking that his marriage be annulled. He told how he married Nora Udstad at Crown Point when but 18 years old and left her the day of the ceremony.

He said he had been kidnaped from school at Lake Geneva by Attorney J. Bruce Amell and Dr. Eugene Pritchard of Aurora and compelled to marry Miss Udstad, whom they met on the way from Lake Geneva to Crown Point. The trip was made in an automobile, he declared.

Realty Agent Questioned on French's Operations

George Hess, a real estate agent connected with the George J. Haberer real estate brokerage concern, was questioned yesterday by Assistant State's Attorney John C. Melaniphy, who is gathering evidence against the gang of alleged swindlers arrested recently by the state.

Hess told Melaniphy he met Charles W. French, alleged head of the swindlers, four or five years ago at the La Salle hotel. At that time French asked him to try to interest his friends in some steel and oil ventures, but Hess said he was unable to help French.

He met French last January in the Majestic hotel, he said, and the latter offered him a salesmanship position in a coal company at a salary of $7,500 a year. This Hess refused.

MAYOR PROCLAIMS "CLEAN AIR WEEK" TO AID HEALTH PLAN

High praise is bestowed upon Health Commissioner John Dill Robertson in a proclamation issued yesterday by Mayor Thompson, in which he sets aside the seven days beginning tomorrow as "Clean Air Week."

The proclamation follows:

"Whereas, The city of Chicago, under the leadership of our commissioner of health, Dr. John Dill Robertson, has attained a position among the cities of the world, in which Chicago stands first in the protection of our citizens against diseases which are transmitted through water, milk, food and sewage; and,

"Whereas, The commissioner of health has informed me that clean air in Chicago will materially reduce the loss of life from influenza, pneumonia and tuberculosis, and, to a large extent, reduce colds, bronchitis and other respiratory diseases; and,

"Whereas, This can be largely accomplished by lessening the smoke of our city, the commissioner of health having accepted the responsibility of the management of the smoke department, this bureau having been added to the department of health, I request our people to coöperate with the commissioner of health in cleaning Chicago's air, that we may receive the benefits and may save the lives, protect the health of our people and save to them a vast amount of money that is wasted annually because of unnecessary smoke;

"Therefore, I, William Hale Thompson, mayor of the city of Chicago, do hereby designate and proclaim the week of Sept. 15 to 21, inclusive, as 'Clean Air Week,' and urge that our citizens give this problem their most serious consideration, coöperating with the department of health in an endeavor to minimize the smoke evil during this period and thereafter."

Attention of Dr. Robertson:

A tug drawing the Goodrich steamboat City of Grand Rapids out of the river at 7:15 o'clock last night belched forth black smoke in quantities that shut out fair heaven for at least ten minutes, all the way from State street bridge to the mouth of the river. The steamer itself was smoking, but its efforts were feeble in contrast to those of the tug.

Downtown the twilight sky was pretty well blotted out by smoking Illinois Central engines—one at Adams street and others up toward Roosevelt road.

Will Discuss Plans to Aid Victims of the War

The Independent German-American Woman's club will hold a public meeting Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock in the ballroom of the Morrison hotel. Relief work for the destitute widows and orphans of Germany will be discussed.

FRACTURES SKULL IN FALL.

George Cook, 40 years old, Wilmette, was probably fatally injured yesterday afternoon when he fell down a flight of stairs in the Union passenger station. He was taken to the county hospital. According to physicians, his skull was fractured.

AUTO AND TRAIN CRASH; MAN, GIRL, AND NURSE DIE

E. W. McCready Meets Death in East with Daughter.

Edward W. McCready, manager and treasurer of the R. W. McCready Cork company, at 344 West Illinois street; his 8 year old daughter, Suzanne, and her nurse, Miss Margaret Steinbach, were killed yesterday when their automobile was struck by a passenger train at Westover, Md.

Mr. McCready had been visiting his mother at Christfield and had started to motor to Atlantic City to join Mrs. McCready, who was to have accompanied the party on a tour through eastern states.

McCready and the nurse were instantly killed and his daughter died while being removed to a hospital.

The cause of the accident is unknown. The view of the train was unobstructed, but bystanders say they warned McCready of the approach of the train. It is believed he lost control of his machine, or the brakes failed to work properly. The impact was so great that the car was smashed to bits and thrown for quite a distance. The pilot was torn from the locomotive and parts of the machine were wedged in a box car on a siding nearby.

A telegram was sent to her last night notifying her of the tragedy. The bodies will be brought back to Chicago for burial.

Mr. McCready lived at 331 North Euclid avenue, Oak Park. He was prominent in Chicago club and society circles. He was a member of the South Shore Country club, the Chicago Athletic association, the River Forest Tennis club, and the Westward Ho Golf club. He was 47 years old.

Seized After Collision.

Herman Leyster, 26 years old, of 2647 Wilson avenue, a restaurant owner, was arrested yesterday by Patrolmen Patrick Kerns and Krall of the Central station on charges of driving an automobile while intoxicated and for driving on the wrong side of the street.

Leyster had crashed into an automobile being driven by Miss Mary B. Platt of 4535 Indiana avenue, on the Adams street bridge. The collision tore the left front wheel from Miss Platt's car. Leyster staggered as he walked back to the scene of the accident and was promptly arrested. Miss Platt was not injured.

Miss Anna Schwartz, 26 years old, 1819 North Halsted street, was slightly injured in an automobile collision at Division and Halsted streets yesterday.

Auto Strikes Little Girl.

Margaret Herwig, 9 years old, playing in the street near her home, 2448 West Monroe street, was run down by an automobile last night. She was taken to Washington Boulevard hospital, suffering from a fractured skull. Physicians say she cannot survive her injuries. Harry Donahue, 113 South St. Louis avenue, and Michael Angerola, 2657 Monroe street, who were in the machine, are held by the police.

BORED SAILORS TRY FLYING AND GET A THRILL

But Yachtsmen's Joy Hop Ends with Tow Home.

When Benjamin Carpenter of 222 West Delaware place and William Ott of Wheaton embarked aboard the yacht Arcadia yesterday they started a cruise of adventure. When ennui ensued they boarded the flying Sea Gull when it hailed them.

At 8:30 last night they moored again at the Chicago Yacht club, this time the Arcadia towing the seaplane that had given them their first flying thrill—also their first forced landing. The "ship" glided down safely off Wilson avenue beach at 6:30 p. m., the magneto having cut out when the plane was 500 feet over the beach.

Plenty of Help.

All sorts of impromptu help hastened from the shore until Pilot Henry W. Rubinkam made the curious cast off after a careless canoeist had fouled an elevator with a paddle.

Then a rowboat bravely tried to tow the crippled flyer to harbor. It was replaced by the Arcadia, Mr. George O. Clinch's craft. The transfer of passengers was thrilling one, the men scrambling from the flyer by the towrope.

Long Tow Back.

Where the flight to the beach had taken but a few minutes, the tow back took hours. The boat was finally moored again at the Chicago Yacht club shortly after 9 o'clock. Pilot Rubinkam, who launched the Sea Gull Aug. 11, announced he would carry passengers again today. He spent the early part of yesterday afternoon introducing the yachtsmen of the club to aerial navigation.

All acknowledged liking it, even those seafarin' members who say "port" and "starboard" and "haul away." The navigators, though, have not mastered the air parlance of "taxi," "take off," "nose up," "bank," and "spiral."

SEEKS MISSING DAUGHTER.

Mrs. Frank Kusel, wife of a carpenter contractor, appealed to Chief of Detectives Mooney yesterday to find her daughter, Norma, 18 years old, of 1856 West Garfield boulevard, who has been missing since Sept. 6. This is the second time Norma has disappeared from her home, he mother says.

BOAT COLLISION BRINGS MENACE TO PRESIDENT

Wilson Ends Busiest Day of Campaign at Seattle.

the forward turret of the famous old battleship Oregon, the hero ship of the Spanish-American war. The president and Secretary Daniels, their wives, and members of the fleet reception committee, took seats in a boxed-in place that had been built on the forward turret.

Then the big spectacle of the formal review began. They were all out there in the Elliott bay harbor, a great inland sea, with a gateway to the ocean. The day was bright and the bay was dotted with heavily loaded pleasure boats. The city folk who could not get any craft to go out in hung along the water front from every conceivable nook.

Greeted by Guns' Roars.

There was hardly sea room for the fleet to maneuver and so the Oregon weighed anchor after Admiral Hugh Rodman had paid his respects to the president and had gone on board his flagship, the New Mexico, and passed along to starboard of the dreadnaughts and battleships.

The president's flag flew at the Oregon's masthead. Marines and sailors manned the masts. As the Oregon passed each ship their crews came to attention, their bands played the Star Spangled Banner, and the presidential salute of 21 cannon was fired.

After this the Oregon hove to and waited for the destroyers. They came in from the ocean at a fast rate, about 25 knots an hour. A "bone in their teeth," the scout cruiser Birmingham leading the way, the twenty-six destroyers circled the Oregon. Airplanes buzzed overhead; the sun was dimmed with the smoke of the guns.

Takes Command of Ship.

At the close of the review the president, as commander in chief of the navy, took charge of the Oregon, superseding Secretary Daniels. The long line of destroyers had circled the Oregon when Secretary Daniels inquired of Capt. Ivan C. Wettengel, commander of the Oregon:

"Do we get under way now, captain?"

"Just as soon as the destroyers have all passed," the captain replied.

"The destroyers are hove to," President Wilson put in.

Capt. Wettengel took a look, faced about, and, touching his cap, said:

"Aye, aye, sir."

The Oregon got under way for the return to the anchorage.

Town in Holiday Spirit.

The president found Seattle in the midst of a great celebration. Fleet week festivities combined with the president's visit had turned the town into a bedlam.

The streets are massed with people, the town aflame with bunting and patriotism. Mr. Wilson's automobile was followed by a roar that sounded like that of a world series crowd. The air was filled with a blizzard of confetti. Massed choruses along the curbs sang bars of the national anthem as he passed. Every side street was packed for a block or two. The mob nearly broke away from the police. Thin brown lines of Boy Scouts joined hands and kept the machines of the president's party from being swamped in humanity.

The six secret service men trotting along the side of the president's car had a hard job to keep enthusiasts away. It all had little to do with the league of nations, however; it was an outpouring of the Pacific coast joy spirit.

There was one suggestion of a sullen note in some parts of the town, as the parade passed. There were groups of several hundred men who wore badges bearing the words "Release political prisoners." These were radicals, whose demonstration was in the nature of a plea for the release of those who had been locked up during I. W. W. and other troubles in the northwest. They stood in swarms along the curbings, some with arms folded defiantly, some looking sullenly at the president as he passed, and some with sneers.

For Seattle is the city of the "general strike" failure and the machine gun talk of the former Mayor Ole Hanson. The president has been asked to receive a group of labor leaders tomorrow in the interest of Hulet Wells, who is now in McNeil island prison, convicted of sedition. They want a pardon for him.

Some of the buttons seen were for "Debs and Mooney."

The president rode bareheaded for the most part, standing and bowing in the face of this multitude.

People Demand Change.

The situation in Washington, according to state political observers, is strongly in favor of reservations to the covenant along the lines of the senate committee recommendations. Everywhere the committees that take charge of the president's party are heavily Republican. Echoes of Democratic dissatisfaction, especially at Spokane, are heard.

The Republicans are said to be divided between mild reservations and those who are for extreme qualifications. The president is appealing directly for Republican support on the Pacific coast.

In his addresses today Mr. Wilson did not mention the Shantung situation. The feeling here against the Japanese is said to be strong. They control much leased land, produce stores, restaurants, and hotels of the second class.

President Says That Signing of the Peace Treaty Will Be Underwriting the Peace of Whole World

Tacoma, Wash., Sept. 13.—President Wilson in his address in the armory here today said:

"I feel, as I am sure you feel, that we have reached one of the most critical periods in the history of the United States.

"The shadow of the war is not lifted from us and we have just come out of the depths of the valley of death.

"I thought it might be useful if I remind you of a few things, lest we forget. It is so easy, with the strong tides of our life, to be swept away from one situation into another; to forget the real depths of meaning which lie underneath the things that we are merely touching the surface of.

"Therefore, I thought it would not be impertinent on my part if I asked permission to read to you the concluding passage of the address in which I requested the government of the United States to accept Germany's challenge of war.

What America Fought For.

"'We shall fight,' I said, 'for the things we have always carried nearest our hearts, for democracy, for the right of those who submit to authority to have a voice in their own government, for the rights and liberties of small nations, for a universal dominion of right, of such a concert of free peoples as will bring peace and safety to all nations and make the world itself at last free. To such a pass we can dedicate our lives and our fortunes, everything that we are, everything that we have, with the pride of those who know that the time has come when America is privileged to spend her blood and her might for the principles that gave her birth, of happiness and of peace which she has enjoyed. God helping her, she can do no other.'

"That is the program we started out on. That is the program which all America adopted, and shall we now falter at the very critical moment when we are finally to write our name to the standing pledge which we then took?

Others Sorely Tempted.

"I want to remind you many other nations were put under a deeper temptation than we. It would have been possible for little, helpless Belgium at any time to make terms with the enemy. Belgium knew that resistence was useless. Belgium knew that she could get any terms of advantage from Germany that she pleased if she would only submit. And at the cost of everything she had Belgium did nothing else than underwrite civilization.

"I do not know anywhere in history a more inspiring fact than that.

"Belgium lies prostrate because she fulfilled her pledge to civilization.

"Italy could have had her terms at the hands of Austria at almost any period of the war, particularly just before she made her final stand at the Piave river, but she would not compound with the enemy. She, too, had underwritten civilization. And, this passage which I have read to you, which the whole country accepted as its pledge, is but an underwriting of civilization.

COST OF GREAT WAR

"But in order to let you remember what the big thing cost, just let me read you a few figures. If I did not have them on official authority I would deem them incredible. Here is what the war cost those who were engaged against Germany:

"Great Britain and her dominions, $38,000,000,000; France, $26,000,000,000; the United States, $22,000,000,000; Russia, $18,000,000,000; Italy, $13,000,000,000, and the total, including Belgium, Japan, and other smaller countries, $123,000,000,000.

"It cost the central powers, Germany, $39,000,000,000; Austria-Hungary, $21,000,000,000; Turkey and Bulgaria, $3,000,000,000, a total of $63,000,000,000; a grand total of direct war cost of $186,000,000,000, an incredible sum to save civilization.

"Now the question is, Are we going to keep safe? The expenditures of the United States were at the rate of $1,000,000 an hour for two years—$1,000,000 an hour, including the night time, for two years.

7,450,200 Died on Field.

"Battle deaths—and this is the cost that touches our hearts—were, Russia, 1,700,000; Germany, 1,600,000; France, 1,385,000; Great Britian, 900,000; Austria, 800,000; Italy, 364,000; the United States, 50,300, total of all belligerents of 7,450,200 men dead on the field of battle.

"The total wounded for the United States army was 230,000, including those, of course, who were killed.

"The total of all battle deaths in all wars of the world from the year 1793 to 1914 were something under six millions. So that in all the wars of the world for more than one hundred years fewer men died than have been killed on the field of battle in the last five years. These are terrible facts and we ought never to forget them.

United to Save World.

"We went into this war to do a thing that was fundamental for the world, and what I have come out upon this journey for is to ascertain whether the country has forgotten it or not. I have found out already. The country has not forgotten it, and will never permit any man who stands in the way of the fulfillment of these great pledges ever to forget the sorrowful day when he made the attempt.

"America alone cannot underwrite civilization. All the great free peoples of the world must underwrite it, and only the free peoples of the world can join the league of nations. Germany is for the present excluded, because she must prove that she is self-governing. She must prove that she has changed the process of her constitution and the purpose of her power. When she has proved these things she can become one of the partners, guaranteeing that civilization shall not suffer again these intolerable things.

"The league is not only a union of free peoples to guarantee civilization; it is something much more than that. It is a league of nations to advance civilization by submitting something that will make the improvement of civilization possible.

LABOR AND CAPITAL

"I call you to witness that our civilization is an industrial civilization, and at the heart of it is an antagonism between those who labor with their hands and those who direct labor. You can not compose those differences in the midst of war, and you can not advance civilization unless you have a peace of which you make the fullest use of bringing these elements of civilization together into a common partnership in which every man will have the same interest in the work of his community that those have who direct the work of the community.

"We have got to have leisure and freedom of mind to settle these things.

"This was a war against autocracy, and if you have disordered, if you have disrupted populations, if you have insurgent elements in your populations, you are going to have autocracy, because the stronger is going to seize the power as it has seized it in Russia. I want to declare I am the enemy of the rulership of any minority, however constituted.

Guard Women, Children.

"I believe, for my part, that the league of nations covenant is 98 per cent insurance against war. I take it you want some insurance against war rather than none, and if it is not 98 per cent, I dare say you would rather like 10 per cent.

"There is a provision for the constant, regular international discussion of labor problems, no matter where they arise in the world, for the purpose of lifting the whole level of labor conditions, for the purpose of safeguarding the health of women and of children, for the sake of bringing about these international agreements with regard to labor, upon which the happiness of mankind so much depends.

"What I want everybody to understand is this: The first effective impulse towards this sort of thing came from America. And I want to call your attention to the fact that it came from some of the very men who are now opposing its consummation.

"It is of particular importance to remember, at this moment, when some men have dared to introduce party passion into this question, that some of the leading spirits—perhaps I might say the leading spirit—in the conception of this great idea, were the leading figures of the Republican party.

"When I advocated the things in this league of nations I had the full and proud consciousness I was only expressing the best thought and the best conscience of my beloved fellow countrymen.

"The only things that I have any special connection with in the league of nations covenant are things that I was careful to have put in there because of the very considerations which are now being urged.

"One of the most distinguished lawyers of the United States, George W. Wickersham of New York, who was the attorney general in Mr. Taft's cabinet, came over to Europe, I am told, to oppose the things that he understood the American peace mission was trying to accomplish—and what happened to Mr. Wickersham? He was absolutely converted, above all things else, to the necessity of having a league of nations not only, but this league of nations.

American Above All Else.

"I need not tell you the conspicuously fine work which his chief, Mr. Taft, has been doing in the same cause. I am very proud to forget party lines, because there is one thing that is so much greater than being a Republican or a Democrat that these things ought never to be mentioned or connected with it, and that is being an American.

"If I wanted to have a joint debate with some man who wanted to put our part in this peace down on the lowest possible level—how much money we were going to make out of it—I could silence him by assuring him that the world is being reinsured. I believe in my heart there is hardly a man in America, if you get really back of his superficial thoughts, who is not man enough to be willing to make the sacrifice to underwrite civilization. Now, the nations of the world have declared that they are not afraid of the truth.

"One of the things that this treaty incidentally does is to absolutely invalidate all secret treaties. I hope no attempts will be made to qualify or embarrass the great process which is inevitable, and I confidently predict that some day we shall look back with surprise upon the fact that men in America, above all nations, should ever have hesitated to do this great thing."

BORAH REPLIES TO A HECKLER UPON SHANTUNG

Fort Dodge, Ia., Sept. 13.—Senator William E. Borah, speaking here tonight, denounced the league of nations and declared that it will not Americanize Europe, but would Europeanize America. The speaker was constantly interrupted with cheering. Only one attempt was made to heckle Senator Borah. While he was denouncing the Shantung provision, a man in the audience arose and asked: "Isn't it a fact that Japan took Shantung, not from China, but from Germany?"

"Upon that theory," Senator Borah replied, "England and France are entitled to that portion of Belgium, which they rescued from Germany."

Senator Borah declared that while he was speaking in favor of the adoption of the reservations, he personally was opposed to the league of nations in any form.

"In order to adopt the league of nations," he said, "the United States would have to throw off the policy of George Washington. You can't preserve the Monroe doctrine unless you at the same time preserve the Washington policy of avoiding entangling alliances."

VALPARAISO, IND., DECIDES TO AID A PARK AT DUNES

Valparaiso, Ind., Sept. 13.—Porter county has ceased to oppose the Dunes park. The Valparaiso chamber of commerce will immediately name a committee to look over the situation, mark the park boundaries as Porter county says, and at once coöperate with the Dunes Park association. Porter county's industrial interests will be fully guarded.

The Inland Steel company has plans far advanced for a steel city on the Ogden tract. There is a great natural harbor at Dunes park. For twelve years the Gary Steel company neglected to provide the lake front park it had promised when it founded Gary. The recent gift of 116 acres paid that debt.

Porter county is against a national park. A state park or two county parks—Porter and Lake—are preferred.

Teschen Mines in Poland to Be Left to Ballot

PARIS, Sept. 13.—A plan for the settlement of the question of the Teschen mining district, in dispute between Poland and Czecho-Slovakia, has been adopted by the supreme council. It was agreed that plebistice be taken.

Says Japan Won't Sign Without Shantung Edict

New York, Sept. 13.—Japan will refuse to ratify the peace treaty if the Shantung clause is excluded, in the opinion of Baron Shimpei Goto, member of the Japanese national commission for discussion of foreign policies, and former foreign minister, who is on his way home after a three months' visit to England and France. Baron Goto said he was expressing only his personal views.

BRITISH POWER IN LEAGUE MADE JOHNSON TARGET

Kansas City Audience Is Told of Neglect of Irish Appeal.

BY WALTER RODERICK.

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 13.—[Special.]—To an audience that filled the great Convention hall here, Senator Hiram W. Johnson tonight replied to President Wilson's speeches made here a week ago tonight and at Spokane on Friday. It had been predicted there would not be a crowd here tonight, owing to the fact that Saturday night is Kansas City's factory shopping time, but at 5 o'clock, an hour before the doors of the hall were opened, 4,000 persons stood in line.

There were cries of "Impeach Wilson!" from hundreds in the crowd when Senator Johnson, after dramatically summing up his objections to the league, shouted: "Let us end the whole rotten business by defeating the entire pact!"

He praised Senator Reed of Missouri for his courageous stand in opposing ratification of the league covenant.

Senator Johnson was welcomed to the home city of Senator James A. Reed by a nonpartisan citizens' committee of 100. R. E. Ball, a Democrat, called the meeting to order. Among the 600 out of town visitors was Gov. Henry J. Allen of Kansas.

Attacks Britain's Six Votes.

Senator Johnson ripped into the president's Spokane defense of that feature of the proposed league of nations which gives Great Britain six votes to one for the United States. If it makes no difference, as the president maintains, he argued, why give Great Britain six votes?

"Last night for the first time," he said, "the president attempted a justification of the provision of the league giving Great Britain six votes, while the United States has but one. He says in effect that the disproportionate voting power is of no consequence, because each vote in the council has a veto. Why, then, Great Britain should have been given six is not apparent. Perhaps because it is of no consequence that this preponderance has been so strenuously insisted upon by Great Britain.

"But the veto power by no means removes the objection. Any matter of dispute in the council may by either party be removed to the assembly. In the assembly all members vote, except those who are parties to the dispute.

Cites U. S. Disadvantage.

"Suppose Japan and the United States in controversy finally came to the assemblage of the league. There, both Japan and the United States standing aside, Britain, with her offensive and defensive alliance with Japan, which both countries insist will be in full force notwithstanding the league, will cast six votes. And, while the council requires a unanimous vote, the assembly, exclusive of the members of the council, requires for action but a majority vote.

"But the influence of a preponderance of votes may often turn the scale. Take the familiar example of our juries, where unanimity is required. Suppose upon a jury six votes are one way, one another, the remainder impartial. It requires no argument to demonstrate the power of the six.

"Six votes for Britain, one for the United States, is a challenge to our self-respect, an affront to our patriotism. It will be the test of the Americanism of the men who must finally pass upon it."

Refers to Bullitt Statement.

Referring to the testimony of William C. Bullitt before the foreign relations committee, the senator declared his statement that Lansing had declared the American people would not accept the treaty if they knew its contents, "is significant and ominous."

"The president's enthusiastic exclamation about the great document and its penetration with American principles was perhaps not intended to be

BURNT OFFERING TO DEAD BACCHUS

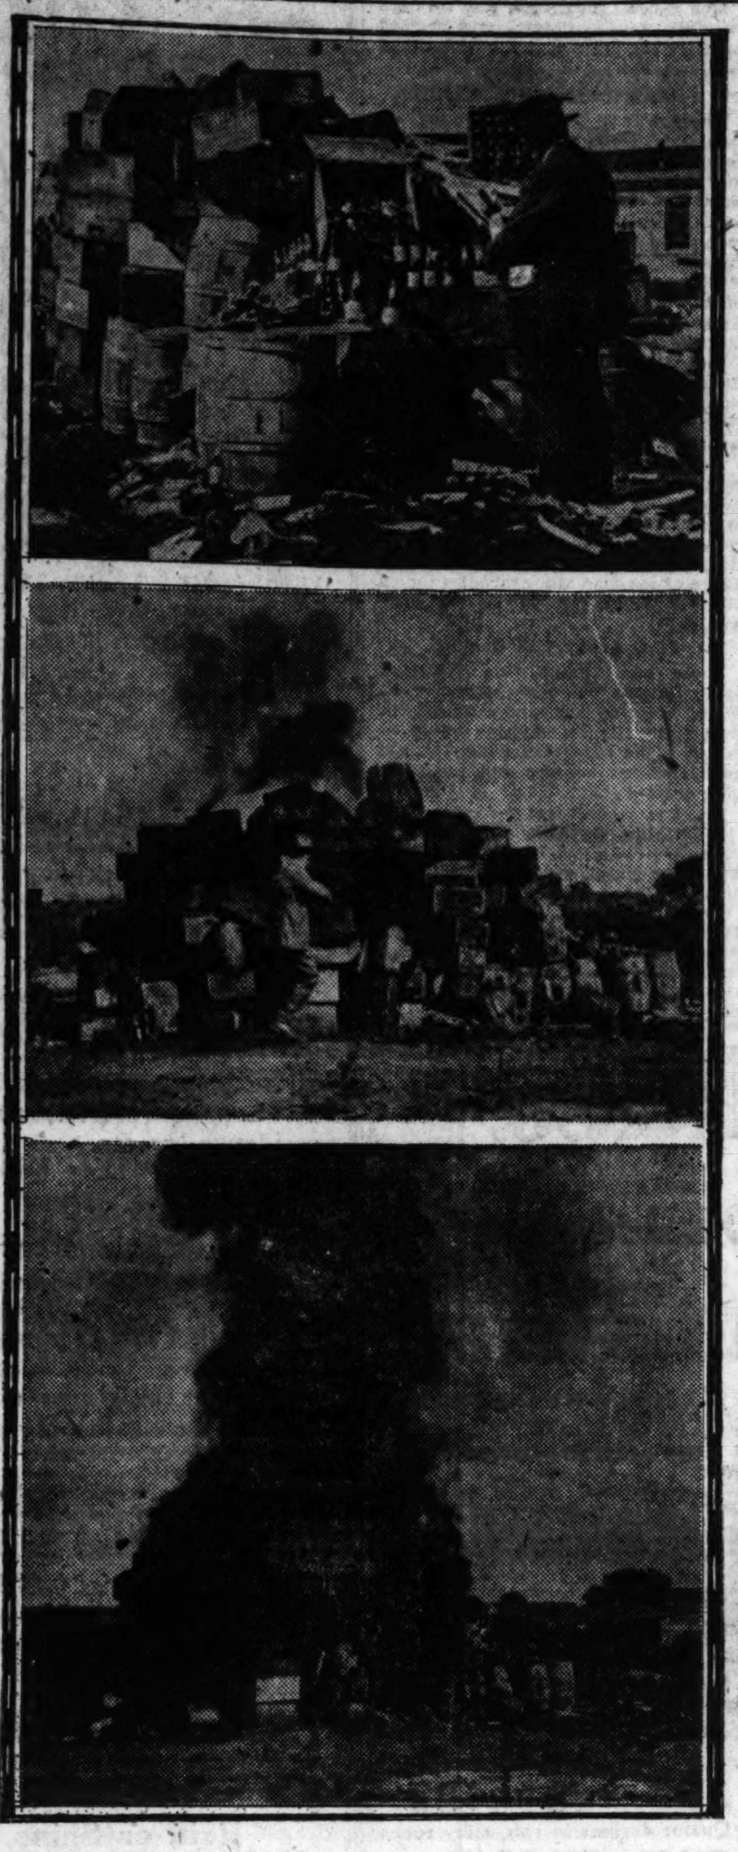
Woodstock Authorities Destroy 13,452 Bottles of Confiscated Beer.



Thirteen thousand, four hundred and fifty-two bottles of real before-the-war beer went up in smoke yesterday at Woodstock. The antibachanalian ceremony was conducted by State's Attorney B. S. Lumley after orders for the destruction of the joy juice had been issued by Judge Barnes.

The night before the ceremony some thirsty soul with an auto truck embezzled 137 cases of the confiscated fluid.

Before the conflagration Attorney Lumley mounted the pile of cases and barrels and delivered an oration on the penalties which would be inflicted on the thieves if they are found.

State's Attorney James G. Welch of Lake County announced that he is perfecting plans to search every automobile, truck, or vehicle of any description crossing the Illinois-Wisconsin boundary line. Two guards will be placed on duty at every highway and trail. Signs, illuminated with red lanterns, will read:

Two truck loads of beer and two autos, the latter containing 500 and 800 bottles of Milwaukee beers respectively, were seized last evening in Zion City, and eight men and one woman occupants of the trucks and touring cars arrested.

The prisoners gave their names as Mrs. Frieda Johnson, Edward Johnson of Lincoln and Fullerton avenues, Henry H. Hoffert of 1627 Mohawk street, and Roy Grauder of 229 West North avenue.

SEE DANGER IN PLANS OF JAPAN FOR BIGGER NAVY

Protection of Islands in Pacific Is Problem for Congress.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 13.—As soon as the United States can get a breathing spell in the undertaking of settling the affairs of other peoples it is going to find itself face to face with a number of questions vital to its own safety and future welfare. One of them involves the future naval program which is beginning to assume greater importance than ever because of the trend of events in the Pacific.

Japan has gained a dominating position in the orient and by virtue of her exploitation of China is destined to become a power of such proportions and resources that she will be able at any time to challenge the control of the Pacific.

Building Big Navy.

Japan is building a great navy as rapidly as her resources permit. At present her naval strength is estimated at less than half that of the United States, but she is specializing in the construction of fast battle cruisers, which many naval authorities believe will be the determining factors in future naval warfare.

The Japanese naval program now under way will provide seventy-three cruisers of all classes, compared with forty-seven cruisers of all classes in the American navy.

With the Philippines unfortified at Japan's door, with the Hawaiian islands insufficiently fortified in the middle of the Pacific and containing a preponderant Japanese population, and with Japan acquiring the German archipelagoes in between, many statesmen are of the opinion that the United States should not neglect to maintain a greater naval strength than Japan's in all types of craft as insurance against trouble in the Pacific.

Letter Made Public.

Of course such views are not entertained by those who believe that the league of nations is going to banish war forever.

It is noteworthy, however, that even President Wilson deemed it important to send Admiral Rodman to the Pacific with an American fleet stronger in many respects than Japan's present available fleets. With a significance that was not lost on the initiated, Secretary of the Navy Daniels' letter to Admiral Rodman, which was made public on the eve of the sailing of the fleet, dwelt on the strength and the permanence of the American naval forces in the Pacific.

Shows Relative Strength.

The administration has blown hot and cold on the navy question in the last year. First it proposed a program to give the nation as large a navy as Great Britain's. Then it abandoned that program on the ground that the league of nations would make such defense unnecessary.

The relative strength of the American and Japanese navies is shown by the following figures:

| | U. S. | Japan. |
|---|---|---|
| Battleships completed | 40 | 16 |
| Battleships authorized | 12 | 4 |
| Cruisers of all classes | 31 | 29 |

19 Dreadnaughts Completed.

Of the American vessels authorized by the 1916 program, some of which were held over by the war, there have been completed nineteen war vessels of the dreadnaught type. There are ten dreadnaughts and six battle cruisers on the ways at the present time and twenty-three ways capable of building battleships are occupied at this time.

Naval officials estimate that most of the ships authorized in the 1916 program will have been completed by next year and all of them by the summer of 1921. This will give the United States forty-one first class dreadnaughts, twenty-one battleships of the second class, six battle cruisers, ten scout cruisers, 400 destroyers, and 181 submarines, nine of the latter being fleet submarines and the remainder intended for coast defense.

WILSON IS MADE CZAR BY BAKER'S SCHEME, CHARGE

Army Bill Lets President Send Men to League Quarrels, Claim.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 13.—[Special.]—The war department's army reorganization bill was virtually scrapped today when members of the senate military affairs committee discovered in it what they believe to be a scheme to give the president a czar like control of the army under which American troops, without the consent of congress, could be sent into any quarter of the world to carry out the decrees of the league of nations.

Members of the subcommittee investigating the measure for several weeks declared today they would never permit the passage of the bill unless it was almost entirely rewritten. They have been amazed at the powers proposed to be delegated to the president.

It was pointed out that under the provisions of the bill congress would be entirely helpless to prevent the president, if he so desired, to send 150,000 or 200,000 troops to police Armenia, or to dispatch an army to help Admiral Kolchak in Siberia.

Averse to Cashier's Role.

"All that congress will have to do hereafter, if this bill passes, will be to foot the bills," declared Senator Chamberlain, Oregon. He made public an analysis showing congress would not even have anything to say about the manner of spending the money. The appropriations are to be made in lump sums, to be spent in any way the president or the chief of staff sees fit.

"The czar of Russia never had any more power than this bill proposes to give the president," said Senator New, Indiana. "It is the most Prussian and autocratic measure I have ever seen presented to congress."

Exposing the "Autocracy."

Regarding unlimited power for the president, Senator Chamberlain's analysis refers to it as a "very carefully camouflaged" section of the bill, and says:

"It is nothing less than a proposal to repeal or nullify substantially all restrictions of existing law relative to the selection, appointment by and with the advice and consent of the senate, duration of tenure, powers and duties of the chiefs of all the great staff corps and departments of the army, and to give unlimited authority to the president, at his own will and pleasure, to fill the places of those chiefs with offices of his own selection, to prescribe all their powers and duties, and to remove and to replace them as frequently as he may feel disposed to do so.

"Of course, in practice the exercise of all this tremendous power would be substantially, if not entirely, controlled by the chief of staff.

"This preposterous scheme, together with many others of like intent in the pending bill, spells one-man dominance, staff despotism and militarism to a degree never surpassed in the palmiest days of the 'great general staff' of the German army."

Wording of "the Joker."

The report says section 32 provides that "the president may detail any officer to any military duty he may consider necessary and appropriate, and for such period as he may think proper, subject only to the limitations of this act."

The report also assails the proposal to create a great staff corps, saying:

"It will be difficult to convince any one, not a present or prospective member of the general staff corps, and who is reasonably well informed as to the affairs of the war department and the army, that there is the slightest necessity, either in peace or in war, for a general staff corps of 231 officers, top heavy with military rank of the highest grades.

"Undoubtedly the proponents of such an organization will undertake to defend it by asserting that it is urgently needed because of the vast amount of business that was transferred to the general staff, under the Overman act, from the various bureaus of the war department during the recent war, and that it is one of the purposes of the pending bill to make that transfer permanent.

As to Staff's Functions.

"The rejoinder will be that there never was any reason for taking that business away from the bureaus or for refusing to return to them, other than a desire of the general staff for self-aggrandizement; that whatever inefficiency there was among them at the outbreak of the war was mainly due to the utter unpreparedness of both the war department and the army for war, and that after the transfer to the general staff it increased rather than diminished, notwithstanding a reckless expenditure of a vast amount of money.

"If the general staff had confined itself to its proper functions before the war the country would not have found itself totally unprepared for it when it came."

More Power to the President.

Referring to the officers' reserve corps section, which contains a provision that "any reserve officer may be discharged at any time in the discretion of the president," Senator Chamberlain says:

"In time of peace, these numerous reserve officers are merely civilians with only contingent liabilities to be required to undertake duties or responsibilities of a military nature. They are engaged in civilian pursuits and occupations, including very properly political activities on the part of many of them.

"The enactment of the provision quoted would actually encourage the exercise of the power conveyed by it to intimidate, or to coerce, the action of many reserve officers and to punish them for political or other activities unsatisfactory to those in authority over them.

"No such power over a great body of civilians should ever be intrusted to any president, secretary of war, chief of staff, or any other military officer. At the very least, a reserve officer who has fallen into disfavor with a military or civilian superior, should have the frail protection that trial by court-martial affords against unjust action by a wrathful superior."

Senator Chamberlain's criticism of the lump sum appropriation plan was vigorous.

"From a congressional standpoint," he said, "this section contains one of the most objectionable, not to say impudent, of all the provisions of this truly remarkable bill.

"It proposes, in effect, that the estimates for each annual army appropriation bill and all army deficiency bills shall hereafter be prepared under the supervision of the chief of staff; shall be sent by the secretary of war to the secretary of the treasury, who shall forward them, presumably unchanged by him, to congress.

The Dotted Line for Congress.

"Congress then shall be compelled by law to make each appropriation in a lump sum, which shall be apportioned and distributed for various purposes on 'advice' given to the secretary of war by the chief of staff.

"If congress should accept this invitation to tie its own hands in the matter of making appropriations for the support of the army and in addition to this to reverse and set aside one of the most complete of fundamental policies of our form of government—namely: to keep the control of the purse in civilian hands and beyond the grasp of hands that wield the sword, it would create a situation remarkable for its simplicity and entirely in accordance with the militaristic aspirations of those who have had the hardihood—perhaps effrontery is the better word—to prepare and lay before congress the astounding proposals embodied in section 38 of this altogether militaristic bill."

The three months' universal training proposal, Senator Chamberlain said, "hardly deserves consideration," adding:

"In that short time the average young civilian could scarcely learn to keep himself an his equipment clean. Evidently this proposal is made as a sop to the pacifist conscience."

THIS EX-BUDDIE IS LOOKING FOR WORK; GOT A JOB FOR HIM?

Just a minute—here's a letter employers ought to read. It's addressed to the Friend of the Soldier, and you can find the writer through the city editor of THE TRIBUNE. Call or write.

"As I have read how you have helped many soldiers, I am writing you to tell you about myself and will appreciate anything you can do. I served in France with battery C, 318th F. A. In February I transferred to the interallied armistice commission, and from February to June I served at Pr. Holland, Germany, at a Russian prisoner of war camp.

"I returned to Chicago last Tuesday. Every day since I have called at the soldiers' bureau on Adams street, but so far I have not been sent to one place. My father died while I was in France, leaving my mother dependent on me. I took care of her all the time I was in the army and must continue to do so. It is imperative that I secure a position at once. The firm for whom I was working before I enlisted has consolidated with another concern and they have nothing open for me at present. I have first class references from them.

"My work has been that of correspondent, mostly sales promotion work, although I can handle credit and collection correspondence, too. Can show a good record. Was earning $40 per week in my last position, but will accept $35 now. F. A. J."

PERSHING DROPS WAR TO WATCH BASEBALL GAME

Sees Baker, Inspects New Offices, and Calls It a Day's Work.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 13.—With his headquarters as chief of the American expeditionary forces reëstablished in Washington after more than two years in France, Gen. Pershing promptly joined in the Saturday half holiday today and went to a track meet and a baseball game.

He and his immediate staff spent hours in the open air under perfect weather conditions, in sharp contrast to the rush and bustle of their hours in New York and Philadelphia.

Tonight the general completed the celebration of this dual event for him, his return and his 59th birthday, at a quiet family dinner at the home of his father-in-law, Senator Warren, Wyoming.

Official Call on Baker.

The only official events of Gen. Pershing's first full day back in the city which probably is to be hereafter virtually his permanent home as ranking officer of the army, were his brief conference with Secretary Baker and his inspection of the offices set apart for him, where the affairs of the American expeditionary forces are to be wound up.

He was eagerly hailed throughout the day whenever he was recognized on the streets or elsewhere, but the most tumultuous greeting given him was at the war department, where clerks fairly mobbed him, clinging to his sleeves and thrusting eager hands to greet him.

The general fought his way through manfully but smilingly, and seemed to enjoy the battle and the warmth of the reception by these fellow workers.

Final Parade Wednesday.

There was a conspiracy among officials and fellow officers to let the returned soldier off very lightly. He has been the center of receptions, parades and other functions for weeks, and, in their opinion, has earned a rest. Ahead of him looms his most significant parade, the march up Pennsylvania avenue next week at the head of the 1st division. Until then his comrades in arms here are determined not to trespass on his time.

Gen. Pershing's conference with Mr. Baker was merely an official call. It was brief, but later he joined Mr. Baker at an interdepartmental track meet.

He was glad, Mr. Baker said to the crowd that filled the big stadium and heartily cheered Gen. Pershing on his arrival, that the hundreds of federal employés in the stands should have this opportunity to see "the knightly figure of the man who embodies for us all that army for which we have worked."

Goes to Baseball Game.

From the stadium Gen. Pershing went to the ball park, where Gen. March awaited him, and hundreds of men from the 1st division stood at salute as he entered the box. Again good American cheers and handclapping greeted him.

The general watched the game until the Washington pitcher pluckily pulled himself out of a hole in the fifth. There was more cheering as he led his staff back to the hotel.

No ceremonies have been planned for Gen. Pershing tomorrow or until the parade Wednesday. He is back on the job, and Washington does not view him as a visitor, but a distinguished fellow townsman.

HEARTS OPEN UP TO FREE MOTHER IN DEBTOR CELL

Prosecutors, Court Aids, Even Foe, Aid Woman Tricked Into Jail.

Tears swung open jail doors, unlocked the desks of assistant state's attorneys, and conveyed a special session of court yesterday afternoon to free a mother from the debtor's cell.

Bailiffs, lawyers, prosecutors, professional bondsmen, saloonkeepers, newspapermen, and a judge all joined in helping two children to free their mother from the clutches of an attachment.

A little after noon Louis I. Gottlieb, an attorney with offices at 1572 North Halsted street, and Bailiff Ignatz Schwartz drove to the home of Mrs. Bertha Shech, 847 Read court. She says they asked her to get into the automobile and go with them to Judge Harry M. Fisher's court. Instead, they stopped in front of the county jail.

Carried Into the Jail.

As Mrs. Shech alighted she saw the grated windows and screamed.

Bailiff Schwartz shouted for assistance and Jailer Will T. Davies came out.

The three men carried the woman into the jail.

Jailer Davies ordered her taken to the third floor and placed in the debtor's cell.

For two hours Mrs. Shech wept, pleaded, threw herself against the bars. Her cries were heard throughout the Criminal Courts building. At the request of assistant state's attorneys calling at the state's attorney's office for their mail, two reporters started to make inquiry at the jail. Before its entrance they found Carl and Gertrude Shech, Mrs. Shech's children, talking to a group of professional bondsmen.

Carl, who is 12, said his mother had been taken to jail because of a slander judgment of $200 obtained in Judge Fisher's court by Mrs. Theresa Egerer, 3521 Medill avenue. He asserted his father is ill and in New Mexico trying to get well and 16 year old Gertrude is the support of the family.

Mrs. Egerer Surprised.

Carl and Gertrude were taken to the state's attorney's office, where they retold their story. Mrs. Egerer was called on the telephone by Assistant State's Attorney William H. Duval. She told him she was surprised Mrs. Shech was in jail, as she had refused to give her attorney money to pay the commitment fee.

Attorney Gottlieb then was called to the state's attorney's office and questioned by Assistants James C. O'Brien, Nicholas Michaels, and William H. Duval. During the questioning newspaper men called Judge John M. O'Connor and explained the situation to him.

"I'll be right down if you can find a clerk and bailiff to open court," he said.

Attorney Frank A. McDonnell was called to draw up a writ of habeas corpus and Mrs. Egerer came to the state's attorney's office to intercede for Mrs. Shech.

Special Court Opened.

John Byrne, a bailiff, was found, James Kane, a clerk, was brought from his home. They arrived shortly before Judge O'Connor and opened court upon the jurist's arrival.

Mrs. Egerer asked to be sworn.

"I didn't know Mrs. Shech was in jail," she said. "I never wished her to be placed in custody. My attorney wrote me asking for $14 to put her in jail for three weeks, but I refused, because he told me even if I got the $200 I would only get $50 of it, and the other $150 would have to go for fees."

The judge then asked the assistant state's attorneys whether Mrs. Shech should be permitted to give bail or the case be dismissed.

Asks Case Dismissed.

"This woman is a victim of unscrupulous practice," replied James O'Brien, assistant state's attorney. "In the state's attorney's office the lawyer offered to split the fees he would get out of this case if we would help him collect the judgment. I ask not only that the woman be freed, but that the case against her be dismissed."

"It is obvious she has been illegally placed in custody and she is free to go home with her children," ruled Judge O'Connor.

DYE PROPAGANDA MUST DIE, SAY U. S. CHEMISTS

Propaganda reflecting upon the quality of American dyes will be dealt a knockout blow by the nation's chemists at the fifth national exposition of chemical industries in Chicago Sept. 22 to 27.

The chemists declare the propaganda is fostered by the old dyestuff trade, still under the influence of the German idea, and that the idea has become prevalent that American dyes are different from German dyes, although they are the same.

The chief difficulty has been, they declare, that in the short time given it has been physically impossible to make all the 900 dyes in the list. Manufacturers first concentrated upon staple dyes. Because the specialties, used in far less quantity, were not produced rapidly, those who would hamper the industry in America were quick to start a backfire of vicious proportions, it is charged.

WAR STAGES NEW "ENOCH ARDEN" EDGED IN BLACK

Soldier Believed Dead Comes Back; Madness, Death, Trail Love.

The chirping of the birds and the sunshine piercing the smoke of the South Chicago steel mills appear only a mockery to 19 year old Mrs. Agnes Schweizer. She has lost her grip on life.

But it was different hardly more than a year ago. When she was married to Tom Gornick in February, 1918, she could appreciate it all. They had been sweethearts since childhood—and they were happy. But Tom was called to war soon after.

Agnes was sad, but she knew some day he would come back. Then, early in January, she learned from the Red Cross that her husband had been killed in battle.

John Makes His Bow.

Soon afterward John G. Schweizer, who had been married four times, came into her life. He had advertised in THE TRIBUNE for a housekeeper to watch over his little boy, Willie, in their home at 2046 Flournoy street.

Agnes answered the advertisement and John employed her. One day he told Agnes he loved her. He mentioned all his divorces, but Agnes didn't care. They were married the next day.

Four days later a girl was born to Agnes by her soldier husband and John said he would care for it as his own—even if he was making only $24 a week as a wood polisher. He would inherit $10,000 soon, he told her, and then they would have a bungalow and an automobile.

She Chooses Second Love.

Then Tom Gornick appeared as from the dead to claim his girl wife. He had not even been wounded—the Red Cross had erred. He stood before the pair in his captain's uniform.

"I love John," Agnes told Tom simply. "And I'm going to stay with him. We are happy. I thought you were dead—killed in batttle."

Months passed. Gornick made repeated visits to the Schweizer home. He threatened to kill Agnes if she did not come back to him.

John became desperate. He determined to kill Gornick if he ever came to his house again. Agnes gave her former husband warning—so he kept away.

Misfortune Strikes Hard.

Misfortune then struck the Schweizer home. Mildred died. The three mourned—Agnes more than the rest. Sorrow and the unhappy triangle began to tell on Schweizer. He was adjudged insane and taken to Elgin.

The little home in Flournoy street was broken up and Agnes went to live with her mother in South Chicago. Then, her love for her former husband rekindled. Both vowed to forget the past. She determined to divorce Schweizer and be remarried to Gornick late this month, but again fate intervened.

Gornick died last Tuesday from heart trouble.

Today his body will be taken to Pennsylvania for burial, as relatives wished.

And Agnes is sad as never before. She wishes to attend the funeral, but the doctor will not permit her—she is again to become a mother soon.

REVOLUTION IN CUMMINS BILL, RAIL MEN SAY

14 Unions Sign Protest; Claim Same Right as Others.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 13.—[Special.]—Representatives of the fourteen unions comprising the organized railroad workers of the United States issued a statement today denouncing the anti-strike provision of the Cummins railroad bill pending in congress as a blow directed at the vitals of organized labor.

They declare that the provision would impose upon railway labor "compulsory arbitration and economic servitude," that to advance it at this critical time, in the face of an economic crisis, only serves to increase the difficulties confronting the nation, and that its enactment "would spell the birth of revolution."

Think It "Economic Servitude."

"This provision," says the railroad workers' statement, "not only would make it illegal to strike with intent to hinder interstate commerce, but also would make it illegal to enter into any combination or agreement which does hinder interstate commerce. Intent would not have to be proved in the courts. Thus the provision is ironclad, for any strike in railroads, of however small proportions, would unquestionably hinder interstate commerce. The provision is carefully worded to remove from railway labor the right to strike under any possible circumstances.

"If this provision were enacted into law it would impose upon railway labor two insupportable conditions—namely, compulsory arbitration and economic servitude. Such a serious and fundamental proposal opens up the whole question of the relations of labor to the state and to the employer, and precipitates every issue in the industrial situation.

Claim Rights of Other Workmen.

"The right to strike as the last resort is ingrained in the nature of the American workingman; he has inherited it from the declaration of independence, from the constitution of the United States, from every tradition of this free people, from every achievement in the history of our great nation. If he failed to cherish his economic freedom he would no longer be a true American. To attempt to put such a prohibitive law into operation, therefore, would be madness. No leadership in the world could restrain the rank and file of American labor under such an imposition; the human factors called forth would be beyond control.

"What would be left a working man, under the provisions of the Cummins bill, above quoted? The final clause of the provision is an empty promise. If two or more men quit work under any excuse it could be held that they were interfering with interstate commerce.

"The provision simply means that under it men in the railroad employ would no longer be free to quit their jobs; they would work in economic serfdom, subject to the conditions imposed by the adjustment boards, or, if two or more of them did quit they would be criminals, and the police and the troops, the courts, and the jails, can be used against them.

"A law such as this would spell the end of labor organizations in America; it would spell the birth of revolution."

The protest is signed by Warren S. Stone, grand chief, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers; W. G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, and thirteen others.

CUT MOVIE AND SODA TAX FROM INCOME DUES

Washington, D. C., Sept. 13.—Responding to inquiries, the bureau of internal revenue announced today that virtually all federal taxes, even the 2 cents paid for the privilege of an ice cream soda, may be deducted from gross income in computing income taxes.

Only income and excess profits taxes may not be deducted.

Transportation taxes, paid on railroad, sleeping car and steamer tickets, admission taxes, assessed on theater, ball game, circus, and moving picture show tickets, luxury taxes, on toilet articles, and the higher priced wearing apparel—all may be subtracted from the amount on which income tax is to be reckoned.

The entire sum may be lumped together without specifying the actual number of sundaes consumed or movies attended.

BAKER INQUIRES INTO FOOD SALE PROFITEERING

Orders Charges Made Through City Board Taken Up.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 13.—[Special.]—Charges that wholesalers in Chicago have obtained possession of large amounts of army food intended for the public were ordered investigated today by Secretary of War Baker.

The secretary said that he had no information on the subject, but complaints had been made to him that the orders for army food greatly exceeded the amount of food which the zone supply office has to distribute there and that much of it had found its way into the hands of wholesale dealers.

Baker Lacks Information.

"I have no detailed information on the subject," said Secretary Baker, "but I have directed the director of sales to investigate the situation and to report.

"The purpose of putting the army food on the market was for the benefit of the ultimate consumer, and not the market dealers. The complaint that army fod is getting into the hands of Chicago dealers while individuals cannot get their orders supplied has just reached me. There has been some suggestion that there is a hoarding of this food by the wholesalers.

"Personally, I have no further information on the subject, but I expect to learn just what the situation is within a few days."

The secretary said that he had no specific data as to what wholesalers are alleged to have obtained possession of the army food put at the disposal of Chicago buyers.

REFERS TO LOCAL CASES.

Secretary Baker's order for an inquiry is understood to refer to testimony given yesterday before Mayor Thompson's food commission. Representatives of three wholesale houses admitted that they bought cut string beans from the government at from 8 1-3 to 9 cents a can and sold them for from $1.25 to $1.35 a dozen.

Says Sale Is Impossible.

Lieut. Col. George F. Unmacht, first assistant in the army Chicago zone supply office, declared last night sale of government food to wholesalers was impossible under the postoffice distributing system.

"However," the army man said, "wholesalers, canners, and retailers bought army food by the proposal system which was in effect before Postmaster General Burleson became Uncle Sam's grocer. The supplies were then sold to bidders and the awards made at Washington so that our office had no jurisdiction.

"The only time the wholesaler got any goods was while that practice was followed. Under the newer system the only retailers who secured any of the stock were those appointed by the mayor to act as agents. So far as I know they took no profit."

Mayor Thompson yesterday sent a telegram to Secretary of War Baker and local members of congress asking their assistance in bringing to Chicago additional supplies of government foodstuffs for sale and distribution. Some of the largest cities throughout the country have not taken their full allotment, and it is this food that the mayor wants brought here.

His telegram makes mention of the disclosures made by the health department food commission Friday that some dealers here profited on the sale of government foodstuffs even to the extent of 30 per cent, and it points out this food was not a part of the supplies sold through the city administration's efforts. It was food purchased directly by these dealers from the government.

Text of Telegram.

The mayor's telegram follows:

"On Aug. 21 I telegraphed you asking that an additional allotment of government food be provided for Chicago over its original quota, as the advanced orders indicated that our city would absorb any surplus not taken by other zones. Orders far in excess of the allotments have been received. Newspaper dispatches state that other cities have not taken their full allotments. I would like to bring to your attention that our people would like an opportunity to purchase at cost additional surplus food from the government.

"Our food commission through investigation has developed that government food sold some time ago to dealers and not part of the surplus food allotment has been resold at profit ranging as high as 30 per cent. The organization perfected in Chicago to dispose of surplus food supplies whereby reliable business houses are taking government food and supplies and selling them without profit makes it impossible. I would ask that favorable consideration be given to the request for an additional allotment."

MAYOR THOMPSON ASKS OBSERVANCE OF CONSTITUTION DAY

Mayor William Hale Thompson issued a proclamation yesterday asking observance of Sept. 17 as Constitution day. It follows:

"Whereas, Wednesday, Sept. 17, 1919, will be the 132d anniversary of the completion and signing of the constitution of the United States; and,

"Whereas, In the stress and strain of the recent war in which this country was engaged the personal liberty of the American people, guaranteed by the constitution, was abridged and their rights under the constitution were trampled upon by arrogant officials who conspired with war profiteers to prevent the people from exercising their right of free speech and their right peaceably to assemble to discuss questions of public policy in which they were interested; and,

"Whereas, It appears that the interests which were then suppressing the constitution in other jurisdictions and were trying to suppress it in Chicago, and to nullify its wise provisions which were incorporated in it to maintain this as a government of the people, by the people, and for the people, have repented their unwisdom and are now anxious to have the constitution reëstablised as the well spring of our national government and the protector of life, liberty, and property in our nation; and,

"Whereas, In these days of doubt, caused by the indifference and contempt with which the constitution was treated by money mad profiteers and many high public officials during the excitement of the war period, it would wield a wholesome influence throughout the land to have our people take up in their homes, in our schools, and in public assemblages a study and discussion of the constitution of the United States, its origin, its purpose, its guarantee of the liberty of a people, and the orderly method it provides the American people through the ballot of remedying the present disturbed economic conditions which underlie the national unrest of today; now,

"Therefore, I, William Hale Thompson, mayor of the city of Chicago, by virtue of the authority in me vested, do hereby designate and set apart Sept. 17, 1919, as Constitution day, to be observed by the people in this city, and I suggest that on Sunday, Sept. 14, all of the churches of the city prepare the way for a revival of interest in our national charter of liberty by offering up to Deity prayers of gratitude and sentiments of appreciation for the priceless heritage bequeathed to us through the effort and wisdom of the authors of the constitution and founders of this great republic, and I request that on Sept. 17 there be a general display of the American flag, that appropriate exercises commemorating the adoption of the constitution be held in all of the schools, that it be brought to the attention of every home, and that general encouragement be given a discussion of the tremendous meaning of that marvelous document which is the foundation of this republic and under which we have taken the leading place among the nations of the world."

U. S. PROSECUTOR REVEALS CASE AGAINSTPACKERS

Attorney Kresel Gives Figures to Show Vast Control.

Five individuals control an overwhelming proportion of necessities of life in the United States.

Such control could not exist except through the monopolistic combination of the "big five" packers in violation of federal laws.

The economic situation that compels men to admit they are existing and doing business only because the powerful interests allow them to operate is a situation more important in its results than the violation of the criminal code.

Basis of Prosecution.

These charges were announced yesterday by Attorney Isidor Kresel, special federal prosecutor, as foundation stones in the government's case against national packing industries. Upon them the special staff of prosecutors appointed by Attorney General Palmer will build their Chicago indictment fight, which opens next Wednesday before the federal grand jury.

"I cannot understand why J. Ogden Armour has found it impossible to get a pair of shoes in the last few years," said Mr. Kresel, "for I find the packers control 80 per cent of the hides in the country and all except Cudahy are interested in tanneries. The packers control 50 per cent of the sole leather produced in the United States. The small tanners have told me that they live by the sufferance of the large concerns and that they are entirely dependent upon them for the state of the market." Mr. Kresel has been compiling figures which will be presented to the grand jury next week.

Handle 675 Lines of Food.

The investigation conducted by Mr. Kresel and his associates showed, he said, that the packers are financially interested in at least 675 lines of food production in the United States, both from the standpoint of manufacture and distribution.

Sixty-five per cent of the eggs used in this country are handled by the five Chicago packers. In 1918 Swift & Co. handled 67,000,000 pounds of butter. Thirty-five per cent of all the butter used in the country was handled by the five packers.

The Cudahy Packing company does not manufacture oleomargarine, but the other four packers in 1916 produced 63,000,000 pounds out of a total national production of 152,000,000 pounds, and in 1918 they controlled 40 per cent of the oleomargarine production. In this field the packers face only two competitors of consequence, the John F. Jelke company and W. J. Moxley.

Control "Independents."

Armour & Co. control the Friedman Manufacturing company of Chicago and the G. H. Hammond company is a subcorporation under the direction of Swift & Co., it is said.

In lard the "Big Five" have practically a complete monopoly, producing more than 85 per cent of all the lard manufactured in the United States.

Commenting on the general situation which now prevails in the packing industry in the United States, Mr. Kresel said: "The five Chicago concerns known as the 'Big Five' practically control the necessities of life for the people of the United States. They have a complete grip on the price to the producer of the foodstuffs and like products, and they control the price the consumer must pay in the end. Their control of production and market costs makes their hold on the food situation an extremely strong one.

Sees Danger to Country.

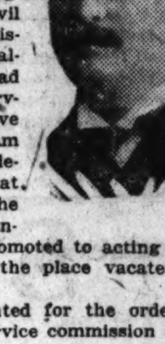
"Economically, this creates a situation that is dangerous to the country. This is evidenced by what I learned from the small tanners, who said they lived at the direction of the large concerns. This is no doubt true of other industries besides the tanning industry."

LIEUT. GALLERY PICKED FOR POST LOST BY HOGAN



Chief Garrity announced yesterday Lieut. Patrick Gallery, now stationed at Chicago avenue, would be promoted to a captaincy and assigned to the Marquette station, replacing Capt. Patrick E. Hogan, who was discharged by the civil service commission. Lieut. Gallery is at the head of the civil service list. Detective Sergeant William O'Brien of the detective bureau, at the head of the list for lieutenants, will be promoted to acting lieutenant and fill the place vacated by Gallery.

Hogan accounted for the order of the city civil service commission ousting him from his captaincy with one word yesterday. The word was "politics."

"Every one in touch with my case knows that a political combination has been formed in my district against me," he asserted. "The crooks and politicians in the Marquette district have been trying to get rid of me because of my attempts at crime supression, and they have succeeded."

WARNS AMERICA "FLU" EPIDEMIC MAY BE RENEWED

Washington, D. C., Sept. 13.—[Special.]—Dr. Rupert Blue, surgeon general of the United States public health service, wants the public and authorities to be on guard against recurrence this fall of the influenza epidemic. In a statement issued today he says that the most promising way to deal with the probability is expressed in the single word "preparedness."

"And now is the time to prepare," the surgeon general adds, summing up a long report of the Public Health Service on the subject as follows:

Probably, but by no means certainly, there will be a recurrence of the influenza epidemic this year.

Influenza is spread by direct and indirect contact.

850 PATROLMEN FADE BACK INTO CIVILIAN LIFE

Action of Voters Forces Race Riot Specials Into Civies.

More than one-fifth of the police department faded back into civil life yesterday as a result of a general order signed by Police Chief Garrity returning 850 patrolmen who were added to the force temporarily, following the race riots, to the patrolmen's eligible list.

Of the 850 men, about 825 are ex-soldiers, according to the records of the city civil service commission which examined them. The chief's order is the result of the failure of the voters to approve of Mayor Thompson's scheme to add the men to the force permanently and borrow the money to pay them from the bank.

Under council order the chief could have retained them until tomorrow night, but by dismissing them yesterday he saved about $6,000 which is sorely needed by the department.

Men Over 50 to Be Examined.

All members of the police department below the rank of lieutenant who are past the age of 50 are to be ordered before the departmental surgeon for an examination to determine whether they are physically able to do good police work.

The chief of police made the announcement yesterday in explaining his order to all commanding officers and bureau heads for the names of members of the department who are eligible for pensions.

"I believe," said the chief, "that when a patrolman reaches the pension age—fifty—he should be given a physical examination every year to determine his fitness to continue on duty.

Nearly Half to Face Surgeon.

"Since there is no ordinance requiring such an examination, I have decided to bring it about through a general order. Nearly one-half of the department will be sent before the surgeon, though of course many of those over 50 will be found fit for service."

CARPENTERS TO VOTE 3 DAYS ON TWO PROPOSALS

Expected to Accept Parley Plan and End Strike.

The carpenters' strike, which has tied up all building in Chicago during the last two months, is expected by the arbitrating committee to end next Wednesday. Two agreements, one drawn by the material men's committee and the other offered by the mayor, were submitted to the journeymen committee last night.

The members of the union will hold referendums in their several locals Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday. It is expected the men will vote to accept the contract offered by the material men, which, it is declared, will give the union a victory, and work will be resumed Thursday morning.

Stand Pat on $1 Demand.

Fifteen thousand carpenters struck two months ago for more money and since that time have stood pat in their demand for $1 an hour. They have demanded the same pay that is given to bricklayers, steamfitters, plumbers, electricians, structural iron workers, and plasterers.

Summarized, the two propositions now confronting them are:

Acceptance of a raise of 12½ cents an hour, which would bring their scale to 92½c cents an hour, with promise of a definite revision May 1, 1920, to a wage equal to the figure paid the highest salaried workers in the building crafts on that date. This is said to guarantee $1 an hour after May 1.

Submission of the question to an umpire, the men to resume work immediately at a wage of 92½ cents an hour.

Look for Acceptance.

The contract offered by the material men and the contractors is indorsed by the carpenters' committee and it is expected an overwhelming vote for acceptance will be cast by the men.

"If the carpenters accept the proposition offered by the contractors, they will have scored a victory," said Edward Hines, chairman of the joint conference. "They will at last have their wage scales established on an even scale with the other builders, and they will have won an increase of 12½ cents an hour, with a chance to demand more after May 1."

This Perfect Scientific Refrigerator Reduces Living Costs

Food must be kept correctly chilled. Not all ice-boxes refrigerate food properly. They may stop a part of food spoilage, but not all. And food prices are high—too high to permit waste.

Hence, an Alaska Refrigerator is, decidedly an economy. It pays for itself in the food it saves and the ice bills it cuts. This is true in winter as well as summer, for there is no closed season on food spoilage.

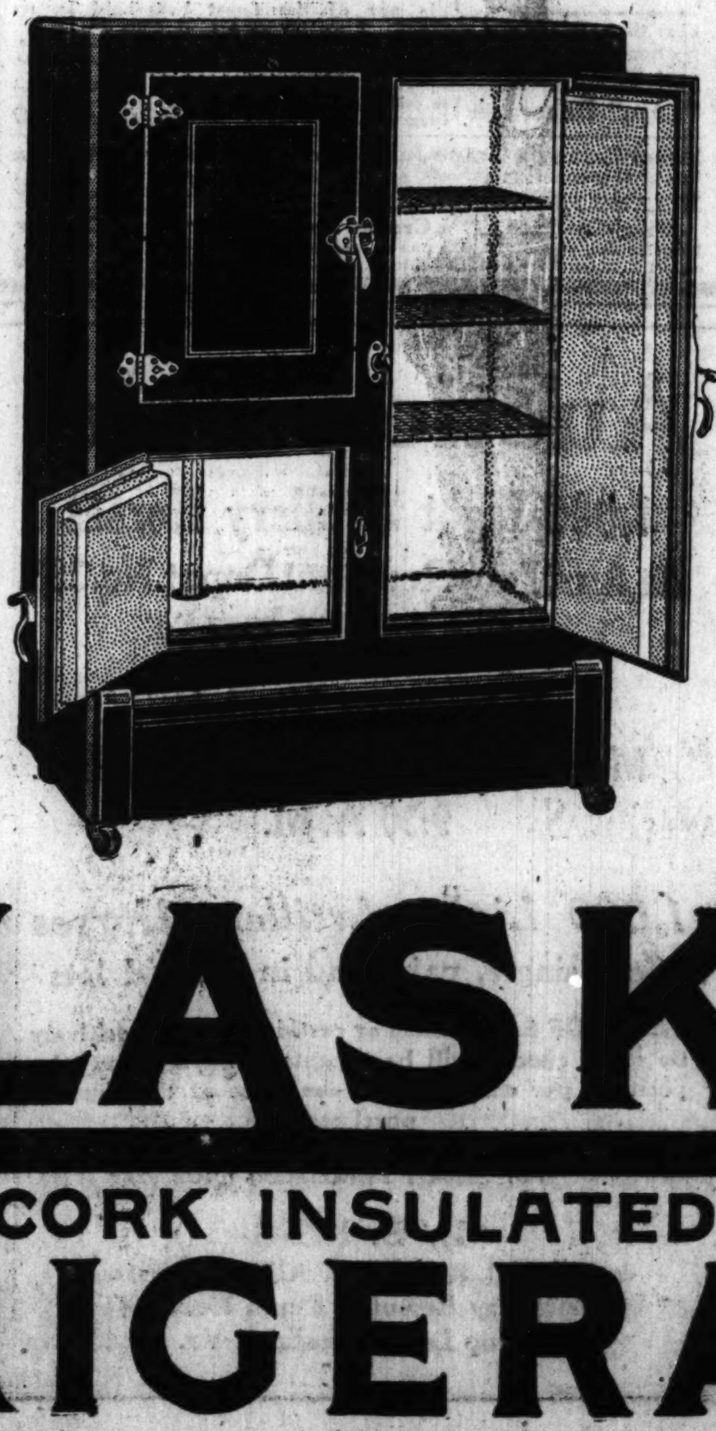
The roomy Alaska Refrigerator is much more than a cooling cupboard. It gives perfect refrigeration. It maintains the temperature that preserves food and liquids best—without wasting ice. It provides chill dry air—keeps food clean, wholesome, fresh.

NOW—with food the greatest problem of home upkeep—you should have the economy of an Alaska Refrigerator. It is the most perfect development of home refrigeration—of food preservation.

Consider its scientific insulation, which keeps out ALL the warm outside air and retains ALL the cold dry air inside. Cubed cork and "confined" air—the two best non-conductors of heat—form a thick wall completely surrounding the cool chambers. It makes a cold storage plant of an attractive cabinet.

Circulation of air within the Alaska is directed so as to keep the chill dry temperature in each compartment uniform. Your Alaska is ALWAYS correctly cold! And so skillfully is this accomplished that ice actually lasts longer.

Genuine seamless porcelain lined, white enameled compartments. Always clean—easily washed or sterilized.



Convenient sizes. Attractively finished cabinets. Last long, make kitchen or pantry look better, cost no more than ordinary refrigerators—and they are so much better.

Now—Bring This Economy to Your Kitchen

Never have you needed perfect refrigeration for your food as today. Food is costly; waste means money thrown away. You can scarcely afford to do without an Alaska Refrigerator. It is as important now as in summer—even more so, because of food prices. At your favorite department store or furniture dealer—make sure you get the perfect, scientific refrigeration of the Alaska Refrigerator. An attractive booklet will gladly be mailed at your request, with the name of a convenient dealer.

MUSICIANS PLAN TO MAKE GLORY EXPENSIVE HERE

Threaten Ban on American Show Sponsors if Bills Go Unpaid.

The Chicago Federation of Musicians is out to teach our prominent citizens a lesson. The financial troubles of the All-American exposition precipitated the pedagogical move. The halting of promiscuous signing of exalted names is the purpose of the course.

The action arose over a music contract between the exposition officials and Armin Hand, band leader. In it Mr. Hand agree to supply melody for the first twelve days of the show.

Although the rules and regulations of the federation demand that payment be made for services at the end of seven days, no money was forthcoming to the musicians after the first week. The reason was explained on Friday, when a petition in bankruptcy was filed by an attorney representing some of the creditors.

Prominent Names Mentioned.

And now, if J. Ogden Armour and Gov. Lowden and the other pupils are ready, a prospectus of the course will be presented.

"I have here a partial list of the citizens' committee," began Joseph F. Winkler, president of the Chicago Federation of Musicians, last night. "These are the names of prominent citizens who, I was told at exposition headquarters, have written letters accepting the honor of sponsoring the enterprise.

"Now the exposition has proved a financial failure, and Hand and his men haven't received a single penny for their twelve days' work. Perhaps the members of the citizens' committee are not legally responsible for the debts, but that does not relieve them of moral responsibility.

Would Make Fame Expensive.

"We are going to show these people that they cannot lend their names to each and every thing that comes up without obligations. They're looking for the glory, but if they want to put their finger in all the pies let them toe the mark and pay the bills.

"Our federation has taken this stand: Unless our musicians are paid for their work in the exposition we shall refuse to play at any function with which any of these people are connected.

"This rule will apply to clubs and other organizations, as well. No union musician will be allowed to accept engagements at a club until they have purged their membership of the prominent citizens on this list. We're teaching 'em a lesson to be careful where they sign their names."

Has Bearing on Opera.

It was pointed out that this ruling would affect the Chicago Grand Opera association and the Symphony orchestra.

Among the names are Julius Rosenwald, Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, Rear Admiral Frederic Bassett, Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, Mrs. Frederick Countiss, E. J. Lehmann, Edward Morriss, H. H. Merrick, and Edward F. Swift.

Mr. Winkler stated that he had conferred with R. B. Beach of the Association of Commerce with regard to taking some action to prevent such situations.

Yesterday Frank L. Wean heard the involuntary bankruptcy petition filed against the exposition directors. Tomorrow the hearing will be continued, when creditors will ask that a receiver be appointed.

Meanwhile the exposition will close today with programs by Americans of Greek, Lettish, and Lithuanian descent.

BEG YOUR PARDON!

On Sept. 11 THE TRIBUNE said Maj. Reed Landis was a former member of Eddie Rickenbacker's squadron of aviators. Maj. Landis was in command of the 25th U. S. Aero squadron for some time before the armistice was signed. Previously he had been brigaded with the British flying forces.

The late Judge Scully was a member of St. Rose of Lima court No. 70, Catholic Order of Foresters. THE TRIBUNE story of his death identified him merely as a member of the order.

6 SUBSTATIONS FOR INCOME TAX OPENED HERE

Six substations at which it will be possible to pay your income taxes will be opened by the local revenue department in different parts of the city to enable taxpayers to avoid the rush at the federal building, according to an announcement made yesterday by Charles G. Rogers, acting deputy collector of internal revenue at Chicago.

Chicago is the first city in the United States to adopt the outlying stations plan, and similar stations are expected to be opened in all the larger cities in the country. The substations will also collect monthly internal revenue, according to present plans.

Notices have been sent out by the local office to taxpayers advising them that the third payment on their income tax is due Sept. 15. These can also be paid at the new substations.

The substations are to be located as follows:

Division No. 1—415 North Clark street.
Division No. 2—3825 Lincoln avenue.
Division No. 3—1224 Milwaukee avenue.
Division No. 4—801 West Madison street.
Division No. 5—6240 Kimbark avenue.
Division No. 6—712 West Sixty-third street.

The stations will be open from 9 a. m. to 4:30 p. m.

No Strike of Rail Laborers; U. S. Accepts Schedule

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 13.—The railroad administration will unreservedly accept the proposal of the United Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employés and Railway Shop Laborers for a new working schedule, according to a message read before a closed session of the organization's convention here this morning. This means, officials of the brotherhood state, that there will be no strike of the organization members.

SEEK TRUCE IN STRIFE OF GOLD STAR MOTHERS

Lowden, Gunsaulus, and Mrs. Hines Asked to Arbitrate.

Arbitration was proposed last night as means of settling the trouble existing between two factions in the Gold Star Mothers' organization. It was asked by Mrs. Mabel H. Swift, vice president; Mrs. Nellie Gardiner second vice president; Mrs. Elizabeth A. De Lacy, recording secretary, and Mrs. Johanna Farley, treasurer, in a letter addressed to Mrs. Oscar J. Vogl, president.

They want Gov. Lowden, the Rev. Frank Gunsaulus and Mrs. Edward Hines, contributors to the organization, to suggest a plan for the disposal of the funds, which now amount to in the neighborhood of $16,000 and are the bone of contention. The four officers expect to be ousted at an election of officers to be held tomorrow night in room 511 of the Shops building, and they ask that Mrs. Vogl take no action and let the committee of three settle the trouble.

Mrs. Vogl Makes Reply.

Mrs. Vogl said last night that she had not received the letter yet, and on being told of the contents, said:

"I think the three should have the right to say what should be done with the money that they contributed, but I don't think that they should have anything to say about the other funds, for the association is bound to take care of them for the benefit of the Gold Star Mothers."

Mrs. Vogl also denied a large number of charges that have been hurled against her by the rival faction.

"My son died on Flanders' field, shot through the heart by a machine gun bullet while he was trying to save a wounded soldier belonging to another regiment," she said. "He was only 19 years old, my only son, and I have his birth certificate and other papers. Any charges that he was not my son are false and all my friends know so.

Says Charges Are False.

"My enemies want to give the funds away to some charity, but the organization is not going to let them do so, for the money was intended to aid the mothers of soldiers killed in France. All those charges about the funds which have been spent are false, for every penny can be accounted for."

Mrs. Lillian White, another gold star mother, came to the aid of Mrs. Vogl last night and told a TRIBUNE reporter that any charges against the president were false. She told of a number of destitute gold star mothers Mrs. Vogl aided with her own money.

The rival faction asked Mrs. Vogl to send her reply to the arbitration plan to the office of Mrs. L. Z. Meder, an attorney in the City Hall Square building, by 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

SAYS U. S. TOOK HIS CODE PLAN; DEMANDS PAY

J. E. Dempsey Gave It During War but Not Afterward.

The war's greatest secret code—what is it worth? That is what J. Edwin Dempsey, Chicago railroad man and author of the code that baffled the German spy system, wishes and expects to learn this week. Mr. Dempsey, who has been a composer of railroad codes for twenty years, devised the code used during the war by the United States government for dispatching all troop trains. His code is still in use and his only complaint is that the code he loaned to the railroads simply for war time service has since been utilized by the government railroad administration, without a "by-your-leave."

Mr. Dempsey, with his counsel, Irving Herriott, started to Washington last night. The amount they are asking for the use of the code is one-half the sum saved through it to the government since the armistice, and they claim the code has saved several millions.

Vast Train Movement Accomplished.

"The composing of the code was not an easy matter," said Mr. Dempsey in discussing how the troop movement section of the Committee of National Defense utilized his system. "Figures show 519,054 soldiers were handled by the railroads per month, with a high mark of 1,147,013 cared for by the lines in July, 1918.

"There were 22,262 special trains, 421 men was the average to the train, while 785 miles at a twenty-one mile an hour gait was the day's average for each train, too."

Mr. Dempsey then explained how his code directed troop movements by abbreviating the messages more than 65 per cent in cost of what the ordinary code would have figured and how every pro-German effort to solve it was in vain.

"The German spy system never was able to learn it," he declared, "and the train dispatchers and those familiar with it really found it a new language. It is so simple that those familiar with it never need waste time decoding."

Great Saving to Nation.

Mr. Dempsey wrote the code under direction from the late George Hodges, then manager of troop movement. The system was perfected in Chicago and put in force just as the United States entered the war. According to Mr. Dempsey, the difficulties in the movement of the troops to the Mexican border had prompted the revision required in troop rtain codes.

Shortly after it was installed, Dempsey claims, the saving in message cost in one railroad office in Chicago was $3,500 for the day. He claims, too, that unless the code had been used telegraphic congestion would have impeded travel everywhere.

"Of course I can't tell you the code," said Mr. Dempsey, "but this is an example. A train dispatcher might get a message, 'Take care of beans.' To him that would mean this: 'Companies C, F, and E of 122d field artillery, bound from Camp Grant to Camp Logan; 48 officers, 221 men, due on my line at a certain time and to be delivered to the other line at a certain junction at a certain time.'

"Color Code" Idea.

Dempsey, who terms the system the "color" code idea, served for the Northwestern lines and first devised a code in the old "rate cutting" days.

Shortly before Mr. Hodges' death last year that official wrote a letter to Charles A. Prouty acknowledging the value of the code that had baffled all enemy attempts to solve it. Speaking of Mr. Dempsey, Mr. Hodges told Prouty, director of public service and accounting for the railroad administration: "He (Dempsey) is conspicuously the most able man in this line in the nation."

For his services in the troop train movement Mr. Hodges was given a posthumonous reward of the Distinguished Service medal.

Red Cross Seal Again Will Go on Packages

New York, Sept. 13.—The executive committee of the National Tuberculosis association met here today to formulate plans for the sale of Red Cross Christmas seals to obtain funds with which to fight the disease. It is hoped to raise $6,500,000 in this way. An educational campaign will be waged throughout the country.

JUDGE STEWART TAKES FARWELL FIGHT TO PULPIT

Judge Hugh R. Stewart, until yesterday holding court at the South Clark police station, will discuss the Chicago Law and Order league before the Garfield Boulevard Presbyterian congregation tonight. Conspicuous among those absent will be Arthur Burrage Farwell, president of the league. For Judge Stewart is going to discuss Mr. Farwell too.

"I'm going to tear the mask from his face tomorrow," said the judge, who from tomorrow on will be stationed at South Chicago.

Mr. Farwell asserts that it was at his instance that the judge was transferred to the "woods." "I made a formal request of Chief Justice Olson that Judge Stewart be transferred to more quiet precincts following his decision that Wolf Silver was not guilty of violating the search and seizure act," he said yesterday.

The judge asserts that it was at his own request that he was transferred from his arduous duties to the far south side.

POLICEMAN FLIES WHEN TOLD OF STORE HOLDUP

Apparently some modern Merlin has ensorcelled the premises at 4500 Calumet avenue, now occupied by the grocery store of A. Polin.

Five men in an automobile last night robbed him of $375. Three previous tenants were visited by robbers—one by safeblowers, twice—and one, a man named Grossfeld, was killed by robbers.

Neighbors said last night that a South Park motorcycle policeman rode away when informed of the Polin robbery.

"To Gild Refined Gold, Add Whiteness to the Lily"—

THE use of platinum for diamond jewelry is appropriate by reason of its color (white) being the best framework for a diamond. To this is added the permanent quality of the metal, its brilliancy and the exquisite effects it takes from skilled, artistic hands. Jewelry represented by mere costliness has been superseded by all the evidences of taste and beauty.

BRITISH, FRENCH, JAPS SECRETLY DEAL OUT ASIA?

New Far East Entente Reported Formed Under Wilson's Nose.

BY J. B. POWELL.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Special Correspondence.]

[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

SHANGHAI, Aug. 20.—It is now pretty well known in the far east that the real cause of President Wilson's failure to make a stand on the Shantung question was due to the attitude of the British, which was dictated not only by the Anglo-Japanese alliance, but also by the secret Japanese-British-French-Italian treaties agreeing to Japan's designs upon the territory of China which were made in 1917, when it looked like Germany might win the war and sentiment in Japan was wavering toward the German side.

It is pretty certain that President Wilson would never have agreed to Japan's claims upon China had not Great Britain backed up Japan. We begin to suspect that at the peace conference when President Wilson was concentrating his attention upon his league of nations, that other things of which he had no knowledge were taking place behind his back.

Reported Basis of Secret Deal.

In brief, it is now generally believed in the far east that a new secret triparty entente regarding Asia was born at the peace conference, and the members of that new alliance are Japan, Great Britain and France. An American intimately connected with the peace conference has supplied the following memorandum pertaining to the conjectural bases of the new agreement:

"There are many indications that the attitudes of the British, French and Japanese governments as expressed by the decision of the council of four on the Kiao-Chou and Shantung questions were determined some time before the formal decision was arrived at, and that the unqualified support given to Japan by the British and French governments in the council of four was based on some definite private agreement by those three governments about a future mutual policy, as well as on the private so-called Shantung agreements made in 1917.

Revival of "Sphere of Influence."

"It is currently but unofficially reported in Paris that an entente, or tri-power private agreement, regarding all Asia has been made by the British, French, and Japanese governments. If this is correct, it scarcely can be doubted that its formula coincides with the status given to Japan in Shantung, and by the Manchurian agreements, which in practice is a definite revival and recognition of the 'sphere of influence' thesis.

"It is utter folly to presume that the British and French governments are not fully informed as to the true character of Japan's policy and actions in China, or that they have any illusions as to its future import and tendency. Therefore, if it proves correct that Great Britain and France have recognized and have agreed hereafter to support Japan's position and policy in the far east, it is conclusive evidence that those powers have decided to accept a Japanese suzerainty over certain regions as a fait accompli.

The Territorial Scope.

"Such information as is obtainable, and the logic of the situation, indicates the territorial scope of the new Asiatic tri-power entente as follows:

"Great Britain—India, Persia, Arabia, Thibet, Burmah, Szechuen province, western Siam, the Kwantung region forming the littoral of Santon, and equality of commercial opportunity in the Yangtze valley.

"France—Yunnan and Kwangsi, Indo-China and Tonkin, eastern Siam.

"Japan—Eastern Siberia, all of China except the regions previously mentioned.

Other Reported Considerations.

"All powers parties to the entente to accord to each other reciprocal commercial opportunities in their spheres, and to respect concessions and investments now existing.

"The entente powers to support France in securing French pre-war investments in Russia.

"The entent powers to support Japan's interpretation of the Lansing-Ishii agreement in case there develops a divergence of policy and viewpoint between the United States and Japanese governments re that instrument.

"The entente powers to support Japan in case a divergence of policy regarding Siberia develops between the United States and Japanese governments.

"The entente powers to support Great Britain's position and policy in India and southwestern Asia.

Reactions on America.

"Such a private (or public) entente would practically eliminate the United States from political influence and commercial equal opportunity in Asia. The previous and present practical operation of the 'sphere' thesis unmistakably demonstrate that.

"In that connection, it is interesting to consider how France can consistently ask (as she is doing) the United States to guarantee her military security in Europe, and to finance her economic reconstruction, while at the same time she is entering a combination to exclude American influence and commerce from Asia, and which will fasten Japanese imperialism on democratic China.

"An analysis of the foregoing outline and the practical conditions by which it of necessity would be given effect, shows plainly that such a combination is directed primarily at American political and economic influence in Asia.

"If such a combination becomes effective, the United States must either submit to its rulings in far eastern affairs, or go to war to maintain its rights.

Effects on China.

"The effect of such an agreement would be to destroy the political autonomy and territorial integrity of China, as is guaranteed by the Hay doctrine and various other international treaties.

"Note—This reported tri-power entente regarding Asia seems to be a direct corollary of and answer to the Monroe doctrine clause in the covenant of the proposed league of nations, which contains a phrase recognizing 'regional understandings,' or words to that effect, and collateral agreements between members of the league, thus giving them validity under the league. It may be impossible, therefore, and surely it will be difficult for the United States or China to appeal to the league of nations for relief from, or to abrogate, such a tri-power entente, which would include a majority of the five great powers which will constitute the real ruling force of a league."

Against U. S. and China.

In practical language, this new triparty entente has just one element in mind, the protection of the mutual interests of Great Britain, France, and Japan in Asia against China and America.

China is on the point of a tremendous development. What Japan has accomplished in the last twenty years in all probability will be duplicated in China in the next ten years. China now needs at least 30,000 miles of new railroads. She is building new cotton mills so fast that the president of the Saco-Lowell company (Massachusetts), builders of cotton mill machinery, recently said that his factory could operate for ten years solely on the orders he has on his books from China. China's present 7,000 miles of railroad, although in the hands of politicians and inefficiently managed, are tremendously prosperous. The entire world is knocking at China's doors for her native products of vegetable oils, wood oils, tea, raw silk, raw cotton, many minerals.

The facts outlined in this article are in the archives of the state department at Washington.

St. Joan of Arc's Statue to Be Unveiled Today

A statue of St. Joan of Arc, who was recently canonized by the Roman Catholic church, will be unveiled at the 10 o'clock mass at Holy Name cathedral, State and Superior streets, this morning. Two "buddies" will draw the curtains. The sermon will be preached by Chaplain George T. McCarthy of Fort Sheridan. The choir of Quigley seminary will sing the service.

Father William Ryan of Everett, Ill., and Arthur Kirk of Chicago gave the statue to the cathedral. It is artistically tinted, stands eight and a half feet high and represents the saint garbed in full armor.

"Negroes Have No Vote" and "Lynching Should Be Prohibited."

BY FREDERICK SMITH.

[Staff Correspondent of The Tribune in the Far East.]

[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

TOKIO, Aug. 21.—"In America," says the Japanese daily newspaper, Yamato, "the Negroes have no vote. If Americans have any conscience they should be ashamed." This appears to revoke the fifteenth amendment to our battle scarred old constitution. But between allies what does an amendment or two amount to?

The Chugai Shogyo, another Japanese daily, remarks that "unless lynching is prohibited (in America) further disturbances may occur."

Here is a suggestion that we should give some consideration. Why not organize a club, or something, to start a fight for the passage of a law against mob law? The newspaper asks why American missionaries should "not try to prevent such a barbarous thing as lynching in their own country before thinking of enlightening Coreans?"

If the same argument applies to automobile bandits, South Water street profiteers, shyster lawyers, and motorists who forget to switch on their tail lights, it seems that Corea is destined to remain in the dark for some time.

An American missionary, just returned from Corea, told me of twenty-three Koreans locked in a church and burned to death in the edifice by Japanese gendarmerie, who suspected the Coreans of being agitators. The Japanese officer who ordered this Roman holiday was "severely punished," according to official report. When the missionary pressed the Japanese governor general of Corea for a definition of "severe punishment" in this case, he finally got the information that the offending officer had had his pay cut in two for a month, his promotion delayed, and his pension reduced. It seems difficult not to say that it served the officer very well right.

A Japanese journalist returned to Tokio from Paris a few days ago and wrote an article in which he compared the morality of Japanese women with that of French and American women. He also compared Japanese sake, a rice wine, with light French wines.

There is a colony of French aviators in Japan at present teaching the Japanese how to fly, and when this article was published all the Frenchmen went up in the air at once. A controversy in the newspapers followed, not the least interesting feature of which was a letter from a Japanese girl who took the French side of it. It is a pleasant digression from the other paramount question: "Who won the war, and, if so, why?"

Red Cross girls are accumulating in Yokohama. They are coming in on this ship and that ship, expecting to go on to Vladivostok. Some of them have been in Yokohama for six weeks. Most of them are trained nurses, and they get a daily expense allowance in addition to a monthly salary. They buy kimonos and ivory beads and take rikisha rides, and have one dance a week with the economic imperialists there foregathered. But the girls want to get to the wilds of Siberia. They ask THE TRIBUNE to tell them why the delay. The battle of Paris is ended; voila, the battle of Yokohama!

WOOD GROOMED AS CANDIDATE AGAINST LOWDEN

General's Friends Seek Control of State's 1920 Delegation.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

Quiet plans are in the making for the entrance of Gen. Leonard Wood as a direct candidate against Gov. Lowden and for control of the Illinois delegation to next year's Republican national convention.

It is known at least one Republican of prominence, who has figured substantially in national politics in former campaigns, has been approached with the flat request that he take on the active leadership of the Wood boom in Illinois, and that he start something without delay.

This man, whose name is not made public at this time, has the matter under consideration. He is in touch with some of the downstate leaders, asking them for advice. Those who have answered, it is learned, have advised him strongly to keep out of the proposition.

Claim State for Lowden.

"Illinois unquestionably is for Lowden, and Gen. Wood cannot hope to do anything worth while," was the answer one of the downstaters gave to the potential Wood manager in Gov. Lowden's home state.

The makeup of the Illinois delegation will be determined at the presidential primary to be held April 13, which is the next big date on the Illinois political calendar.

At this primary candidates for president may have their names directly upon the ballot and voters may indicate their preference, but the results are advisory only, and not binding legally.

Two delegates and alternates will be elected by direct vote in each congressional district.

The revision of the direct primary act made by the last legislature provides that the eight delegates at large and the eight alternates at large shall be chosen at the state conventions to be held in May, instead of by statewide vote, as was the case in 1916.

Will Elect Ward Chiefs.

At the April 13 primary a ward committeeman will be elected directly under the new law in each of the Chicago wards, to hold office for four years.

The country towns in Cook county will be divided into six districts in December. Precinct committeemen will be elected, as at present, in each of the country town precincts, but these, in turn, will meet in each of the six districts and elect a district committeeman, who will sit in the county committee with the same power as a Chicago ward committeeman.

COUNTRY TOWN VOTE TO DECIDE CALUMET RACE

Shaw and Foster to Learn Decision Next Tuesday.

Official returns from the four precincts of the town of Calumet outside of the city limits will tell the story of the Democratic nominations for the constitutional convention in the Thirteenth senatorial district.

The complete totals, by official count of the city precincts in the office of the board of election commissioners, give a lead of two votes only to Frank Foster over Emery M. Shaw. The police returns had show Foster's margin to be 12.

The results from the country towns, which include part of Morgan Park, are locked up in the county clerk's office and will not be canvassed until Tuesday, because of Judge Scully's death. The unofficial claim is that Shaw had a lead of about a dozen over Foster in the four missing precincts, which would give him the nomination.

John J. Poulton is the other Democratic nominee.

Hurley Loses by 24.

Former state senator, Francis A. Hurley, lost the Democratic nomination in the Second district to Anthony D'Andrea by 24 votes, on the official count.

Judges and clerks of the Twenty-third precinct of the Nineteenth ward, who were brought before the election board yesterday, insisted the official count was correct and could not explain the discrepancy of 82 votes between the official and the police returns. This is D'Andrea's home precinct. The official figures were permitted to stand and D'Andrea wins on the face of the returns. Hurley will contest and demand that the ballot box in this precinct be opened.

In the Twenty-fifth senatorial district Michael Dominowski is one of the Democratic nominess instead of Joseph Burke, as indicated by the police returns. Dominowski's official plurality is 79.

"Write In" Nominees.

No Republicans filed petitions in the Fourth senatorial district. Many names were written in. The nominees are Representative Emil O. Kowalski and William C. Smith. Kowalski received 151 votes and Smith 62.

In the Eleventh district William H. Cruden's plurality over Chester W. Church for the second Republican nomination officially is 167.

Official figures in the Thirty-first district give Eugene S. Dupee a lead of 380 over Edward S. Day for the second Republican nomination.

Official proclamation of the primary results will be made Tuesday by the election commissioners. The official canvass made no changes in the list of Chicago nominees, as published Thursday, with the exceptions as noted.

JUDGE GUERIN BURIED; PLAN SCULLY RITES

Great Crowd Attends the Services for Drowned Jurist.

Hundreds of Chicagoans, prominent in legal, political, and business life, yesterday bowed their heads while Judge Henry Guerin, who died last Thursday, was laid away to rest. The funeral was held at 9:30 a. m., with services at the family residence at 5420 Woodlawn avenue, and at 10 o'clock at St. Ambrose Catholic church, East Forty-seventh street and Ellis avenue, solemn requiem high mass was celebrated by the Rev. William F. Foley. There was no sermon.

Judges Pallbearers.

The active pallbearers were: Thomas F. Keeley, Prof. Henry J. Cox, M. W. Murphy, Oliver R. Barrett, Dr. Charles P. Caldwell, and P. J. Lawler. The honorary pallbearers included Chief Justice Orrin F. Carter of the state Supreme court; Chief Justice Harry Olson, Probate Judge Henry Horner, Robert M. Sweitzer, and all of the judges of the Circuit and Superior courts, and many others.

Judge Guerin was drowned in a motor boat accident Thursday at Muskegon, Mich.

Scully Funeral Tomorrow.

The funeral of Judge Thomas F. Scully, who died last Thursday following an operation, will be held tomorrow morning. Services will be held at the residence at 4444 North Campbell avenue, and at Our Lady of the Angels church, Sunnyside and North Western avenues at 10 a. m. The largest gathering of mourners Chicago has ever known is expected at this funeral.

The city council and Mayor Thompson yesterday made arrangements to attend the funeral in a body. Hundreds of policemen and firemen will escort the body. Every political and legal organization in Chicago will attend. All courts will be closed, as will the city hall.

The active pallbearers named for Judge Scully's funeral are: Dennis J. Egan, James F. Sullivan, Joseph P. Rafferty, William A. Cunnea, James McNichols, Charles J. Byrnes, Thomas J. Condon and L. F. Cunniff.

HELD FOR KILLING CHILD.

Michael Sapek, 42 years old, of 952 Austin avenue has been held to the grand jury by a coroner's jury in connection with the death of 6 months old Mary Memitz, also of 952 Austin avenue, who, it is alleged, he killed in a drunken rage. Mrs. Mary Nemitz, mother of the child, is his accuser.

FIRE DEPARTMENT INQUIRY ORDERED BY THE MAYOR

Chief Slated to Go as Result of Quiz, City Hall Hint.

Mayor Thompson yesterday ordered the city civil service commission, of which Capt. Percy B. Coffin is president, "to go to the bottom of the fire department situation."

In city hall circles it was declared openly by those who invariably attend the mayor's council table that the investigation will result in the removal of Thomas O'Connor, the present chief. The same authorities asserted Assistant Chief Edward J. Buckley will be named as the new chief.

Protest "Civilian Rule."

Protests against "civilian rule" in the fire department in the person of John F. Cullerton, manager of properties, and repeated charges that Chief O'Connor, while an efficient fire fighter, is "a child in the hands of a coterie of friends when it comes to departmental administration," led the mayor to order the investigation.

"I only know the mayor has ordered a full, fair, and free investigation," said Capt. Coffin, when asked concerning the order. "I hear there is a smoldering fire in the department which the present heads are unable to put out."

Subpoenas for witnesses who will be heard by the commission will be issued tomorrow. The quiz itself will be begun on Tuesday, Capt. Coffin said.

All the assistant marshals and battalion chiefs who signed the recent petition to the mayor that he veto an ordinance increasing Mr. Cullerton's power are to be ordered before the merit board. Mr. Cullerton also will be called, Capt. Coffin announced.

Among the matters the commission will go into are:

Passage by the city council of an ordinance broadening Mr. Cullerton's power without the knowledge of four-fifths of the aldermen. The ordinance, it is charged, was slipped through the council in what is known as the "omnibus ordinance."

Charges Mr. Cullerton has usurped the powers of Chief O'Connor in issuing orders, making transfers, and restoring to duty members of the department dismissed from the service.

Charges that departmental discipline is lax and that morale has been demoralized by politics.

Alleged friction between the state fire marshal's office and Fire Attorney John R. McCabe on recent arson cases.

Richert May Be Called.

Ald. John A. Richert, who introduced the ordinance "defining" Mr. Cullerton's duties, may be asked to testify before the merit board, it was said. In this connection it was asserted the ordinance created an entirely new job, with virtually the same power as the chief possesses, and that, if it should become law, an examination would have to be held to fill it.

The mayor is expected to veto the ordinance in question when the council meets this fall.

Charles Fitzmorris, the mayor's secretary, replying to an anonymous public statement charging him with being "the head of a clique controlling fire department affairs," said he had never taken any untoward interest in that office. The statement intimated a petition had been sent to the mayor asking him to veto the ordinance defining the duties of Cullerton and that it never reached the mayor. No such petition came into his hands, Mr. Fitzmorris said, adding if it had it would surely have reached its destination.

LORIMER BANK CRASH RE-ECHOES

Shades of the Lorimer bank scandals and the manipulation of the affairs of the Rosehill cemetery by the Munday-Huttig financial group stalked across federal court records again yesterday when Frederick L. Reynolds, a former member of the Munday ring, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy.

The petition sets Mr. Reynolds' assets at $54,251 and his liabilities at $91,965, the majority of the latter being judgments due William C. Niblack, receiver for the La Salle Street Trust and Savings bank.

The judgments, according to the petition, total $32,287. This amount is said to include money borrowed from the bank. The Edgewater State bank, a subsidiary, is creditor for $2,500 and Mandel Brothers are listed for $2,447.

Ptomaine Poison Blamed for Death of Baby Boy, 3

Carl Engstrom, 3 years old, 3814 North Clark street, died in Sheridan Park hospital yesterday, supposedly of ptomaine poisoning. According to the attending physician, Dr. W. A. Jensen, 3700 Southport avenue, he was called to the Engstrom home shortly after 2 o'clock in the morning to find the boy in convulsions. The parents said the boy had eaten some fish and sausages for supper.

As an investment and at the same time a method of saving money on the installment plan, there is no better proposition on the market today than the purchase of real estate in a thriving city like Chicago. Its population is increasing. Its real estate prices have not increased as rapidly as the population increase warranted, so that prices are fully 50 per cent lower generally than they should be, giving the greatest opportunity in years to buy here profitably.

By putting your savings into Garfield Manor you are therefore putting it into something that is permanent, and that should have a big increase in value in the next few years.

The Wm. H. Britigan Organization is offering choice residence lots in GARFIELD MANOR to the people of Chicago on a basis that makes each lot both an investment and a method of saving money.

In the process of gathering riches, Chicago people have always paid much attention to investments in city real estate. As Chicago has grown and developed, tens of thousands of people have made money on real estate. We are now entering into a period of very great real estate activity, and this organization is offering to the people of Chicago this well developed property along lines of growth and transportation. These lots are rare investments—of exceptional value.

RICHES WITHIN OUR GRASP, BUT PUSHED ASIDE

Miles of I. and M. Canal Dead Proposition, Living Expense.

BY EYE WITNESS.

VI: CONCERNING A JOKE IN A BAEDEKER

On Board the Ranger, Bound for Houston.—Sometimes the older the guide book the more illuminating the sidelights, especially if it be a guide book about the swift growing America.

Ever since Leipzig ceased to function as a world publishing center the justly celebrated works of Mr. Baedeker have been both scarce and dear. At McClurg's, in Chicago, a clerk told me they sometimes paid $10 a copy for volumes of an edition a decade old.

So it happened that the only edition of Baedeker's "United States" that I could lay hold of in a hurry was one dated 1904. That book, after describing the Chicago drainage canal as "the greatest feat of sanitary engineering in the world," added: "The canal is also to be used by shipping."

That was printed four years after the water had been turned into the canal.

Still a Prophecy.

Fifteen years have passed since Mr. Baedeker penned his prophetic "to be used," and it remains a prophecy.

After we passed the sanitary district power house at Lockport, sending its 42,000 horse power thirty miles back to Chicago, and the gigantic lock that can lift a 125 foot ship forty feet up from the Illinois and Michigan canal and start it on its way to Lake Michigan, we saw no more hydraulic marvels calculated to cheer the pulsing heart of commerce until we sighted just now, through the haze of noonday heat, the white lines, at once heroic and fairylike, of the power house at Keokuk.

Otherwise our boat has made its solitary way through nearly 300 miles of commercial wastage.

To the east of Lockport lay the deep, wide channel of the drainage canal, a world triumph in its time, but, after twenty years, only a sewer which, except for its potentialities as a ship canal and water power producer, is already outdated by the septic tank. Vide the successful municipal experiments at Houston with such tanks, in which germ eats germ and the result is clear water.

Sanitary District Commissioner William J. Healy knows about those experiments, and it was only a few days ago that he told me that some day, when land becomes less fertile and competition keener, Chicago will comprehend the waste of fertilizer which the drainage canal costs us.

Factoryless Miles.

For mile after mile there is not a sign of a factory, or a lumber yard, or a stone cutting plant, or a village on the spacious banks of this beautifully upkept canal, banks convenient to a great water power created by the people's money and convenient to a great city market.

I have no consuming enthusiasm for factories for the sake of factories. A canal lined with plants would in itself be an unmixed blessing. But the social function of it would be rich in blessing, for it would mean more work, and more work means more wages and more production, and more wages and more production mean more leisure and more leisure means the race's development.

To the south and southwest of Lockport and Joliet, away on into the coal country around La Salle and Spring Valley, it was the same story, only more acute.

Dead of Proposition.

Miles of the Illinois and Michigan canal below Joliet are only miles of dead proposition. Tow paths are overgrown and a 100 foot canal boat is rotting to pieces by the shore. That was typical stuff. At one point in Grundy county there were four canal boats sunk in midstream. And we passed not even a skiff for hours on end.

But we had to go through all the motions of business, showing papers and getting them viséed at every one of the thirteen locks between Joliet and La Salle. It was kind of comical.

A dead proposition, but a living expense. Don't make any mistake about that. A link that connects but does not function.

Across the countryside, well below Joliet and almost within shouting distance of the canal, we saw the long slopes of the gravel pits. What a boon, thought I, would barge transportation be for a business like that. Hughes of Houston, inventor and manufacturer, thought so, too. What he thinks about such a proposition is worth a hundred times what I think, because he knows, and about this proposition he said in his compact way: "They could send a long train load in four or five barges, using one gasoline engine."

Fat Land on Each Side.

At another point in Will county below Joliet the canal is fully a fifth of a mile wide. In Europe that would be a whale of a river and would do a whale of a business. Fat land on each side, rich, rich, rich! But deserted save for the farms. No wharves at the villages, no elevators for wheat, no cranes—only desertion and the upkeep.

As we passed the Kankakee river in Grundy county I dipped again into the instructive Mr. Baedeker, and he said: "Our line crosses the Kankakee river through an ocean of maize."

So did ours, and "ocean of maize" was a good phrase for those swaying, golden miles of corn. And they stand here, thought I, on a waterway leading into the fifth largest city in the world, a city with sixty miles of river frontage, over one-third of which is navigable—and the gasoline propelled barge boat constantly developing and cheapening.

OBITUARY.

HERVEY HOUSE DORR, president of the Merchants' Credit Guide company, died at his home at 6520 University avenue, Friday afternoon. Mr. Dorr was born at Columbia Falls, Me., April 14, 1858, later moving to Stockton, Cal., from which city he came to Chicago in 1894. In 1896 he founded the Merchants' Credit Guide company. He is survived by a widow, Mrs. Frances S. Dorr, and a daughter, Miss Frances Cynthia Dorr. The funeral will be held from the home at 2 p. m. tomorrow, and interment will take place at Mount Hope cemetery.

JUDGE IS GIVEN SURPRISE.

There was a surprise party in the Maxwell street court yesterday. Judge George B. Homes had finished his first term as presiding judge and had been named to take up duties in the civil branch tomorrow when a crowd of men, women, and children filled the dingy courtroom, crying "Surprise!" The judge admitted he was surprised. Then, after leaders of the party had paid tribute to him, he was presented with a set of silverware.

SCHOOL CLUBS ON RIVER TRIP IN CITY'S INTERESTS

Juniors of Commerce Body Study Civic Needs.

BY MAUDE MARTIN EVERS.

The good ship Robert R. McCormick yesterday at 1:30 carried a jolly crew. The Chicago Association of Commerce had invited the junior members to see the city from the Chicago river.

The junior members belong to clubs in all the high schools of Chicago. They have a faculty adviser and a student president and are the promising future citizens who will preside intelligently as well as understandingly over the civic and industrial possibilities of their city.

Sixteen high schools were represented by a faculty adviser, or a student, or the principal—some by all three. The others missed the boat, or intended to go fishing all along.

Photographer Has Trouble.

A photographer, desiring to snap a picture of the intellectual group on education bent, spent fully fifteen minutes in a vain attempt to get four of the lady high school principals to be featured dangling their feet over the edge of the boat.

The boat which made the excursion possible, by courtesy of the Sanitary district, steamed, or chuggity-chugged slowly and windingly [you've seen at least part of the river] westward.

At each large bridge it halted. While the party awaited the bridgetender's leisure much time was allowed to thoroughly inspect the scenery and examine the various species of bridgebuilding.

Sewers as Scenery.

Time there was too to note that the water does not become any more limpid as it curves toward the southwest. Members of the Association of Commerce pointed out the largest and newest of sewers along the way. "Babe" Meigs, chairman of the civic committee, acted as guide. Harvey T. Hill, assistant business manager, circulated among the students and directed youthful minds in useful courses.

Col. George S. Ballard, member of the Board of Commerce, was on board, but he might just as well not have been. Having just received a few moments before embarking the French Legion of Honor, the river sparkled oilily not for him.

But to the students the trip was earnest and sincere. Boys and girls were busy taking notes and not one word of explanation went unheeded.

For, as Mr. Hill sagaciously remarked, few people realize the good that these clubs of the boys and girls in school are doing, not only for themselves but for the community.

Take Hand in Election.

The club in each school is divided into committees.

At the last primary election committees urged voters to vote who probably had never voted before in their lives, or thought about it.

Then they have an employment mitttee, finding jobs for those who cannot finish school without aid.

The educational committee, fire and accident committee, who, not only superintend drills in school, but watch out in their own homes and neighborhood; the lost and found bureau, the book exchange committee, new students' committee, library committee, the old poster committee, which tears down ancient posters hanging about on fences and posts, are all included.

Milo Scully represented the boys from Austin high, and Virginia Dingman the girls from the same school, and both were so intent on reaping full benefit from the lessons before them and jotting down reminders, in order to report in detail to their fellow club members, that neither sat down during the boat ride, although there were chairs in plenty, and the ride was eighteen miles and back.

The Franklin Touring Car

When the owner of the ordinary car begins to buy motoring accessories, it is not for the pleasure of spending. He is registering that his car is not giving the satisfactory performance he expected when he bought it.

The reason Franklin owners don't put money into shock absorbers, thermometers, radiator blankets, etc., is because their cars give satisfaction without them.

The Franklin Car is designed and built to ride comfortably, drive easily and handle safely without assistance. That is why it embodies light weight and flexible construction, basic Franklin principles for over seventeen years. It is so designed as to avoid boiling in summer or freezing in winter. That is why it is direct air cooled (no water to boil or freeze.)

And it is not through luck or accident, that Franklin owners in every part of the United States get:

20 miles to the gallon of gasoline
12,500 miles to the set of tires
50% slower yearly depreciation

If prior experience has limited your expectations, permit us to demonstrate the real possibilities of motoring with the Franklin Car. You may choose the roads.

An Invitation to the Women of Chicago

Autumn 1919

Dear Madam:—

We welcome your attendance during the Autumn Exposition opening tomorrow. Although this is not an exclusive Store for Women, it is a Woman's Store in the sense we highly prize your sound judgment when applied to sound values on merchandise for Men and Boys.

We recognize the fact that you are the "stronger sex" when it comes to appraising woolens, needlecraft, tailoring, linings, trimmings and matchings. Your knowledge of good Clothes is an inheritance from the time of Eve.

Accompany Husband or Boy to this Store. Counsel him in the choosing of his apparel. Tell him what best becomes him. He'll be pleased to have you do so. Womanlike, you will enjoy his enjoyment of it, and do him a service, too.

May we expect you during the Autumn Exposition?

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 13.—[Special.]—Joie W. Ray, the blond haired Illinois A. C. flier, created a new record on Franklin field this afternoon in defending successfully his one mile title in the senior National A. A. U. track and field championships. The little Chicagoan, running one of the best races of his career, traveled over the mile in 4:14 2-5. This clipped the previous record, made by Ray in 1917, by four seconds.

The New York A. C. superiority on track and field was again demonstrated when the winged foot athletes carried off the championship banner with a total of forty-six points, six more than was registered by the Chicago A. A. athletes, who finished second. The Illinois A. C. was third.

Ray Conserves Energy.

Ray thrilled the spectators with his victorious display in the mile. The little Chicagoan ran a characteristic race, contenting himself with a position behind the leaders until within a lap of the finish, then the blond haired runner went away in a burst of speed, his sturdy legs carrying him over the ground as if on wings in the wind. His rivals fought valiantly to overtake him, Eddie Fall Jr. of the Chicago A. A. being among them. But the best Eddie had wasn't good enough against Ray's spectacular performance.

Fall, after leading for three laps, was displaced by the record seeking Ray on the final turn to the tape, and was beaten by a matter of about four yards. Fall, too, bettered the record, being clocked in 4:15.

Ray Beats Baker in Half.

Ray added to his laurels later in the day when he captured the half mile title in a heartbreaking duel with Homer Baker of the Glencoe A. C., champion at this distance in 1913 and 1914. The strong limbed Illinois runner, flashing past the roaring crowd in a dazzling burst of speed, jumped Baker on the last turn and flew over the home stretch to a victory by about seven yards. Eddie Hall, Chicago A. A., was second. Ray's time was 1:56 4-5, two seconds slower than the championship record.

Ray was not the only athlete to register a record breaking performance. John Murphy of the Multnomah A. C. of Portland, Ore., in annexing the running high jump, cleared the bar at 6 feet 3 3-16 inches, three-sixteenth of an inch better than the previous record jump, made in 1911 by H. Grumpelt of the New York A. C.

Battle in Points Is Close.

Today's battle for the club honors was one of the closest of years, the result hinging on the outcome of the final event. Previous to the javelin throw, Chicago A. A. was leading by a score of 40 to 38, but George Bronder successfully defended his title, and was followed by Jim Lincoln. who took second place. The points in this event decided the issue in favor of the New York A. C.

BROOKES BEATS NET CHAMPION, STRAIGHT SETS

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

Three exciting matches, each a feature, ended the two day's program of international tennis contests between Australian and American stars at the South Shore country club yesterday. In doubles, the Chicago team of Walter T. Hayes and Ralph H. Burdick, three times formerly the western sectional champions, defeated Randolph Lycett and R. V. Thomas of Australia, 6-3, 8-6.

Two singles contests were decided. In the first, Norman E. Brookes, the 42 year old Melbourne, Australia, Davis cup player, conquered William M. Johnston, United States national singles champion, in straight sets, 7-5, 7-5. Brookes kept the large gallery in a steady patter of applause by his alert work, handling Johnston's hard forehand drives with interest. His volleying, and quick command of shifting play on the court, were remarkable to watch.

Patterson Wins Over Davis.

The other singles contest was a terrific duel of violent stroking between Gerald L. Patterson, the 23 year old Melbourne "hurricane," and Willis E. Davis, the young San Franciscan. Patterson won in three sets, 4-6, 6-2, 6-3, but only after the two had battled all over the court with their crashing strokes.

Where the science of Brookes and Johnston delighted the gallery a half hour before, the bullet service of Davis, and the tremendous lawford drives of Patterson had the crowd of 1,800 tennis fans at times in an uproar of applause.

Plays Battering Game.

Patterson began the match at full speed, and played his battering game the whole way. There was none of the jockeying for openings which marked the Brookes-Johnston match, as both Patterson and Davis preferred to put full power into each shot, hazarding everything on the chance of making a "kill." This resulted in each player's being taken out of position many times on his opponent's return, but with each stroke so violently the match could be nothing but stirring and spectacular.

Patterson's whirling backhand lawford drives, which crossed the net with tremendous "top," and fell deceptively, gave him the advantage to start, and he ran up three games. Then Davis took command, winning four straight games on his rifle-like drives, with an occasional sharp cross-court chop. In two games he earned the deciding point with a clean service ace which safely disposed of the point before Patterson could lift his racket. A similar spectacular ace won him the final point of the set, 6—4.

Throws Rival Off Streak.

In the next two sets, Patterson kept forcing the play, and managed to throw the San Franciscan off his streak of extraordinary sharp shooting. The unaccountable breaks taken by the Australian's fast dropping lawfords caused Davis to net many returns.

His crack service and a number of timely passing shots, which sizzled past Patterson when the latter was taking the net, kept Davis prominently in the fight. He lost as many points by errors of judgment as by nets and outs, missguessing several of Patterson's lobs for outs, and permitting the

GUS THE BUS ON WHEELS.

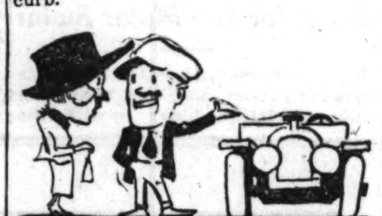
GUS the Bus was waiting at the alley exit for Evelyn the Exquisite Checker to emerge. She had accepted his first invitation since disarmament to restore his ante bellum custom escorting her home occasionally.

"These way, plitz, Missus Effelyn," said Gus, with fluent gallantry, as he held one hand imposingly on his breast and with the other grandiloquently gestured toward a shiny tin car at the curb.



"Where d'you get that extravagant idee o' taxis in these days o' famine an' prosperity?" asked Evelyn.

"Taxi? Mine dear lady, that there don't no taxi."

"Well, whose boat is it—and what the——"

"She is belonging to me, fair lady."

"You? An auto?"

"Well, I wouldn't exactly say a autos, but a flifer. I am buy him out of mine safings, and she is some hot dog."

"Hooray. An' who does the drivin'?"

"Me. I'm take lessons two days and now I'm be a shover like anything. I could start her nearly efery time, I could turn corners on two wheels and I could nearly throw her in reverse. You take no chantzes, lady, with Gus by the wheel."

"I s'pose I got to risk it. All my life with you has been more or less of a riot o' confusion an' close calls."

She stepped in. Gus slipped neatly beside her and began to step on things, turn little levers, push black buttons. But no go.

"Sure you got gas?" asked she.

"Haf I got gas? I'm buy today for a dollars gas."

"What kind?"

"Red Seal."

"That ain't gas—that's champagne."

"I mean Red Crown. Tchampagne would be, I think, more euconimical."

"What do they nick the kick for gas t'day?"

"A quarter."

"A quarter of what for how much?"

"A quarter of a dollar for I think a quarter of a quart."

"An' how does the insect inhale it—in a highball, or does it go down neat?"

"How I should know? The garatcher I gif him a smackers an' I say him shoot in the jazzbo, bo, the jazzbo. And he shoots her."

"Well, why doesn't she start?"

"Maybe I'm step on the wrong instrument. Ah! She ketches. See?"

And off they crawled, the sweat gushing from every pore of Gus' freckled face, the little engine groaning and squeaking, Evelyn's heart in her mouth—and the world before them.

MAN O' WAR WINS RICH FUTURITY LIKE CHAMPION

New York, Sept. 13.—[Special.]—Running with the ease and grace becoming a real champion, the Glen Riddle farm's great Man o' War captured the rich Futurity at Belmont Park today, adding $26,650 to his earnings for the year and at the same time closing the most brilliant season enjoyed by a 2 year old since the days of Colin.

It was scarcely more than a gallop for this remarkable son of Fairplay, which was quoted at 1 to 2. The best juveniles the season has brought out were matched against him, but he never gave his hundreds of supporters a moment of uneasiness from the time the barrier went up. At the finish he was three lengths in front of John P. Grier, at 6 to 1, one of the three sent to the post by Harry Payne Whitney, while Dominique, at 9 to 2, took third with an advantage of but a neck over W. R. Coe's Cleopatra.

It was a great day for Man o' War and the 20,000 who saw him win, most of whom either supported or fancied the colt. When Jockey Johnny Loftus, who has ridden Man o' War in most all of his races, brought the colt back to the judge's stand after the race, the winner was accorded an enthusiastic reception.

The one disappointment of the day was in the running of the new Jockey Club stakes, which had its inaugural. This race, a weight for age event at a mile and a half, should have been second in importance only to the Futurity, but lacked even the elements of a contest, for all the entries were scratched except Sam C. Hildreth's Purchase, which ran the distance alone and drew down the winner's share of the purse, amounting to $5,350, for his jaunt around the course.

$10,000 EVEN MONEY BET ON SOX AND REDS

BETTING odds on the coming world's series between White Sox and Reds were established at even money yesterday in the first wagering of consequence since the two teams practically clinched the pennants in their respective leagues.

A Cincinnati commission of $10,000, wired to a local brokerage house, was covered in five minutes by Board of Trade men, and the Cincinnati house was asked for more money to be placed Monday.

Eddie Heeman, White Sox rooter, acted as commissioner for both parties. The 010,000 was allotted among six White Sox admirers. One Gleason partisan covered $5,000, another took $2,000, two $1,000 each, and two $500 each.

GIANTS WIN, 2-0, BEATING CARDS

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 13.—Nehf allowed only three scratch hits and blanked St. Louis today, New York winning, 2 to 0. Not a local player got beyond first base. The Giants were held to six hits, but they bunched three of these with two stolen bases in the sixth for two runs. Score:

REDLEGS LUCKY TO DIVIDE BILL; ERROR HELPFUL

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 13.—The Boston Braves held the Reds to an even break in a double header today. Cincinnati won the first game on three hits, when Smith dropped Neale's fly ball with the bases full and two out in the fifth inning and three runs scored. But for this error the Reds would have been shut out by Scott who outpitched Ruether. The score was 3 to 2.

In the second game Ring was hit freely while Causey was effective. Ring was knocked off the slab in the seventh inning and Luque finished the game. In the ninth Kopf's single and Duncan's triple put the Reds one run behind with a man on third and no one out, but Causey prevented the scoring of the tying run and Boston won, 4 to 3. Score:

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 13.—Pittsburgh won both games of a double header today from Philadelphia, 4 to 1 and 2 to 0. Smith was hit hard and timely in the first game, while Carlson held the visitors to two hits, which came in the first inning and secured their only run. Adams kept the Philadelphia hits scattered in the second game. Scores:

ALEX'S PITCHING BOOSTS CUBS TO WIN OVER ROBINS

Bruins Bunch Enough Hits on Mamaux to Cop by 2 to 1 Score.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Grover Alexander came back after only one day of rest and gave the Brooklyn Robins a beating at the north side yesterday, 2 to 1, thus keeping the Cubs in the fight for third place and the prospective $400 apiece. Pittsburgh won a couple of combats and gained a half a game, but Mitchell's men still lead by an entire contest and are regaining some of their old pep in the heat of the fight.

Aleck was hurling the kind of ball that is good to look upon. For seven innings he set the visitors down without once being in any great danger. The two runs his mates had belted home in the early round were plenty to win. The Robins, with a bit of luck, got one in the eighth inning, but that didn't worry the big hurler a bit.

Alex at Best in Ninth.

In the ninth he showed just how great a pitcher he is when Big Ed Konetchy led off with a screaming two bagger to let center. Hickman went out to run for Koney and Baird sacrificed. In this pinch, with a runner on third and only one out, Aleck fanned Krueger, and Krueger is no slough hitter, either. He then walked Mitchell, who came up as pinch hitter, then caused Olson to pop one up, and the game was over.

Al Mamaux, eccentric but speedy, opposed Aleck on the slab and was hit rather hard in the first half of the game. Toward the finish he was effective, but the Cubs had their two runs then and Aleck saw to it that two were plenty. Mamaux was in a lot of trouble until some one smashed a hot one at him and injured a finger. It required some time to get the finger back in working order, but after that Al pitched much better ball.

Cubs Poor on Bases.

Some nifty hitting by Barber, Killefer, and Merkle did most of the business for the Cubs. Altogether the north siders got only eight blows off Mamaux, but they made good use of three or four of them, and if they hadn't done some daring base running they might have had another run or two. It just seems impossible for the Cubs to run the bases as they should be run in the big league.

It was Barber who started the first fuss that produced any results. In the second inning he was first man up and cracked one to right center for two bases. Magee immediately put him on third with a bunt and he jogged home when Killefer poled safely to center.

Merkle Doubles in Pinch.

In the next round there was a splendid opening, but only one run got across. Bill McCabe began with a walk and Hollocher bunted him down to second. Herzog singled to left, but Barber only made third base because there was danger of the ball being caught. In this pinch Merkle drove a beauty to the fence in left center. Zack Wheat got close enough to the drive to get his hands on the ball, but it got away for a two sacker and McCabe trotted home. Herzog attempted to score, but a perfect relay of Wheat's peg by Olson nailed Buck at the plate.

After that splurge it looked as if the Cubs might have a soft time of it, but as it turned out they had to use exertion and precaution in order to make those two runs win. Aleck's pitching kept them safe, although in the eighth the enemy did get a man around when Mamaux opened with a single. He advanced on Olson's out, then Johnston fanned, but Griffith got an infield single and Zack Wheat poled a vicious one to left, sending Mamaux home. Score:

GEERS THROUGH AS TURF PILOT

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 13.—It is probable that Edward F. (Pop) Geers, "grand old man" of the trotting turf, has driven his last race.

Despite his grit and determination in declaring he will "be out in a week or two and driving again," physicians here tonight feared a broken collar bone and slight concussion of the brain in Geers' 69th year might force the veteran driver to keep off the track.

Geers, who was in the midst of his most successful season on the grand circuit, was hurt in a smash-up on the track here on Monday. As soon as Geers regained consciousness at a hospital he announced he would be holding the lines within two weeks.

Notes

Those once militant Phillies come today for a three game series in three days.

Just to show one how impressive was the world's series of one year ago, a fellow called up last night and asked if one was played and what teams had played and who won. And he stated that a friend had wagered him 2 to 1 that there wasn't any series in 1918.

The Cubs will barnstorm in the middle of this week, being booked at Grand Rapids, Wednesday and Beloit Thursday, providing it doesn't rain and make it necessary to stay here and play an ordinary game with the Phillies.

A lot of outside cities are seeking a game with the Cubs after the season is over, but all of them demand that Alexander pitch and Killefer catch. Both of these stars have signed up to write expert accounts of the world's series, so the barnstorming may be put on the blink.

Judging from the size of the crowd yesterday the fans have quit going to games in order to save up enough to buy a seat for one of the world's series games. There were about 5,000 out, a regular wash day gathering.

Lee Magee nearly heaved a run in for the enemy in the fifth when, with one out and Baird on first, he threw Krueger's bounder to right field in attempting a force play at second base. Aleck fanned the next guy and got out of trouble.

NOTES

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 13.—[Special.]—One more game here on Monday.

The White Sox now have only twelve more games to play and can lose six of them.

At the climax of the scrap after the Sox had pulled their second sensational double play a fan back of the bench offered to bet his roll that they would win the world's series in "four straight." Nobody took him, which shows how little Philadelphians read the papers, because it will take "five straight" to win the coming world's series.

Lowdermilk started the lucky third, which really won the game. He popped a fly to Witt, who muffed it squarely. Liebold and Collins singled, filling bases with none out. Weaver's grounder let Lowdermilk home, but Jackson popped out. Felsch then delivered a telling punch. It was a triple to right good for two runs and the lead.

The Sox made only two more hits than the Athletics did, but made far better use of them by pulling stuff on the kids in the pinches.

By giving his two pitching aces a rest, Manager Gleason figures he may be able to cinch the championship in New York by using them there.

Jackson got only a base on balls in four chances, but robbed Griffin and Galloway of bast hits by good catches in the third and sixth.

Wingo tried to hit the score board with a wallop in the eighth, but Felsch copped it on the run in brilliant fashion.

BUNCHED SWATS, WALKS, MISCUES, SCORE TRIUMPH

Lowdermilk Goes Route, Getting Good Support by His Mates.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 13.—[Special.]—After giving the Athletics a handicap of two laps the White Sox came from behind so fast today they passed the Mack Infants in the third round and won, 8 to 2, putting another nail in the league pennant.

Grover Lowdermilk was assigned the task of subduing the kids, and at first it looked as if 13 was his unlucky number, for the locals stung him for a double, triple, and single in the first two innings, and those, with the aid of a pass, were good for two tallies. In the meantime a kid right hander by the name of Jim Zinn was blanking the Gleasons.

Error Paves Way to Runs.

In the third, with the aid of a bad muff by Witt, one of Mack's "veterans," the budding champions combed Mr. Zinn for three runs and batted him out of the game in the fourth. Naylor tried to stop them and was successful until the sixth, when a double squeeze play, engineered by Schalk, scored two more runs and after that the Gleasons played horse with the Macks.

That double header squeeze was one of the day's features and demonstrated what a busher is likely to do when up against the real thing. The Sox had Felsch on third and Risberg on second by virtue of two singles and a wild chuck by Wingo, with one down. Schalk hung up the hit and run sign, then dumped past Naylor to Galloway.

Risberg Surprises 'Em.

Felsch was across the plate when the shortstop got the ball and Risberg was rounding third. Galloway turned toward second, looking for the Swede, who kept right on racing for the plate, and before they could awaken the holder of the pill it was too late to get Risberg. Schalk, in the meantime, reached first in safety.

Buck Weaver stood the kids on their heads by a comical play in the seventh, which also was good for two runs. Leibold was on third and Collins on second because Nemo led with a double and Naylor made a bad throw on Collins' attempt to sacrifice, then let Eddie steal second. Weaver deposited a Texas leaguer in short right. Leibold scored on it and Weaver overran first so far that he was trapped. But he doubled and twisted back and forth like a rabbit with the Mack kids pegging the ball frantically to and fro and trying to hold Collins on third at the same time. Finally Weaver ducked back to first safely and Collins scored. Loud guffaw was emerged from the stands.

Holds Macks After Second.

Lowdermilk held the Athletics successfully after the second round. They made four more hits off him, and the official scorer gave Risberg a boot on a nasty bounder which even he could not negotiate, but a pair of double plays wrecked both chances the locals had to count. They were staged by Risberg, Collins, and Gandil in spectacular fashion. In one of them Collins took Risberg's throw on the head run over second, wheeled, and while in the air relayed the ball to Gandil ahead of the batsman. The bugs stood up and cheered them when they raced to their dugout.

Mack used the usual flock of pinch hitters in the eighth and ninth without disturbing Lowdermilk in the least, but the switch brought Naylor to the slab for the last two rounds and the Sox could not score off him. Score:

AMATEURS OPEN BASEBALL PLAY FOR LOCAL TITLE

Thor's Victory Over Meyers Features Start for Litsinger Cup.

More than 18,000 devotees of amateur baseball gathered at Grant park yesterday to watch the first round games for the Edward R. Litsinger trophy, emblematic of the Cook county amateur championship. Uncle Sam upset the schedule by refusing to permit play on the diamond until after the departure of the Cleveland air mail, and this delay prevented the Victor Electrics and Mark A. C. from meeting, but pennant winners of eight other circuits battled as scheduled.

The feature of the opening round was the 22 to 6 walloping handed the Meyers, champions of the Clothiers' league, by the pennant winning Hurley Thors of the Austin-Cicero circuit. Wahl Eversharps, Merchants' league, eliminated Stewart Warners, Manufacturers' league, 6 to 2, and the Independent Packing Company of the Commercial league upset Comptometers, Mercantile league, 8 to 4, in the other games. # CINCY FAN ASKS JURY PROBE OF SERIES TICKETS

Profiteering Charged After Prices for Big Games Are Announced.

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 13.—Louis E. Capelle, prosecuting attorney of Hamilton county, received a letter today, signed "West End Fan," in which complaint was made against the prices fixed for the world's series games to be played here and the method of awarding reserved seats.

"It is evident that profiteering is now on in the advance sale of the tickets," the writer of the letter charged. "The prices are 400 per cent higher than for the season games.

"The idea in the plan of drawing ought to be the subject of a grand jury investigation. I regard it as a prohibitive scheme for the man of ordinary means. The fans are being 'gouged' by profiteers of the Cincinnati baseball club.

"This matter has not been handled by the national commission, but by the Cincinnati club."

The letter was turned over to Assistant United States District Attorney James R. Clark.

Garry Aims to Please.

August Herrmann, president of the Cincinnati club, announced today that in the event there are fourth and fifth games in Cincinnati those persons awarded reserved seats for the first three games will not be considered in the allotment of seats for the later games.

The plan was decided on by the club directors as the best way of accommodating the greatest number of the public wishing to see at least one of the contests.

"No more applications for any of the games to be played in this city will be received after Monday noon," Herrmann said. "If the Reds clinch the pennant the awarding of reserved seats for the first three games at Cincinnati will be made as soon as possible after we are sure of the victory.

Keep List of Unlucky Ones.

"The applications of the unsuccessful fans will be kept and if there is a fourth game here reserved seats for it will be awarded along the same plan as that for the first three games. If there is a fifth game, the rule will apply for it."

During the morning there was a steady stream of applicants for world series reserved seats at the offices of the Cincinnati club, but there was not the rush experienced on Friday.

GLEN VIEW PRIZE TO HENNEBERRY IN TWA DAY PLAY

Shows Real Scotch Thrift by Conserving Strokes in Annual Event.

BY JOE DAVIS.

Recovering from a recent slump, President George F. Henneberry, Jr., proved himself the most canny competitor in the "Twa days" tournament at the Glen View. Displaying genuine Scotch thrift in the conservation of strokes, he finished the 72 holes of play with a total of 319, leading Knowlton L. Ames, also of Glen View, by five shots.

At the end of the morning round yesterday, Ames had a total of 238 and it looked as if he would win the Laigh and Lang trophy for low gross, but he opened the afternoon round with a 7 and after taking 42 to the turn, required 44 to get home.

Henneberry also won the first flight trophy, defeating C. A. Donnell of Glen View, 3 to 1, in the final, and as he elected to take the Auchtermuchty trophy, the prize for this flight, the Laigh and Lang reward for low gross reverted to Ames.

Trophy to J. H. Fall.

Emulating the example of the president, Secretary J. H. Fall, Jr., won the Ben McDhuie trophy, defeating Frank A. Rehm, Glen View, 1 up. Glen View members won the first four flight prizes and five of the remaining twelve.

The leading gross scores were: G. F. Henneberry, Jr., 82-80-78-79—319; K. L. Ames, 77-82-79-86—324; F. A. Rehm, 81-82-84-89—336; T. Miller, Chicago, 86-85-84-81—336; W. W. Willits, Old Elm, [illegible]-83-82-84—340; W. C. Winter, Onwentsia, 173-167—340; W. H. Kidston, Glen View, 89-81-83-88—341; A. W. Brand, Lake Geneva, 86-87-78-91—342.

Kidston Also Victor.

As no player could take more than one prize, several of the awards reverted to players finishing second. C. B. Moore of Glen View won the Laigh and Lang prize for low net at seventy-two holes at 305. W. H. Kidston, took the Barley Bree trophy for choice score for the two rounds yesterday, getting 75.

The Roderick Dhu trophy went to S. H. Hodge of Glen View with a net of 78 for the morning round, and M. Paul Noyes of Indian Hill took the Rob Roy prize, for the best net score yesterday, his card reading 74-73—147. The Ben Cruachan prize for low net in the afternoon went to H. S. Manchester with a net of 73. Dave Noyes won the prize for southpaw players, with 92-10-82.

Coulter Makes Eagle Two.

An eagle two on the home hole, 306 yards, gave John H. Coulter of Exmoor the Birkie trophy for the best hole during the tournament. Armand W. Brand won the putting event and A. B. Schuttler the Spleuchen trophy, J. J. Charles annexing the Whustle Binkie trophy for the choice score at five holes. Summary:

AUCHTERMUCHTY TROPHY.

C. A. Donnell, Glen View, defeated T. Miller, Chicago G. C., 1 up.

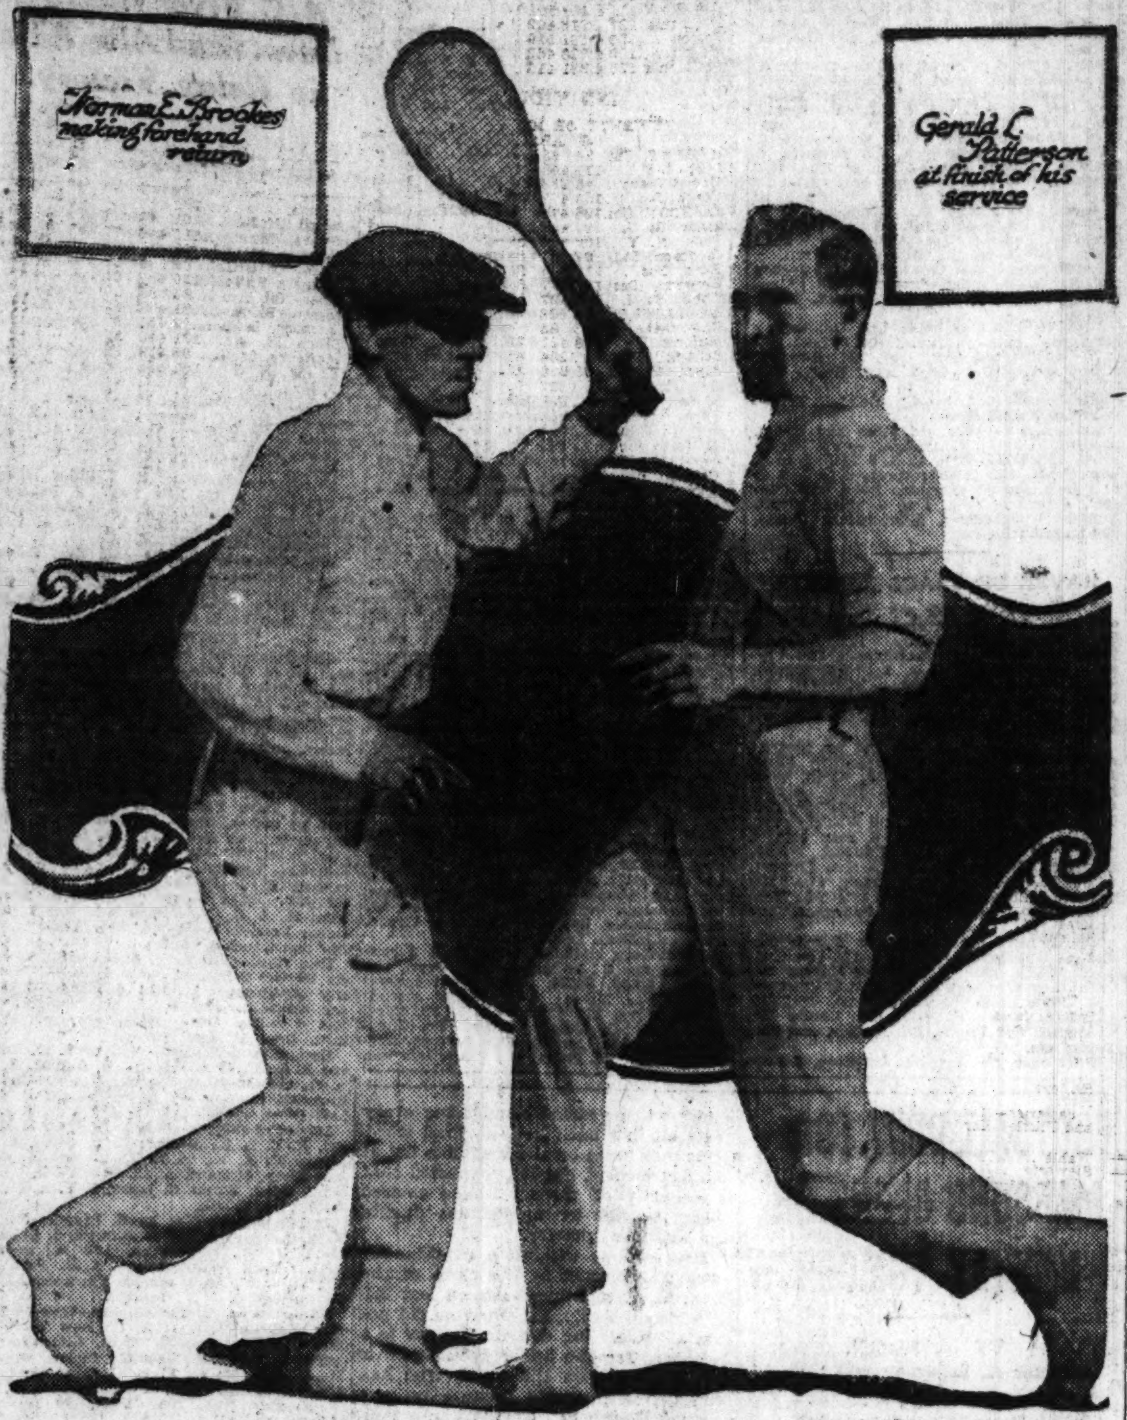
Veteran and Youngster from Antipodes, Who Lifted American Doubles Title, as Seen on South Shore Country Club Courts



Norman E. Brookes making forehand return
Gerald L. Patterson at finish of his service

SELDOM, if ever, has the club championship at South Shore been decided by a closer margin than that which obtained yesterday, when George D. Patterson defeated George W. Mosher on the home green. While it was a case of "let George do it," the definite result was much in doubt until Patterson played a par 3 on the eighteenth hole against Mosher's 4.

Patterson, at the eleventh green, held an advantage of 3 up, but Mosher squared matters at the fifteenth hole. The next two were halved, and Patterson finally won with perfect figures on the home hole. Patterson's medal card was 35—36—71, while Mosher had 36—37—73.

In the ball sweepstakes, match play against bogey, with three-quarters handicap applied, D. P. Robertson [17], finished 8 up for the first prize. A. R. Camp [12] checked out 4 up, while H. M. Sedgwick [9] and F. M. Bobo [14] tied at 3 up for third and fourth places.

TENNIS CHAMP PLAYS ROUND OF GOLF FOR "REST" BEFORE MATCH

WHEN Norman E. Brookes, famous Davis cup veteran, arrived at the South Shore Country club Friday to get in trim for the international tennis matches, the first thing to draw his comment of approval was not the grandstand tennis courts, scene of the groundkeepers' tender labors for a week, but the fairways of the South Shore club golf links.

Brookes' traditional serious, wrinkled face broke into a smile. He took a nap to ease the strain of traveling from Toronto, and later in the day was seen in a borrowed golf outfit, forgetting the worries of the important doubles tennis play in which he and Capt. Gerald Patterson played the American stars, Johnston and Griffin, in a genial round of golf.

The other Australians also are golfers to taper off the more serious strain of tennis, which in a season's strenuous campaigning in important fixtures is the most frequent cause of tennis "upsets" and wildness.

latter to pass him with cross court volleys from the net, when the ball seemed destined to land near the alley line.

There was considerably more science in the match which Brookes won. Billy Johnston was not in his best form. This is indicated by his serving of eight double faults. Nevertheless, his forehand drives, particularly down the side lines, were effective. He passed Brookes this way time and again. It was almost necessary for Johnston to make a clear placement to win a point; for whatever Brookes could connect his racquet with was almost sure to speed back over the net for a well placed return.

The veteran took a particularly difficult position to defend, in just the middle of the court, but held this place stanchly, preventing lobs over his head and allowing him to slip forward to the net for a killing volley. He kept the United States champion on the move by alternating his drives from one side to the other.

This prevented Johnston's getting a square footing for his famous forehand drives, and as a consequence the American sent many balls into the net, instead of skimming over it. It was the totaling of such errors that beat the American.

Local Team Plays Well.

Hayes and Burdick, thrice former western doubles champions, played the first time this year as teammates. They seemed to recover all the old coordination just when needed, and covered the whole court well. Hayes was particularly effective in the back court, while Burdick defended the net. Lycett's drives were the best asset of the Australian team, and he passed the Chicagoans many times. The Aussies could not seek out any permanent weakness in the local team, however, and it was a losing, although plucky, fight for them.

Lycett and Thomas prepared to leave for St. Paul and Minneapolis immediately after the match. They will play tournaments there and in other western cities before sailing for Australia. Patterson and Brookes, who will sail from San Francisco Oct. 2, expect to leave this city today with Johnston, Davis and C. J. Griffin of Australia. Patterson and Brookes may play in Australia.

Pulling and Slicing Possible in Imperfectly Played Putts

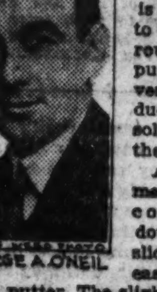
BY GEORGE A. O'NEIL.

Slicing and pulling are commonly recognized as undesirable features that accompany drives and long shots through the green when imperfectly played. It is not so well known that they also often accompany imperfectly played putts.



GEORGE A. O'NEIL.

Failure of the ball to keep the true line and drop into the hole as planned may be due, as the player is always tempted to declare, to some roughness in the putting green, but very often it is due simply and solely to the way the ball was hit.

A few experiments will soon convince any doubter that a slice or a pull is easily produced with a putter. The slightest movement of the putter across the line of direction at the moment of contact with the ball, the slightest deviation of the face of the putter from a position perpendicular to the line of direction, the slightest tendency to carrying the putter back in a curved back swing, may result in a sliced or a pulled put.

Face the Putter Squarely.

Be very careful, therefore, first, to face the putter squarely toward the hole; second, to swing back exactly in the prolonged line of direction and not in a horizontal curve; third, not to check the stroke at the moment of contact, but to let the club head follow the ball.

Sliced or pulled strokes are naturally more common and more easily seen in long putts than in short ones. This is due, of course, to the greater force required in the stroke, and the difficulty is especially likely to develop when a player whose putts have been stopping short of the hole makes a special effort to be up.

Fault Not With Eye.

When a player finds that he is regularly playing to one side of the hole—say to the right—the fault lies probably not in his eye, but in his stroke. If the fault were due to the eye, there would probably be as many errors to the left as to the right. The remedy is to play the stroke better—that is, with fore accurate back swing and a truer follow through.

Long putts are so spectacular and so satisfying that no player can resist the temptation to try for them when opportunity offers. And it is right to try for them. If direction has been judged with absolute accuracy the ball will go in if it reaches the hole and is not hopping along too fast. But the ambitious player should always bear in mind that it is usually better to hole out in two than in three, and should consider where the ball will rest after the first putt if it doesn't hole out.

Make Long Putt "Useful."

A long putt should therefore always be played so that if it does not go down it will come to rest on the other side of the hole and near enough to make the next putt a certainty. The best slogan for a long putt is "Make it useful." And the best way to do this is to give the ball a chance to go down and at the same time to play safe.

But, after all, the short putts are more important than the long ones. Therefore it is to them the player should devote his special attention. He should become practically certain of holing all putts of five feet and less and nearly all under eight feet.

Main Factor Is Confidence.

The main factor in holing these is perfect confidence, and perfect confidence comes from success. But perfect confidence must not be allowed to degenerate into overconfident carelessness. Every putt, no matter how short, should be played with decision and firmness of stroke—and with a clear picture of the ball as actually going into the hole!

Every player knows that uphill putts must be played firmly, in order to reach the hole. Many do not realize that down hill putts must also be played firmly. More down hill putts fail from being played timidly than from any other one cause. A timidly played ball nearly always stops short of the hole or fails to keep its direction.

For Side Hill Putts.

In playing side hill putts it is better to try to picture the whole path of the ball than to calculate an allowance for the slope. Remember that the path of the ball will not be a regular curve, but will curve more sharply as the speed of the ball dies away. Memories of previous strokes will enable you to make the picture accurate.

Stymies can be played around the opponent's ball or over it. The length of the putt and the relative positions of the balls and the hole will determine which plan should be adopted. When the balls lie near together it is obviously best to jump the opponent's ball. This is best done with a mashie-niblick or pitcher. The club should be swung back low and precisely in the line of direction.

Study Cause of Failure.

The stroke should be played firmly and the club head allowed to follow through without turning. The stroke, though really easy, is one of which most players are afraid until practice has given them confidence.

INVADER TAKES OPEN REGATTA IN FIELD OF 16

Chicago Yacht Club's Feature Revived After Two Years.

Leonard Lambin's raceabout, Invader, of the Lincoln Park Yacht club, romped away with first honors in yesterday's open regatta of the Chicago Yacht club, an event that marked the return of the Grant Park organization to the racing game after a hiatus of two seasons.

Sixteen boats of the Chicago, Jackson Park, Lincoln Park, and Columbia clubs started in the regatta and all of them finished. The weather was clear and a fresh fifteen mile breeze from due east enabled the racers to cover the triangle in good time.

Diamond Leads Twenty Footers.

The first leg to the four mile crib was a beat, the second to the Harrison crib was a reach, while the final back to the Van Buren street gap was a spinnaker run.

Invader's ample time allowance gave it the best corrected figures of the fleet. The little twenty foot sloop Diamond of the Jackson Park Yacht club, winner of the recent cruising race of that organization to Michigan City, won in its class.

Omoo Class Winner.

Omoo of Jackson Park was the winner in the mixed yawl and schooner class. Edith II. of Jackson Park annexed the honors in the twenty-one foot cabin division. Mildred II. of Jackson Park won out in the thirty foot sloop class, and Illinois of Lincoln park barely won from Intrepid in the thirty-five foot sloop division. Summary:

Popularity Based on Performance

Today's transportation needs require an all-around ability from the motor car. It has been in fully satisfying this need that the Oakland Sensible Six has established itself firmly in the preferences of more than 100,000 owners.

The tremendous number of Oakland Sensible Sixes, now seen everywhere, does not indicate individual preference simply for the Oakland style in body lines, or simply for the Oakland high speed overhead-valve six cylinder engine, or simply for the scientifically balanced Oakland chassis.

This wide-spreading popularity is based on nothing less than a recognition of the combination of power, strength, ability, comfort and economy in the Sensible Six that makes it so immensely useful and enjoyable at the same time.

Oakland owners, as a class, have demonstrated that the Sensible Six embodies the engineering principles that afford the utmost in automobile transportation at the minimum of cost. For example, they ride 18 to 25 miles on a gallon of gasoline and 8,000 to 12,000 miles on tires.

A New Sedan of Time-Proven Worth

All those virtues which have established Oakland reputation on so high a plane are blended in this new four door Sedan, and it embodies additional features of arrangement and equipment which intensify its appeal to careful purchasers.

The materials and workmanship in Oakland closed cars, the sedan and coupe, evidence a value which could not be attained without the enormous resources and experience back of the Oakland Sensible Six.

BIG TEN FRAMES HEAVY SCHEDULE IN BASKETBALL

Most Schools Take Maximum of 12 Games for Coming Season.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Anticipating the most successful year since basketball was recognized as a major college sport, athletic directors and basketball coaches of the western conference universities held their annual meeting yesterday at the Auditorium hotel to draw schedules for the winter game.

With few exceptions, the maximum number of twelve games were scheduled. Coach Elliott of Northwestern was only able to slate eight, but expects to fill out his schedule with other nearby quintets. Teams which in the past have struggled for the championship will meet each other, so there will be little trouble to determine the best five at the close of the season.

Maroons and Gophers Friendly.

Although rumors were rife following the football meeting last winter that Chicago and Minnesota had broken athletic relations because Stagg and Williams did not schedule a game this fall, the best of feeling prevailed between Dr. L. J. Cooke of Minnesota, and Pat Page of Chicago, who slated a home and home game.

The officials had a lot of trouble owing to the absence of Ward Lambert of Purdue, who failed to receive notice of the meeting. A dummy schedule was used for Purdue and the "boilermaker" five was given ten Big Ten games. Some of the teams will be compelled to play two games in two days.

Dr. Cooke is Re-elected.

After the schedules had been drawn, Dr. L. J. Cooke of Minnesota was reelected secretary and treasurer of the conference basketball association. Ward Lambert of Purdue was chosen president to succeed L. W. St. John of Ohio State. Following is the schedule:

CONCERNING FISHING—SHOOTING TRIPS.

BULLETIN

The waters and shore line of Fox lake, Ill., are now a bird refuge and the shooting of waterfowl, shore birds, and other game is now prohibited. The restricted area includes Fox lake only and its immediate shore line, but not Nippersink. The boundaries of the preserve are: Government light marking junction of Fox and Nippersink lakes; from there to north shore of Crab Apple island; sixty yards north of junction of Fox river and Fox lake; mouth of Squaw creek.

Autumn is waiting just a bend or two down the stream o' days. Blackbirds and bobolinks are flocking noisily, like so many many human picknickers and overhead fly catchers, warblers and other birds who depend on warm weather for food are moving about restlessly in anticipation of their long journey southward. Lazy summer days are over. Men and birds and bees and fish are hurrying and scurrying to make the most of what is left of blue days and fair.

More than all that, the waters are clearing up and the fish are cultivating a receptive attitude—both rivers and lakes will yield many a good day's fishing before cold weather sets in.

A popular sport at this time of the year is a combination hunting and fishing trip. If the trip covers a number of days and can be taken in a canoe, then you have the high point of outings, providing heavy creels and big bags are not essential to your happiness.

Comparatively meager results must be reckoned with on any combination fishing-hunting trip, for big killings are not as likely as when your energies are directed all in one direction. There are compensations, however. The opportunity to indulge in both sports on the one trip is something; living in the open at this season is delightful; mosquitoes, flies, and other pests need not be considered; the evenings around the camp fire will be remembered for many a moon, and when you finally snuggle into your sleeping bag or blanket at night, O, boy, how you do sleep—providing pardner's snoring will permit it.

This early in the season shooting will have to be a secondary consideration, but enough squirrels, shore birds, and waterfowl can be killed to keep the pot agoing, and the fishing with either bait or fly rod should be good in most waters.

Throwing a fly now is likely to arouse interest in the bass, who are anxious to add something to their avoirdupois to carry them through the long winter. Should the fish register lofty indifference to your pretty feathers—and it has been known to happen thus—the fly tackle is still good for running a craw or other bait down through the deep holes where lunkers lurk.

If this kind of sport appeals to you, take a trip down any mid-western bass stream that runs fairly swift. On such a trip it is far better to travel than it is to arrive—or even to catch many fish or kill much game. If you hone for bigger fish let your trip be down some northern river where muskies are possibilities and bass, pickerel, and pike probabilities. Such a river may not yield a great deal of game at this season, but good fishing is almost certain.

If good hunting is absolutely necessary to your happiness you might try such a stream as the Illinois. Recent reports from that river state that native bred ducks—mallards and teal—are plentiful and that the bass are very active.

Just a word or two about Illinois river bass fishing: strange as it may seem when you fish the Illinois river you fish in lakes. These "lakes" are overflowed timber and meadow lands—backwaters—where bass have found conditions to their liking.

Illinois river bass—they are all large mouthed—have some pretty positive opinions as to how they want to be caught. At any rate the bait caster seldom has the big strings that fall to the man who uses a fly rod. We have tried the bait casting rod with surface, semi-surface and underwater baits with mighty poor results and then switched to the fly rod and made a killing.

You want a rather heavy fly rod for the Illinois. The little light trout affair you use on the trout stream or on the gravel bottomed bass streams is not suited to Illinois river fishing, for there are times when you fish right into the thickest of weeds and must "horse" your fish out quickly or never.

For the same reason you want heavy leaders. The salmon size leaders used for the upper Mississippi are just right, but we soak them in a solution made with common everyday green writing ink to stain them a weed color. Perhaps this is not essential, but we think so.

Weedless flies are advisable. Many Illinois river anglers tie their own with a few horse hairs tied in the hackles that are long enough to cover the hook point; others tie their wings on inverted so that the hook is concealed in the wing feathers, while some use a weed guard of fine wire. The latter we consider the least satisfactory of all.

As the water is always roily, except in open places in the weed beds, we prefer to reinforce the attractiveness of our fly with a tiny spinner about size 0 or 1 [Hildebrandt scale], which serves to get the attention of fish that would fail to see it otherwise.

Our preference is for flies with color to 'em. Colonel Fuller is a dandy, so is Silver Doctor; other good ones are Royal Coachman, Parmachenee Belle, White Miller with red tail, Phil Mitchell, Yellow May, Lake George, White and Black Palmers.

Rather larger flies are used on the Illinois than in most waters. Nos. 1 or 1-0 are favorites and do not seem to be too large, although we have taken Illinois river bass on No. 2. Personally we do not fancy that weed fishing—too much like catching fish on a pasture—so we stick to the old trees, duck blinds and the edges of the weed beds.

There is one big advantage in these combination fishing and hunting trips in country where there are waterfowl and this is the neat way in which you foil the weather man and get revenge for the many raw deals he has handed you during the fishing season. If the weather is fair the fishing conditions are good; if it storms the ducks will fly. For once in your life you have the weather man on the run, so make the most of it, for he'll "getcha" later on anyway!

ALUMNI TOPPLE SENN GRID BOYS IN CURTAIN BILL

Heavyweights Win, 20 to 0, and Lightweights by 28 to 6.

BY PREP.

Local high school elevens got their first taste of football action yesterday afternoon in a few games against alumni teams. In each case the alumni aggregations, reinforced with college athletes, who are just getting ready to return to their respective campuses, carried off the honors against the lighter school elevens.

At Senn field, the alumni, with several University of Illinois boys, beat the school heavyweight team, 20 to 0. Another outfit of "grads," arrayed against the school second team, composed of boys around the lightweight limit, ran up a bigger count, 28 to 6.

Alumni Beat Evanston, 7-0.

At Northwestern field, the old-timers of Evanston High school beat this year's heavyweight eleven of the Suburban league, 7 to 0, but had a real workout to do it. The game ended with the school team ten yards from the goal.

"Rick" Lifvendahl, the Illinois track star, and his brother, Whitey, featured in the more important game at Senn. Against them, the work of two stocky youngsters, Hose and Dallahan, of the school team backfield, encouraged Coach Crooks. In the other game, four of the five touchdowns were the results of long runs, Full Back Maloney going over on a plunge for the alumni. Lineups:

FOOTBALL DRILL FOR MAROONS OPENS ON MIDWAY TOMORROW

BY MAROON.

Director A. A. Stagg will blow his whistle tomorrow morning and call "Fall in!" for the twenty-eighth time at the first official football practice of the year at the University of Chicago. Since 1892 the "old man" has been at the helm for the Maroons. College will not open until Oct. 1, and until that date practice will be administered in a double dose at both morning and afternoon sessions.

While there is a general spirit of optimism regarding the prospects of the 1919 season, any Midway follower who starts talking of a conference championship has a circle of fans on his neck in a minute warning him of the strength of every other eleven in the big Big Ten.

Scholastic Standing a Problem.

Much depends on the scholastic standing of a dozen promising candidates who were in college during the summer quarter. As the grades will not be announced for a few days, Coach Stagg will go ahead considering every man eligible until he gets final word. Nine men were on the ineligible list at the last census, but it is expected that a majority of these athletes cleared their records by application during the summer quarter.

The team is without a captain, for none was elected at the close of the S. A. T. C. nightmare season last fall in which the crippled Maroons did not win a game. Big Charlie Higgins is a certainty for the honor because he is the only man on the squad who has won two letters and because he was captain elect when he went into military service.

Fourteen Letter Men Expected.

Fourteen former winners of the "C" are expected to be on hand for the first workout. The list includes Bradley, Halliday, and MacDonald, ends; Jackson, Stegeman, and McGuire, tackles; Moulton, guard; Reber, center; Graham, Elton, and Rouse, half backs; Higgins, Hanisch, and Hermes, full backs.

New men expected to report who look like good material are Cole, Annan, Neff, Schwab, Hedmon, Serck, Hinkle, Crisler, Palmer, Grusch, and Miller. The entire squad will probably be over thirty, one of the largest turnouts in the history of Maroon football.

ST. CHARLES, 19; GENEVA, 12.

St. Charles, Ill., Sept. 13.—[Special.]—St. Charles High school defeated Geneva in the opening game of the football season today. The score was 19 to 12.

The Hyde Park heavies and Parker lights, last season's champions, will be represented by strong teams, according to the outlook. They will have stiffer competition than in 1918, however, as many of the schools promise to be up in the fight. The schedule:

¶ A man from Australia came to this country to study wholesale drug houses.

¶ A Pacific Coast wholesaler said to him: "See the Fuller-Morrisson Company, and you need look no further. They have the best and most complete equipment in this country." A few days later he appeared in our office.

¶ We showed him orders coming in by mail, by 'phone and from salesmen—a great stream of orders being carried from point to point thru the office on constantly moving belts.

¶ We showed him these orders instantly shot to the proper departments thru pneumatic tubes.

¶ We showed him the department merchandise on various floors being gathered from easily accessible stocks, speeding along roller conveyors and down spiral chutes to the assembling floor, and there he saw the final checking of the assembled orders.

¶ He saw them packed, slid to the nailing and stenciling benches, and from there to the roller conveyor feeding into a spiral chute that delivers the packages to the shipping department.

¶ These and many other of the intricate but smooth running parts of the system we showed him.

¶ The man from Australia spent several hours with us. His final comment was: "It is wonderful, simply wonderful."

¶ If he had stayed all the hours of all the business days of the year, he would have seen the same swift moving stream of incoming orders and of outgoing merchandise.

¶ They move by machinery, but the motive power is brains. The brains of those who plan and constantly perfect our system. The brains of those skilled people who operate it.

¶ This is more than a machine—it is an organization.

¶ That is why this is recognized as the most modern and complete wholesale drug house in the world.

¶ That is why we can handle five orders per minute.

¶ That is why more than ninety per cent of all orders received by noon are delivered to the depots before four o'clock of the same day.

¶ The man from Australia came from the Pacific Coast to see this organization—he said: "It is wonderful."

¶ Surely anyone connected with the drug trade will find such a trip thru the plant interesting and profitable.

¶ We do most cordially invite you to come and inspect the House of Service.

DENIES GUILT IN WAR PLOTS AGAINST U. S.

Count Bernstorff Tells His Story of Lusitania Sinking.

BERLIN, Aug. 10.—This is an interview with Count Bernstorff, former German ambassador, by himself. I had prepared some questions for the count to answer, but instead of returning merely the questions and answers the count sent back a complete interview with himself, with nothing left for me to do but to sign my name at the top. But the story will have greater interest to the reader if he knows the count wrote the entire article himself, basing it on the questions I had sent to him.

AN INTERVIEW WITH COUNT VON BERNSTORFF

BY COUNT VON BERNSTORFF.

"I have sadly gotten accustomed of being accused in your country of murder, arson, dynamiting, bribery, and a multitude of minor crimes; so you need not specially apologize for asking questions on the subject of 'German plots' in America."

With these words Count Bernstorff received me when I called on him for the purpose of getting some direct information from him on the various misdeeds popularly connected with the name of the former German ambassador to Washington. Reading over the questions which I had sent him before in writing, the count pursued:

"You state that Germany had been waging war against America, while she was still neutral, by blowing up munition factories, bridges, and docks, and you ask me whether I engaged in any of those plots, ascribed to me by general American belief.

Denies Pre-War Plots.

"I answer this question most emphatically by an unqualified 'No!'

"Unfortunately I cannot deny," Count Bernstorff continued, "that a certain number of unlawful and even criminal actions were committed by countrymen of mine and Americans of German descent within the United States, during the first half of the war; but I must most positively repudiate any personal connection whatsoever with such actions. I did not plan them. I had no foreknowledge of them. Nor did I finance them from any mysterious government fund, alleged to have been at my disposal for those particular purposes. More than that, I can truthfully say that nobody took stronger exception against those misdeeds than myself, as they hampered me very seriously in the pursuance of my policy.

Condemns Lusitania Deed.

"In answering your questions concerning the circumstances connected with the sinking of the Lusitania, I wish to emphasize that what I have to say in this respect is merely by way of explanation and is, certainly, not meant as an apology for a deed which I have always strongly condemned, although, during my tenure of office at Washington, I had no chance of freely expressing my personal feelings on that subject.

"You state that many of your countrymen believe that the German government had not notified me passenger steamers, such as the Lusitania, were to be sunk without warning, or that, if I was so informed, I had withheld that information from the public. Americans who really believe this seem to be quite oblivious of the German admiralty's war zone decree of Feb. 4, 1915, published by the entire American press, and of the memorandum accompanying it, in which it was plainly said, 'Neutrals are warned to no longer entrust crews, passengers, or goods' to enemy vessels passing through the war zone.

Dernberg's Advertisement.

"It is true that your government threatened to hold Germany to strict accountability for every American life lost through submarine attacks against belligerent vessels. But it is equally true that, by its note of Feb. 16, the German government maintained its right of retaliating against England's declared policy of starving out the whole German nation, and expressed its inflexible determination to destroy without further warning every enemy trading vessel within the specified area.

"As that note failed to draw from the American government the expected warning to American citizens not to travel any longer on enemy ships passing through the war zone, and as, moreover, the German warning was openly poohooed by the British, it occurred to Dr. Dernburg, then at New York, to emphasize the danger to American passengers on British ships by way of a newspaper advertisement.

Bernstorff Consented.

"Early in April he drafted such a warning, referring to the German government's announcement, and asked the German consul general at New York to have it published over his signature in the principal American papers. For personal reasons that official declined to do so, wherefore Dr. Dernberg applied to me in this matter. Though fully conscious of acting contrary to diplomatic etiquette, I consented, because I was frankly alarmed over the lightheartedness with which part of the American public, still regarded the terrible German threat, described as an empty bluff by the British propaganda.

Thus the well known warning to prospective ocean travelers to keep away from belligerent vessels, signed "German Embassy," appeared in the shipping columns of the leading dailies of April 22—if I remember well—and once more, one week later, coinciding with the day before the Lusitania's last departure.

Berlin Informed.

This is the true story of that newspaper advertisement, which was to obtain such sad notoriety. Although Berlin was subsequently informed of its having been published, no order of putting such an advertisement into the American papers was ever received by me from the other side. The fictitious account by Mr. Rathom, published in "World's Work," to the effect that, on April 29, the embassy had received a strongly coded wireless order to issue such an advertisement, is a fabrication devoid of all truth.

What is more important, when that advertisement appeared for the second time, and then in many cases quite by accident, at the very side of the Cunard line's announcement of the sailing of the Lusitania, nobody in the world had any idea that it foreshadowed the terrible disaster. I say, advisedly, nobody in the world.

No Fixed Plan.

For, although the small force of German submarines then operating in the war zone around England tried to sink as many enemy vessels as possible, there never existed, as I have been told on the highest authority, any fixed plan of sinking that particular vessel, the Lusitania, on that particular trip. Comrades of the late Capt. Schwieger state most positively that when he fired the fatal shot he was quite unconscious of torpedoing the Lusitania.

The theory of a specially planned stroke against the proudest passenger ship afloat, accepted by many of your countrymen, is absolutely untenable. Experts could tell you that, had such a plan existed, it would have had hardly one chance in a thousand to succeed. At any rate, we at Washington, while greatly perturbed over the submarine situation in général, certainly did not anticipate any disaster for the Lusitania, thinking with the rest of the public, impressed by British newspaper statements, that that ship was really too swift to be liable to be torpedoed by the then notoriously slow submarines.

His Incredulous Surprise.

I still remember my incredulous surprise when, in the evening of May 7, the news reached me that the Lusitania had been sunk, "all hands saved"; and I also recollect my profound horror when, the next day, we learned that more than 1,000 people, including over 100 Americans, had been drowned.

I can say very little as to the attitude of my countrymen with regard to the Lusitania disaster, as I returned only two years later to Germany when the suffering from the terrible effects of the hunger blockade had long deadened in nearly every one of them the feeling for wrong done to others. Naturally, that suffering was far less pronounced in May, 1915, but another feeling of injury received was then all-powerful among the German people; the indignation over American ammunition shipments to our enemies.

Huns Were Indignant.

Whether that indignation was wholly justifiable or not, makes little difference—it existed in an extraordinary degree and created in a nation, loosing daily tens of thousands of their best men on the battlefields, a quite abnormal state of mind.

Tell to such a people that the Lusitania was loaded up with ammunition, and you can well imagine that the incidental death of a thousand passengers, who, according to belief here, had no business to travel on enemy ships, and ammunition ships at that, did not strike, even among less hysterical people, any higher humanitarian chord than the terrible "c'est la guerre."

If you tell them that the Lusitania did not carry and military supplies beyond "a couple of hundred sets of mule harness and chemicals for making explosives," you will not find much credence. Though they do not insist any longer that the Lusitania was "loaded up" with ammunition, the better informed will remember the list of the ship's cargo, published in such papers as the Journal of Commerce and the Evening Post, which included several thousand boxes of rifle ammunition, and they decline to accept the legal niceties of American legislation, according to which rifle cartridges are not to be considered as ammunition when loaded on passenger vessels."

FIGHTING CHAPLAIN, WITH 7 CITATIONS, HOME FOR VISIT

CAPT. BABST.

Naperville, Ill., Sept. 13.—[Special.]—Naperville's fighting chaplain is home on furlough. Back from Chateau Thierry and the Argonne Forest, with an American distinguished service cross with bar, a French croix de guerre with palm and gold star, a wound chevron, mention in general orders, and two additional citations—seven citations in all—Capt. Julius Babst, chaplain of the 23d infantry, A. E. F., is home to visit his brother, Private August A. Babst, who received a French war cross for gallantry in transporting dead and wounded under fire as a member of the S. S. U. 577, Convois D'Auto.

Capt. Babst declined to talk about the decorations, saying that he simply did his duty.

When hostilities on the Mexican border began, he joined the regulars as chaplain. At the outbreak of the world war he was made a lieutenant and went overseas with the 2d division in September, 1917. Orders had assigned him to the 30th infantry, but pending its arrival he went with the 23d into the thick of the fight.

Every business must add, subtract, multiply and divide.

HOUSE PASSES WAR INSURANCE ACT REVISION

Makes Many Increases and Is Extended in Its Scope.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 13.—[Special.]—After several days of discussion the house today passed a bill approved by the treasury department revising the war risk insurance act. The measure makes many increases in allowances, and insures the participation in the benefits of the act of many members of the military and naval forces who for various technical reasons failed to come under its operation heretofore.

Increases for Disability.

Increases in the rate of compensation to be paid disabled persons and their families are increased under the bill as follows:

An increase in monthly compensation from $30 to $80 if the disabled person has neither wife nor child living.

An increase from $45 to $90 if he has a wife, but no child, living.

An increase from $55 to $95 if he has a wife and one child living.

An increase from $65 to $100 if he has a wife and two or more children living.

An increase from $40 to $90, if he has no wife but one child living, with $10 for each child up to two and $5 for each additional child.

Other Provisions.

Disabilities under the bill are to be rated by the department as total and temporary, partial and temporary, total and permanent, and the monthly compensation shall be a percentage of the degree of reduction in earning capacity resulting from the disability. The amounts quoted are on a total and temporary basis. No compensation is to be payable for a reduction in earning capacity rated as less than 10 per cent.

An additional $20 a month is to be allowed to a disabled person who is so helpless as to be constantly in need of a nurse or attendant.

The injured person shall be furnished such reasonable governmental medical and hospital services and supplies as the director may determine.

The bureau of war risk insurance shall also furnish governmental medical and hospital services and supplies and appliance to discharged members of the military and naval forces.

The permitted class of beneficiaries for term insurance is enlarged by adding uncles, aunts, nephews, nieces, brothers-in-law, and sisters-in-law of the insured.

ROTARY CLUB LUNCHEON.

NEWMAN MEETS THE BOLSHEVIKI FACE TO FACE

Examines 8,500 Prisoners; "Lowest Elements of Many Nations."

Poland, during the coming winter, will face one of the most critical periods in its career, in the opinion of E. M. Newman, the "travelogue" lecturer, who has just returned from Europe. Unless help is sent quickly he believes the new nation will be in desperate straits.

The fall of Minsk, four weeks ago, when it was taken from the bolsheviki, was witnessed by Mr. Newman, and he brought with him the first photographs of the 8,500 prisoners taken by the Poles.

"I have just returned from German, Russian, and Austrian Poland and was at Minsk when it was captured," Mr. Newman said yesterday. "I had an opportunity to examine the 8,000 men and 500 women, all bolshevists, who were captured by the Poles. I found that the bolshevists are made up of the lowest elements from many nations, even Chinese being among them. These Chinese are cutthroats of the lowest type.

"There were also Circassians, Letts, Ukrainians, and Russians from the Petrograd and Moscow regions.

"I was astonished to discover several naturalized citizens of the United States among the prisoners, and to find that they had joined the movement. One of them, a Danish-American, said he went to Russia imbued with ideals for which he thought the bolshevists were fighting, but he found the realities horrifying. He told me that in their lust for wealth and power the bolshevists hesitate at nothing; that they imprison and torture refined men and women whose only crime was that they had white hands.

Camouflage Atrocities.

"This man admitted to me that he discovered that bolshevism is simply a camouflage to cover the right to commit every known atrocity under the subterfuge that the proletariat has earned the right to ride in automobiles, while those who had acquired wealth should become servants and perform the most menial kinds of work. Originally many of the bolshevists were idealists who had no idea that their plans would degenerate into a rule of ruin and destruction.

"Immorality has reached such a widespread stage that hardly a single one of the 8,500 men and women captured was free from disease. Many of the prisoners said they would desert bolshevism if they could, but that they were forced to fight, that it is only fear and terrorism that keeps the bolshevist army in the field.

"In the prison camps the bolshevists are killing each other. There are one or more murders every night. Their standard of manhood is so low that few of them are much above the lower animals.

Talked with Pianist Premier.

"Paderewski believes that Poland can regain its former power only through the help of America. I had some long talks with him." He called my attention to the fact that there are 6,000 miles of railroad in German, Russian, and Austrian Poland, but that there are only a very few locomotives and practically no freight cars. Therefore Poland suffers for lack of food, coal, and clothes. The American mission is now feeding 1,000,000 Polish children every day, and there are hundreds of thousands who must go hungry.

"If relief does not reach Poland before cold weather comes, then tens of thousands will either freeze or die of starvation. The Germans destroyed the factories in Poland, just as they did in Belgium. Between 600,000 and 700,000 are out of work near Lodz, and there is the far greater danger that hunger may create more bolshevists within the boundaries of Poland than Russia could place on the northern border. What is needed is work and raw materials with which to start the industries.

Vienna a Doomed City.

"Vienna, in my opinion, is a doomed city. I do not see how it can escape from its fate. Formerly Vienna, the capital of Austria-Hungary, served a population of 50,000,000. The land on this side and on that has been cut away and the commerce has been diverted, so that now Vienna serves only a paltry 7,000,000."

TO UNVEIL MONUMENT.

The Dorothea Relief society will unveil a marble monument to Mrs. Dorothea Lavin at Knessess Israel, Waldheim cemetery, at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The society, which is composed of some 200 Jewish young men and women of the northwest side, is engaged in relief work among the poor of Jewish sections in the city.

NELSON

FOUR-TWENTY-NINE

In the loop—and on the boulevards—look for them.

The number of Nelson cars you see in the loop and out of the loop, on the boulevards, in the parks, in the suburbs, is an indication of Nelson approval by Chicago.

Look for them! If you have an opportunity, stop and talk to a Nelson owner. You'll find him enthusiastic about his car—eager to explain its merits and economies.

That NELSON "High Sign"

When two Nelson drivers meet they give each other the Nelson "High Sign"—just a friendly honk of the horn, a salute. You have seen two yachts pass and dip their flags to one another; you have seen service men salute.

That's the spirit behind the Nelson "High Sign"—a friendly greeting—and when you see two Nelson drivers doing it you'll believe more firmly than ever of their pride in owning Nelson cars.

This Is The LALLEY PLANT In A NON STOP RUN
From 9 A.M. Monday Aug 18th
Until Sat 12 M. Aug 23rd

Lalley Light

Actual photo of Lalley-Light Plant which ran continuously for 124 hours at the Illinois State Fair

Proves it is Built for Long, Hard Service

At the Illinois State Fair (Aug. 15 to 23, 1919) a standard Lalley-Light Plant was run continuously every minute, day and night, for 124 hours.

At the Ohio State Fair (Aug. 25 to 29, 1919) another standard Lalley plant ran without stopping for 110 hours.

At the Michigan State Fair (Aug. 29 to Sept. 6, 1919) a standard Lalley plant was started when the Fair opened and never stopped until the close of the Fair, running 216 hours.

At the Minnesota-North Dakota Interstate Fair, Fargo, N. D., (July 21 to 26, 1919) another Lalley plant operated continuously without stopping for 124 hours.

At the Minnesota State Fair (Aug. 30 to Sept. 6, 1919) still another standard Lalley plant ran continuously for 179 hours.

At the National Tractor Show, Wichita, Kansas (July 14 to 19, 1919) a standard Lalley plant ran throughout the show for 120 hours.

At the Nebraska State Fair, Lincoln (Aug. 31 to Sept. 6) a standard Lalley plant ran continuously throughout the Fair for 102 hours.

These are a few of the scores of instances in which Lalley plants gave continuous performances at fairs and exhibitions throughout the United States and Canada this fall.

In every case, when stopped, there was no sign of wear. Instead, there was every evidence that the plants could have been run indefinitely, for days and even weeks.

No owner ever needs to run his Lalley for days at a time. But farmers who are buying Lalley-Light at the rate of about 1,000 plants per week realize the Lalley ability to give them reliable, economical and efficient service, day and night, whenever they need it.

There are many reasons why the Lalley does give this unrivaled service.

It has been in actual daily farm use for about ten years—proving itself absolutely reliable under all conditions.

It has only three moving parts—no complicated mechanism to get out of order and to wear out rapidly.

It is ball bearing equipped, which, with only three moving parts, practically eliminates internal friction and wear.

It is water cooled, like the Liberty airplane motor and practically every automobile motor. Lalley water-cooling keeps the engine always at the proper heat, insuring the best service and the longest life.

So far as we know no other farm lighting plant has ever been able to stand such marvelous non-stop tests.

IT IS true that the sheer beauty of the Liberty has taken the style centres of the country by storm.

But Liberty success is infinitely more than a fashionable vogue, because it is built on performance, even more than beauty of design.

New York is no more enthusiastic over the graceful lines of the Liberty, than the wonderful smoothness of its performance.

And New York is no more enthusiastic over either, or both, than this community of our own.

If you will give us the opportunity to show you how the Liberty rides and drives, you will see that the wonderful things which have been said of it are not one bit overdrawn.

ALMONDS

Are Making Big Profits for Other Men—Why Not for You?

When we tell you that a net profit of $2500 to $3000 a year or more can be made from a 10-acre almond orchard at Paso Robles, Cal., we state a fact which you can easily verify.

And when you figure that to get this income from stocks, bonds, or mortgages you would have to invest from 8 to 10 times the cost of one of these orchards, you will realize that almond growing is one of the greatest money-making occupations a man can enter.

The supply of American almonds is nowhere nearly equal to the demand. Consequently the price obtained is high compared with the cost of production—and the growers themselves through their associations dictate the price at which they will sell—a price which naturally allows a liberal margin of profit and a large income on the invested capital.

Every pound of almonds raised in California is quickly sold. Last year after the price was fixed, the entire crop of the state was taken, almost over night, by telegraphic orders from brokers and wholesalers. There can't be any doubt about the profits in a business like this. If you will call at our offices you will be given the facts and figures. You will be shown how small investments in almond properties are paying big results—and also how you can easily acquire an almond orchard.

The information which we will give you on almond growing is based on the actual production of Paso Robles almond orchards, owned by members of our association and by other owners in that famous almond-growing district in one of the finest parts of California.

If you are looking for an opportunity to invest your surplus earnings where they will bring a life income much larger than you can obtain from any ordinary investment—an income derived from crops which are imperishable, easily handled, readily marketable and never failing—you ought to look into the money-making power of the almond orchards which we offer at Paso Robles—the section where the most successful almond crops in California are raised and where modest investments will bring very large returns.

We have divided a portion of our properties into 10-acre tracts, and while these units last you can secure one or more at a price which, when the orchard comes into full bearing, will pay $250 to $300 or more an acre, net profit, year after year.

If you can set aside $25 a month to apply on the purchase price you are in position to grasp this opportunity. You should at least investigate—or just mail the coupon below for a free copy of our richly illustrated and descriptive book, "A Life Income Plus California."

$2500.00 A Year for Life

Yes, a constant income—for life. Figure it. When we tell you that comparatively young trees produce 20 to 25 pounds of almonds, that you have 700 trees on your 10-acre orchard, that the cost of care and harvesting is not over 3c per pound and that the selling price is around 27½c, you can see what you may expect in returns from your crops.

Before you decide whether to purchase one of these orchards or not, we invite you first to satisfy yourself that the profits we report are being actually made—then to see if there is any other place in which you can put the same amount of money to bring anywhere near such an income as this. The officers of the Association which offers you this opportunity have put their own money just where they advise you to put yours—they are not simply sellers of orchards—they are orchard owners.

Profits That Increase

As the trees become older, their yield becomes greater. Each year sees a greater money return, and don't overlook this fact—that almond orchards constantly increase in value. Once you have an orchard started, your land value goes up. You never would have to sell at your purchase price, if you ever should want to dispose of the property.

In 35 years there has not been an almond crop failure at Paso Robles. Every year the growers have gathered their profits. Where is there such an opportunity like this?

We Will Plant and Care for Your Trees

You may say: "I don't know anything about almond raising." You don't have to know anything about it to become a successful grower.

Under the direction of Mr. G. A. Nehrhood, regarded as the foremost almond authority in California, we maintain an organization of experts who will plant and care for your trees until they come into full bearing and then harvest your crops—this for any term of years you may desire such service.

70 trees to the acre—700 trees in all—is the number we put into one of these 10-acre orchards. You pay nothing extra for the trees, the planting or the care of the orchard for four years, after which the cost will not run over $15.00 per acre yearly. This nominal charge is taken out of the crop.

$25 a Month Is All You Need to Invest

If you will pay only a small initial payment and put aside only $25 a month, you can own a Paso Robles Almond Orchard. And note this—you pay only half the price of the orchard in cash. After half of the purchase price is covered, you stop paying money. Your crops pay the balance.

Paso Robles

Cream of the California Almond Districts

We picked Paso Robles as the location for our properties because the soil and climatic conditions in that district produce the most abundant crops and the "meatiest" almonds grown in California.

No irrigation is required here. The rainfall is ample to keep the trees in perfect condition. During the past 15 years, Mr. Nehrhood, our field manager, by whose advice this land was selected, has traveled all over the state, tested the soils and inspected the almond crops produced. As a result of his thorough investigation and of his vast experience as a planter, he chose the Paso Robles district as the best for almond growing, and his opinion is backed by that of other experts. After this land is all sold and planted in orchards, it will naturally command the highest price of any almond land in the state.

Acre Home Sites

Overlooking the beautiful Salinas Valley and the city of Paso Robles is a large plot of 400 acres which we purchased and divided into acre tracts for home sites. We did this because many of our orchard buyers wanted homes near to the city with its schools, churches and social life. To them and also to people who want not orchards but simply homes in California we offer these acre tracts, ideal for either permanent or winter homes.

Without extra charge we will plant half of each acre in fruits and nuts—cherries, apricots, figs, plums, prunes, grapes, nectarines, apples, peaches, or almonds and walnuts. And we will care for these trees for four years without any extra cost to you. The other half can be used for the house, for gardening, chicken and turkey raising. We will also assist with suggestions for building a bungalow of the most modern design.

From these acre home sites there is always a view of one of California's most charming landscapes. The hills, fields and valleys rich with verdure—the pleasant city—the luxurious flowers—the blooming orchards, all combine to make this a spot where you can find rest and contentment, and you also have the association of congenial people.

Every convenience that you enjoy now will be provided here—electric lights, water, telephones, cement sidewalks—and there will be a cement highway from Paso Robles through the other valley towns leading to the ocean beach, which can thus easily be reached by automobile—one of the most delightful trips in California.

Our prices and terms on these home sites put them easily within your reach. As the number is limited, you are advised to make your decision early. At any time convenient for you we will give you all the information you want about price, terms, and our agreement to plant and care for the half acre, etc

The Opportunity Yours Wherever You Live

Under our agreement to plant and care for your orchard, you can make this investment and still remain where you are.

You doubtless will want to come to California sooner or later. We would like to have every prospective buyer make a trip to inspect our almond properties and to see the wonderful location of Paso Robles—and the prosperity of its almond growers. If, however, such a trip cannot conveniently be made now you can come later either to live or to pass some time here. You can have the trees planted and brought to bearing whether you come or not and your income is assured.

Your Interests Safeguarded

Your investigation of this Association will show that it was organized and is backed by responsible men. However, to safeguard the interests of all buyers, the Title Insurance & Trust Co., Los Angeles, Cal. (Capital $2,500,000.00) is trustee of the development fund and holds title to the ground for the purchaser's benefit—the title being transferred to the buyer when the contract is completed.

Limited Acreage—Act Now

California produces 99% of the almonds grown in the United States. And yet the acreage of land most suitable for almonds is less than the acreage best adapted for lemon growing.

When this almond orchard land is taken up (and it is going rapidly) the only way to get into this business will be to pay the premium price at which every acre of it will surely be held.

Buying now means getting your orchard at the lowest price at which these Paso Robles orchards will ever be held. It means getting the largest profit on your sale if you decide to part with the property. Isn't such a proposition as this worth looking into? Isn't it something you ought to look into while there is still an opportunity to get one of these 10-acre almond orchards at Paso Robles?

Make Your Selection Early—Get This Season's Planting

And we will also explain our agreement to plant and care for your trees, to harvest the crops and to accept the proceeds from the crops as payment for half the purchase price. You will be shown how your interests will be safeguarded in every way and how a very modest investment made on our easy terms will give you a substantial income for life.

We believe that this is the safest, surest, most profitable investment which can be made in any kind of crop—but before you make up your mind get the actual facts. Use your own judgment after you have made the most searching investigation.

A WAY TO REDUCE YOUR COST of LIVING

Buy When and Where You Can Get Best Values

"Better Buying" is a refuge for many a family oppressed by rising costs. Few households can boast a thoroughly efficient purchasing department.

In business, a man keeps in touch with all possible sources of supply. He watches the markets. He stocks up when bargains are offered. He never orders without asking price and comparing price.

In his domestic life, however, all buying may be done from day to day—largely over the telephone—seldom with knowledge of prices asked by competing dealers.

As a result, the money he makes in business is quickly dissipated by household expenses.

Let Tribune Ads Be Your Guide

Many things tend to Better Buying, but one factor is indispensable for you as a Chicagoan: close daily attention to the messages sent you through Tribune advertising.

> If a merchant has something to sell at an excessive price, he does not advertise the fact—it would hurt him.
> If he has an exceptionally good value to offer, he does advertise it. Then, advertising pays him and it pays you.

Since THE TRIBUNE prints more advertising than any other Chicago paper, it can be of most assistance to you as a guide to Better Buying and to a lower cost of living.

ZIONISTS OPEN BIG CONVENTION HERE AT 2 TODAY

Leading Jews of Nation to Help Plan for New State.

The jubilee convention of the Zionists, who for over two decades have been, as an organization, planning for the rehabilitation of the ancient Jewish state in Palestine, begins this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Auditorium theater.

It is called the "jubilee convention" by the faithful, for it is the first time since the organization was formed that a gathering of Zionists has been held, which had the assurance that the age-old dream of the Jews of the world would be realized.

This year, unlike other years, the convention will not have to do with the convincing of the powers of the world of the necessity for the reëstablishment of Palestine. The convention regards this as done, since Palestine was provided for by the peace treaty, and "an autonomous Jewish commonwealth" under the mandatory of Great Britain is an integral portion of the treaty and the covenant of the league of nations.

To Plan Ways and Means.

This year's convention, therefore, is concerning itself with the immediate necessities of the Palestinian state. It will devise plans of goverment, based upon Biblical traditions and modern concepts of social regeneration. It will provide means for the upbuilding and settling of the land; for the promotion of industry and for the financing of the new government, soon to be established.

Consequently, it will be the largest and most enthusiastic gathering of Jewish nationalists ever held. Over 1,000 delegates will be present, representative of the greater portion of the 4,000,000 Jews of the nation, and greetings and advice will be received from the many more millions of Jews of the world.

Notables to Be Present.

A distinguished array of noted Jewish leaders will be in attendance. These will be headed by Justice Louis D. Brandeis, of the United States Supreme court, honorary president of the organization; Judge Julian W. Mack of the United States Circuit court, president of the organization; Jacob De Haas of New York, general secretary; Louis Lipsky of New York, secretary of the department of organization; Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York, Dr. Harry Friedenwald of Baltimore, chairman, and Robert Szold, secretary of the Zionist administrative council in Palestine; Bernard A. Rosenblatt, head of the land commission in Palestine; Mrs. Mary Fels, and Miss Henrietta Szold, the "Joan of Arc" of the Zionist movement.

Last night a great ball to the visitors was given at the 1st regiment armory by the Chicago convention committee. During the day yesterday the city hall and county building were both decorated with Zionist flags, alternating with American flags, the Zionist emblem being of white, with a six pointed star of blue in the center.

Today's sessions include a forty minute program of distinctively Jewish music by "Zimbro," a chamber music ensemble of Russo-Jewish artists, an address of welcome by Judge Hugo Pam, the presidential address of Judge Mack, and the reading of reports.

Europeans Cable Sympathy.

Cablegrams from Zionist sympathizers in the capitals of Europe were received yesterday at the convention headquarters in the Congress hotel and will be read today, together with a telegram from Nathan Straus.

The political negotiations and Palestine development and the growth of the organization from 18,000 members to 156,000 in a year are told in the eighty page report, copies of which will be distributed.

$10,000,000 WORTH OF CATTLE COMING FOR DAIRY SHOW

A BIG force is busy at the international amphitheater, Union Stockyards, gettings the place in readiness for the national dairy show, which opens on Oct. 6 and continues through Oct. 12.

Entries for dairy cattle, which will be a big feature of the show, close on Thursday next. Already a large number of these entries has been received. At least $10,000,000 worth of the finest dairy cattle on earth will be at the show. A parade of these blooded animals in the big ring will be a nightly feature of the show.

Entries for the horse show that will be given nightly at the dairy show do not close until Sept. 22. Most of the best strings of show horses in the United States and Canada, including hunters and jumpers and troopers' horses, will be in Chicago for the show.

"We are more than satisfied at the way things are going," said Col. W. E. Skinner, manager of the dairy show, yesterday, "and I can say now that the 1919 show will be the best and most important of all national dairy shows. It looks as though all records for attendance would be broken."

Double Shifts to Rush Michigan Avenue Bridge

Night and day shifts are to be used beginning tomorrow to push the Michigan avenue link improvement toward completion. Michael J. Faherty, president of the board of local improvements, said yesterday following the arrival of the first barge load of steel from Gary, Ind., since the labor difficulties were settled, that he expects 9,000 tons of steel for the big double bridge to be delivered within the next two weeks.

HUGE FIELD DAY AT CUB PARK TO HELP THE KIDS

City and Canada 'Champs' Will Contest for Lacrosse Honors.

The Chicago Cubs have been more or less preoccupied recently with their annual hot weather argument. They didn't realize the thermometer's standing until yesterday.

"Kids in Chicago tenements must be pretty nearly all in after this session with the off-shore breeze," remarked President William Veeck then, "and, by the way, I heard somewhere that Chicago athletes were planning a field day to boost THE TRIBUNE funds to aid the kids. Why can't they use Cubs' park for the stunt?"

That's the reason the Illinois Athletic club's lacrosse team can announce today the date and place of its annual championship game and field day for the benefit of THE TRIBUNE Free Ice and Algonquin Hospital funds. The date is Oct. 11 and the place is the National league pastiming lot.

Canada "Champs" to Play."

According to Manager Charles Donnelly of the I. A. C. "Buccaneers," lacrosse followers are "going big" in Canada right now. Five teams are in the running for the Canadian championship trophy and all five are playing a top notch game. The "Buccaneers" have contracted to meet and defeat the Canadian team which nails the northern trophy as the big feature of this year's field day.

In addition the best all-round men of athletic clubs in Chicago are being groomed for the tournament which is to supplement the lacrosse. National interest is promised in the high hurdles, the weights and the dashes.

After setting a definite date and place for the field day, members of the I. A. C. team yesterday prepared for a whirlwind campaign in the interest of the fund benefit. Letters announcing the event were written to clubs in New York, Boston, Philadelphia and cities in the west, and Chicago people were asked to take a personal interest in the field day's success.

Leaders Act as Patrons.

Among the "fellers' friends" who have consented to act with Governor Lowden, Gen. Leonard Wood and Gen. Frank Dickson as patrons for the field day are: Britton I. Budd, Arthur Meeker, Arthur T. Aldis, Everett C. Brown, Harold F. McCormick, Stanley Field, William Wrigley Jr., John C. Farwell, Orville E. Babcock, Thomas E. Wilson, Edmund D. Hulbert and William A. Tilden.

While the I. A. C. and the Swift & Co. benefits for the funds are under way, folks who have kept Chicago kids happy by personal subscription have not forgotten their duty. Here are the new donations to the ice fund:

|---|---|
| Two Ford verdict checks | $ .12 |
| The Little Pepper club | 2.00 |
| A friend | 1.00 |
| Previously acknowledged | 2,836.28 |
| Total | $2,839.40 |

The Algonquin hospital fund:

|---|---|
| Pine Inn, Carmel, Cal. | $ 5.00 |
| Children of Rennellwood Resort, Michigan | 14.00 |
| T. V. | 2.00 |
| Previously acknowledged | 1,459.65 |
| Total | $1,480.65 |

Park Ridge Man Victim of French Money 'Bubble'

Through a statement made at the state's attorney's office by C. W. Eberhard of Park Ridge, investigators have learned he was one of the many victims of the financial "bubbles" of Charles W. French.

Eberhard was asked to go to the prosecutor's office last Sunday night, when French and his associates were rounded up at the Majestic hotel.

"I was stung for about $600 through French's high finance schemes," he told Assistant State's Attorney John C. Melaniphy.

SALVATION ARMY DRIVE TO AID 40 CHARITIES HERE

Budget on Expenditure of $1,500,000 Here Is Issued.

The Salvation Army during Home Service week, Sept. 22 to 29, will ask the people of Illinois for $2,250,000. Chicago's quota is set at $1,500,000.

The funds raised locally will be applied to forty Chicago institutions, erection of new buildings being urgent in some instances. The success of the drive will also enable the army to discontinue canvassing for funds for one year. This method has been arduous, uncertain, and long drawn out, and the time saved will be devoted to rescue and relief work.

The budget, which has been approved by the business men back of the drive, contemplates these expenditures:

New rescue home and maternity hospital for 150 girl mothers and babies, $200,000. In this institution the mothers are taught domestic science and are cared for until both they and their infants have assured futures. The present rented quarters are wholly inadequate and poorly located.

Three New Day Nurseries.

Three new slum center buildings, one on each side of town, to cost [illegible],000. These provide urgent re[illegible] workrooms for poor mothers, day nursery for children of mothers who work out, and small rooms for temporary occupation by the utterly destitute. The present rented quarters have been outgrown.

Addition to young women's boarding house (old Union club), $150,000. Accommodations to be doubled and provide for 298 girls, who can find a comfortable home at a minimum cost.

Boys' home and trade school on Glen Ellyn farm, $150,000. To take in 100 juvenile first offenders who will be taught intensive farming and trades without the odium of a reform school sentence. Judges say they can send 1,000 boys a year to such an institution.

New training school for officers, $250,000. Will accommodate 100 young women and as many young men—one of the army's more pressing needs. Present facilities are located in two old type dwellings.

Aid Vacation Home.

Eight new corps centers, $340,000, with new buildings ($200,000), clearance of debt on present buildings ($100,000), and expenses of twenty corps for one year ($40,000).

Summer vacation home, $60,000. Adjunct to the young women's boarding house, providing for vacations at nominal cost and to be used also by Boy Scouts and Girl Guards.

Annual running expenses, $160,000 Of this amount $115,000 is wanted for the children's home, the rescue home, summer outings, Christmas dinners, relief of the poor, and training home. The remaining $45,000 is for one year's contribution to officers' pension fund and expenses of headquarters' supervision.

Contingencies for one year, $100,000, includes reserve fund for unexpected calls, emergency work in public disasters, and provision for campaign expenses.

Pay Small Salaries.

Showing the army's self-denial in the matter of salaries, a characteristic instance may be advanced. The Girls' Rescue home on the north side has a staff of seven, of whom three are graduate nurses. The annual pay roll for the seven is $1,500.

The war service of the Salvation army greatly increased its prestige, although of the sum raised in the united war work campaign the army received but 2.5 per cent. Home service languished of necessity during the war and since its conclusion the army's enhanced popularity has resulted in a heavy pressure of new demands.

F. S. Peabody is chairman of the state committee. Maj. A. A. Sprague is chairman of the trade division, and Lewis E. Myers has charge of the ward and suburban district canvas.

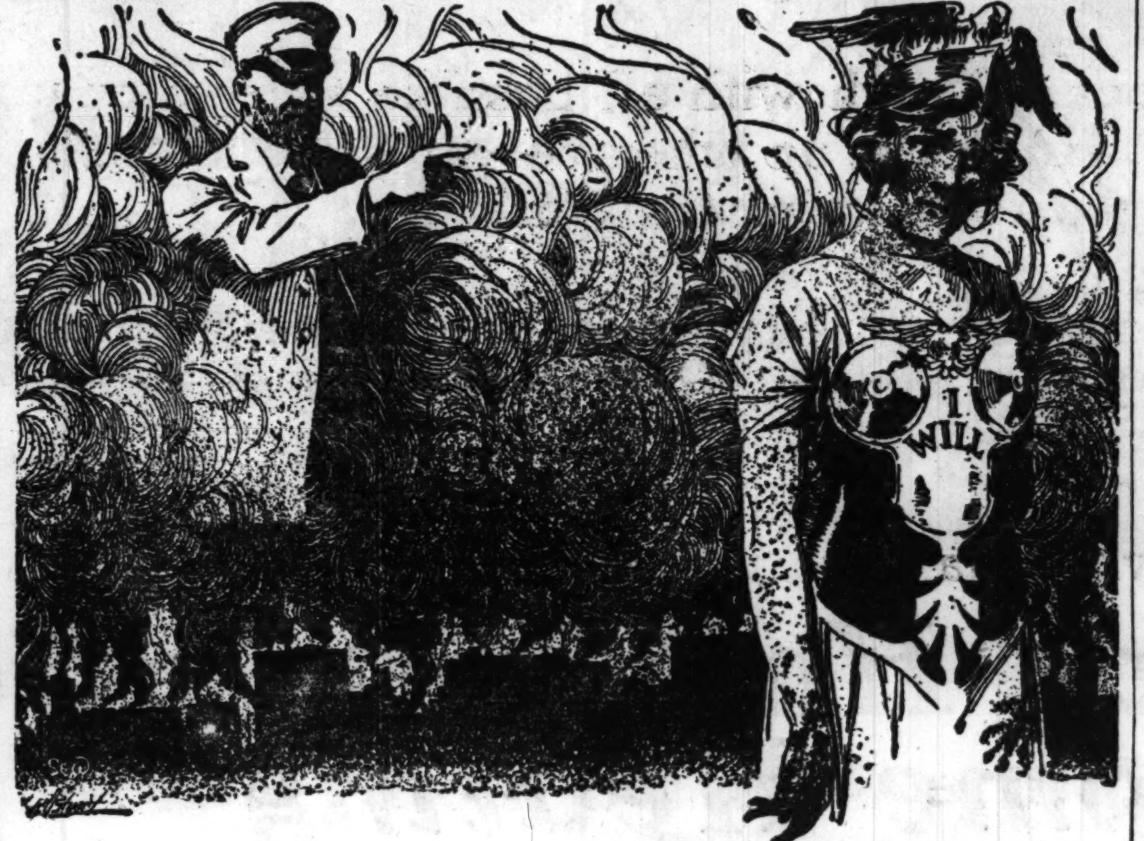
ASK FOR MR. BOLT



The new smoke inspector, Dr. John Dill Robertson, has handed the owners of big buildings an ear-full in this wise: "Stop your chimneys from smoking or be everlastingly pinched for mussing up the town." Whadda you suppose they said? This: "The supply of smokeless coal is nix. Temporarily we've got to use soft coal—and it smokes like a camp-fire. It aint our fault."

Holy smoke! That excuse is as full of holes as a genuine Swiss cheese. It won't hold enough water to wash an infant's sock. The solution of this smoke problem lies in the boiler—and never in the coal. If all of these big buildings had Kewanee Smokeless Boilers, it wouldn't make a diffabitterance what coal they used—hard coal, soft coal, screenings even, or slack or coal dust. The boiler would still burn them without enough smoke to make a barrage for a rat.

But that isn't the big thing. Not by a jugfull. Think of the money these big buildings would save. They'd save the difference between hard and soft coal. Hard coal now sells for about $10 a ton. Soft coal sells around $4 and $4.50. Your saving would be all of 50 per cent and then some. If Doctor Robertson compels you men to put in the Kewanee Smokeless Boiler, you ought to kiss his hand for the new income he has forced you to enjoy.

You might as well make up your minds to the fact that there isn't going to be any more anthracite and derned little Pocahontas. You might just as well come to the soft-coal proposition NOW. That's all you are going to get and there isn't a business man in town who doesn't know it. Call up your coal dealer and ask him. And then give your income a boost by putting in a Kewanee Smokeless Boiler. You'll save its cost in no time at all. From then on you ride on velvet.

If you want to find out a lot of things, call your coal dealer and order a lot of hard coal. Listen while his merry laughter peals over the wire. Then behave yourself and telephone the Old Man Behind the Boiler.

OUR MOST DECORATED MAN—Sergt. Dan Daley, the most decorated man in the United States, is shown here receiving the French military medal. Sergt. Daley is the only man in this country who has the honor of having been awarded the Congressional medal twice. The second time he was obliged to refuse, as no man is supposed to wear two of these decorations. Besides the Congressional medal, which was awarded to him for heroic service in the Spanish American war, he has numerous other decorations from every allied nation.

HELEN HOLMES, the original "railroad girl," is now to be addressed care of the S. K. L. Senoe company, 112 West Forty-second street, New York.

Miss Holmes started earning money as an artist's model. Then she was signed up by Keystone—where, by the way, she and Miss Normand became great pals—next she circumlocated [it isn't in the dictionary] to Kalem. Here that astute director, Mr. J. P. McGowan, discovered the young woman had nerve and started her on railroad pictures. Later he married her. He's still married to her.

Universal and Signal both later produced pictures with Miss Holmes. Now we are told to watch for another venture.

Since you always want to know—the person under discussion is five feet six inches tall, weighs 135 pounds, has a fair complexion and brown hair and eyes. Her favorite occupation is "busting" unruly locomotives.—MAE TINEE.

BESSIE BARRISCALE has appeared in this section before, but many have written asking for another picture—so here it is. [We strive to please.]

If you didn't see the biography that appeared before—here are a few facts for the curious:

Miss Barriscale is really Mrs. Howard Hickman. She was born in New York. Was on the stage for a number of years. Started her screen career with Lasky. Is now receiving mail at the Brunton studios, Melrose, California.

She is five feet, two inches tall, weighs 123 pounds and has that color combination many of us would give our eye teeth for—brown eyes and blonde hair.—MAE TINEE.

TAKES SEVEN THOUSAND LIVES—The crater of Mt. Kloet, Java, two days after the terrifying volcanic eruption which occurred May 20th. From the crater flowed streams of hot mud that submerged an entire region and killed seven thousand persons. Despite the intense heat still coming from the field of red hot lava from which flames may be seen arising, explorers, it will be noticed, have approached the crater's edge at the first opportunity.

AT THE PARIS HORSE RACES—With the war over, France again goes in for pleasure, as will be seen by this remarkable picture taken from an airplane of the Longchamps race course near Paris, during the Grand Prix races a few weeks ago. Looks like a piece of monster flypaper, doesn't it?

U. S. BANDIT HUNT IN MEXICO—The Eighth cavalry was sent into Mexico to round up the Mexican bandits who recently captured two United States aviators and held them for ransom. Troop H is shown here bringing a bunch of trouble makers into camp near Candeloria, Mexico.

ON a clinging evening gown or snugly fitting tailored frock SO-E-Z snaps are infinitely important. Where it is essential that the fasteners be invisible, SO-E-Z snaps lie flat against the garment. Where the entire effect of the gown depends upon the faithful service of each fastener, SO-E-Z snaps perform their duties perfectly; they stay closed until released.

And there's another very special exclusive SO-E-Z feature, a feature that cannot be found in any other fastener—the coined edge (patented), rounded inside and outside the large oblong holes, so that the thread passes over an absolutely smooth surface both inside and outside. No other fastener can have this feature, therefore, no other fastener can be as good.

Obtainable in all sizes, black or white, guaranteed rust-proof.

DeLuxe

The Bedspring Luxurious

A good night's sleep is as necessary as good, nourishing food.

A lot of people toss about at night—sleep fitfully—and don't feel rested in the morning.

They lay it all to "nerves" or some other similar condition.

But the real cause, nine times out of ten, is—the wrong bedspring.

Sleeping on the wrong bedspring throws the body out of alignment, and this puts a strain on certain muscles which, in order to relieve the strain and get some rest, force the sleeper to change position very often during the night—to toss about.

The De Luxe Bedspring allows every muscle to rest all the time—it keeps the body in perfect alignment—it moulds to the contours of the body.

The De Luxe is the only bedspring that has none of the defects in design common to other types of bedsprings.

The merest examination of a De Luxe will make very apparent to you just how and why it gives that healthful, buoyant, luxurious relaxation which means deep, quiet sleep—regardless of the mattress or bed.

Go to your dealer today and ask to see a De Luxe. Finished in French gray enamel and made to last a lifetime. For wood or metal beds.

A GERMAN DEATH CERTIFICATE—Here is a photograph of a German death certificate, bearing the signature of the Kaiser, which was awarded to the family of a German soldier killed in action. It was mailed to a German family in Luxemburg that had moved away and was found by Lieut. George Birch of Springfield, Ohio, while in the army of occupation. The upper inscription translated reads, "We should also lay down our lives for the brethren"—1 John 3:16. The lower inscription, "In memory of Musketeer William John Gloessner, ninth company, reserve infantry, regiment number 228. He died for the Fatherland on May 20, 1917. (Signed) Wilhelm, Rex."

THE WORLD'S BIGGEST GOLD DREDGER—$90,000 worth of gold in one week is pretty good dividends. This dredger does the trick on the American river at Marysville, Cal. It is the greatest dredger in the world and is a plant of enormous construction. The stony bottom of the river is gouged out by the ton and sent rattling up a runway into a crusher, separated, put through various processes and then shot out back into the river once more minus the gold that lay undisturbed for many years.

THE NEW FLAGSHIP OF THE PACIFIC FLEET

AN ELECTRIC SUPERDREADNAUGHT—The superdreadnaught New Mexico, probably the most modern of all battleships and the first capital ship of any nation to be operated entirely by electricity, has been selected as the flagship of the Pacific fleet now on the Pacific coast. The New Mexico has been referred to as the only 100 per cent electric ship, for there is hardly a device on board which does not operate electrically. The New Mexico was built in the Brooklyn navy yard and launched in the summer of 1917. It is 624 feet over all, weighs 32,000 tons, draws 30 feet of water. It is 97 feet 4½ inches broad, measuring at the water line. At full speed it can make slightly in excess of 21 knots an hour. It generates 28,000 horsepower for propulsion. Its crew numbers nearly 1,200 men. It burns oil instead of coal as fuel, and has a total fuel capacity of 3,400 tons, or 6,800,000 pounds, or about 1,000,000 gallons.

THE PROPELLERS—"Closeup" of three of the four huge propellers, illustrating their great size in comparison with the sailors perched on the blades.

THE DECK—General view of the great battleship taken from the foremast.

THE TURBO-GENERATOR—One of the main turbo-generators used to procure the electric current necessary for the propulsion of the vessel.

ONE OF THE MOTORS—One of the huge electric motors driving the starboard inboard propeller. The propeller shaft may be clearly seen extending out from the motor. This motor is twelve feet high and twelve feet wide. It generates 7,000 h. p. and derives its current from two turbo-generators which, in turn, are operated by steam from the big boilers.

THE MAIN BOILER ROOM—Showing three of the nine immense boilers which store up steam under a pressure of 250 pounds to the square inch, and send it on to the turbo-generators, which produce the electricity for driving the vessel. Note the oil burners lined up beneath the boilers, for the New Mexico burns oil instead of coal. This accounts for the immaculate cleanliness of the boiler room.

THE TEENIE WEENIES:

THE RHYMING RABBIT ASKS A FAVOR.

BY W^M DONAHEY.

WITHIN a deep hole under the roots of a great tree lived the Rhyming Rabbit. He was a very peculiar, gruff old fellow and he always talked in rhyme, so the Teenie Weenies had named him the Rhyming Rabbit. The rabbit was very old and his feet were unusually crippled with rheumatism. The Teenie Weenies had been kind to the old fellow and many of the little people often visited him, for he could tell very interesting stories.

Ond day a squirrel stopped at the shoe house and delivered a message from the rabbit.

"He wants to see the General," said the squirrel. "He says that he would come over, but he is so lame with the rheumatism he can hardly walk."

"All right," cried the General, "I'll go over right after lunch," and he kept his word for he and the Lady of Fashion set out directly after their meal for the rabbit's hole.

The old rabbit always kept the entrance to his home neat and clean, and when the two Teenie Weenies stopped before the door they hardly knew the place, for the entrance was piled high with dirt.

"Mercy on us!" exclaimed the Lady of Fashion, "What under the sun has happened?"

"Two nasty boys came yesterday
And spied my hole while I's away.
They thought, of course, that I was in
And dug a hole where the door had been.
I sat behind a spreading weed
And watched them do this awful deed.
They soon grew tired, and then for spite
They filled my hole with dirt so tight
I could not dig it all away
Because my feet are sore today.
The rheumatiz has laid me low
And I've no other place to go."

The rabbit looked so very sad after he had told his story that the Lady of Fashion and the General felt very sorry for him.

"O, I see," cried the General. "You are all crippled up with rheumatism and can't dig the dirt away and you want the Teenie Weenies to clean it out for you?"

"We can do it for Mr. Rabbit, can't we?" said the Lady of Fashion as the tears gathered in her pretty eyes.

"Of course we can, and we will," answered the General. "I'll go right this minute and get the men to work," and he set off towards the shoe house so fast that it was all the Lady of Fashion could do to keep up.

It was a big task, but the little men set to work and with the help of a little car and track they hauled the dirt and soon made the hole as clean as a new pin.

The WISDOM of FOOLS

by ALICE and CLAUDE ASKEW

Wherein It Is Shown That Some Fools Are Wiser Than Others.

"WELL, of course, if you and Kate ask me for my candid opinion I think you are absolute fools to contemplate getting married. What does your salary at the bank amount to, Tom? Why, barely £200 a year, and Kate has her own little income of £50—that comes to £250 all told—absurd!"

Montague Lester laid down the law in his usual calm, authoritative fashion, but for once his younger brother failed to agree with him, and as for Kate Martin, she shook her head and laughed merrily.

"What a wet blanket you are, Montague, as if heaps and heaps of bank clerks haven't married on Tom's salary—ah, and on less."

She was a nice looking, dark haired girl, but she could not compare with her sister for beauty. for Rhoda Martin was really lovely, a tall, fair haired, blue eyed blonde, and it was Rhoda to whom Montague addressed his next remark. The four young people were all lunching together at a cheap little restaurant, leading out of the Strand. It was Saturday afternoon, and they were going to a matinee afterward. They belonged to the same suburb, they had grown up side by side.

"What do you say, Rhoda? Don't you think that Kate and Tom will be taking a great risk if they marry on such a small income? Would it not be much wiser if they waited for a few more years?"

Montague laid down his knife and fork as he spoke. He was a very clever young man, and he knew it. He worked for a great publishing house and was the subeditor of a small weekly paper, but he was daily expected to be given a paper of his own. He was lean in his build, his features were very clearly cut and he was clean shaven. He had dark eyes and black hair. Some people thought him handsome, and until he began to talk he was often taken for an American.

Rhoda gave a soft little laugh. She worked for the same great publishing house as Montague, but her position in the firm was not nearly so good as his. She was on the staff of one of the women's papers that the house published but it was not likely she would have a magazine of her own for many a long day. She was very ambitious, though, and possessed brains, but it was her beauty she trusted in.

"I absolutely agree with you. I think it is too silly of Kate and Tom." Rhoda helped herself to some more gooseberry tart, then she turned to her sister. "You are so comfortable at home, Kate, so awfully comfortable. You have the £50 a year that dear mother left us, and then you make about another pound a week with your black and white work, and father has only let you contribute a very small sum to household expenses, so you have quite £70 to spend merely on your clothes and amusements. You won't have all that money to play with when you are married, and you and Tom won't be able to live in the same style that we do at home—you'll have to start your married life in a poky little villa, and it will be all you can do to manage to keep a servant."

Kate smiled; she had a very bright, happy smile. She glanced at Tom Lester, who was sitting opposite to her, and Tom smiled back. Tom was a great contrast to his brother in every way. He was much bigger in build and he was as fair as Montague was dark. His features were not really so good as his brother's, and he cultivated an incipient mustache.

"Tom and I don't mind having to live in a poky little villa in the very least. We are prepared to start very simply, I can assure you, Rhoda. What we don't want to do is to have to wait years for each other; a long engagement is a cruel thing."

"Kate's quite right," Tom interrupted. "Why should we waste the best years of our life waiting for each other? We happen to be in love, you see."

He sought and found Kate's hand under the table and pressed it fondly. But Rhoda

Directions for Cutting Out the Grandmother Fold-a-Way Doll

Mount the doll on heavy paper—an old magazine cover will do nicely—when dry trim off the black lines around the doll; cut into the double lines on the bases to make locks, and into the double lines on body to make slits into which the fastening tabs of the dresses fit. Fold over directly on the dotted lines at the top of the head and the dotted lines at the feet in opposite directions. Bring the bases together and slide the locks from one side into the locks on the opposite side. The doll will then stand alone.

It will not be necessary to mount the dresses, etc., but cut into the slits of the dresses; fold directly on the dotted lines and fit the fastening tabs into the slits. Dolly's clothes are put on and taken off like real dresses, they fit on tightly and will not drop off; and just think! you will have backs to all the dresses as well as fronts, and Dolly herself will stand up straight without any unsightly easel. and Montague shook their heads and felt very sensible and worldly wise. They would never act so foolishly, they thought. They would not dream of marrying on nothing a year. They were going to make a success of their lives—a great success. They intended to be guided by ambition.

"You don't know how happy we are going to be." Kate gently disengaged her hand from Tom's and drew on her gloves. "Look here. Time's getting on, and we ought to be making a start for the theater. I don't like to miss the beginning of a play."

"Why don't you two go on ahead?" Montague suggested. "Rhoda wants a cup of coffee and so do I. We'll follow on."

The little party of four broke up and Tom and Kate hurried away, he taking her arm with a slightly protective air as they left the restaurant. Montague and Rhoda were left alone. They dallied over their coffee and gazed at each other dreamily. Montague told himself what a lovely girl Rhoda was and Rhoda silently admired Montague. They were deep in love, had they only known it, but they preferred to think otherwise.

"They'll get married, they'll not take the least notice of anything we say, Rhoda; they'll marry in haste and repent at leisure."

Montague lit a cigarette and Rhoda began to pull on her gloves. She took much longer over the task than her sister had done. She made great play with her fingers and her slim wrists. Montague watched her, fascinated.

"Yes, Tom and Kate have quite made up their minds—it's frightfully foolish of them I think—I wouldn't marry on twopence-halfpenny a year, myself."

Rhoda rose from the table. She was a very tall, slim girl, and she looked taller than ever this afternoon in her neat gray tailored suit. Montague's heart suddenly gave a queer silly bound; he wished he was a rich man—really rich. For what a beautiful bride Rhoda would make, how she would grace a fine house! Why, she would look like a young queen driving about in a motor car—the car a rich husband could give her—and wouldn't she set off diamonds and furs?

"I wish I'd made my fortune, Rhoda. I shall be a wealthy man presently—I've promised myself that, but I'd give something to be a man of means today."

He helped her throw her feather boa over her shoulders; she wore no collar, her coat was cut away from her firm young throat, and as Montague's fingers touched Rhoda's soft warm flesh he trembled a little; she trembled too.

"Suppose you were a rich man, what would you do straight away, Montague? Buy a house in Park lane, or would Carlton terrace suit you better?"

"Which would be your fancy? It would all depend upon that."

She flushed, a flush that stained her skin rose red from throat to brow, then she laughed, but her laughter sounded rather strained.

"I should vote for Carlton House terrace—the view is great there—besides I think those houses have a curious dignity of their own—they breathe the air of Westminster."

She turned as though to leave the little restaurant, but Montague put an arresting hand upon her arm.

"Don't be in such a hurry, Rhoda; the first two scenes in 'The Dairymaids' are pure piffle. I want to ask you something."

She sat down again, breathing rather quickly. Of her great beauty there could be no question; hers was the exquisite fairness that was at once the glory and the undoing of Helen of Troy, but such beauty demanded its full price.

"Rhoda, I believe, without being unduly boastful—that I shall be able to run a house in Carlton House terrace, say in another twelve years' time—will you wait for that day to come around?"

She started—the blood faded away from her face, leaving her deadly pale then she gave a little hunch of her shapely shoulders.

"I'm twenty-five now, Montague—in another twelve years' time I shall be thirty-seven—my best years over. No, I couldn't promise to wait for any one for twelve years. If I ever do marry I shall have married long before that."

She began to pull at a button of her glove; her heart was beating with undue rapidity. She wished from the very bottom of her heart that Montague had not such a great attraction for her. She wondered if she had it in her to be as silly a fool as her sister Kate. O, what a queer thing love was and how suddenly people—wise, sensible, practical people—came under the spell of the oldest and the greatest enchantment!

She pulled so hard at the button that it came off and she uttered an impatient exclamation. "It must be nice to have a maid to sew on all one's glove buttons. I shouldn't be surprised though if I had a maid of my own soon and a big house—but it won't be the dream house in Carlton House terrace."

She was thinking of the great attention that Clement Howard—the head of the firm of Howard—had taken to pay her lately. She did not think it at all unlikely that the chief would propose shortly, and why shouldn't he? She possessed a face that was bound to bring her the wealth she coveted and her skin was as white and as soft as milk and her golden hair of excellent fineness—she was worth purchase!

"Are you going to get married, Rhoda?"

Montague broke in suddenly upon her reflections; he looked at her queerly and his voice had a strange note in it. For one wild, foolish moment the young man had almost felt inclined to follow his brother's example, and ask Rhoda to marry him right away and not think of any other fellow; only Montague's prudence proved stronger than his passion and he kept back the words that were on the tip of his tongue to utter.

"I don't know—please don't say anything about it at home—I shouldn't be surprised, though."

"The man is rich, of course?"

"I should rather think so."

"Older than yourself?"

"Old enough to be my father—well over fifty."

"And you don't love him?"

"Not a scrap."

She had the grace to flush a little, then she turned to Montague with a somewhat defiant air.

"Look here, Montague—please don't pretend to be shocked! You know perfectly well that you are just as keen upon money as I am myself—that you'd give anything to be rich."

"I wouldn't sell myself as you seem ready to do."

He spoke with a certain amount of quiet bitterness. Rhoda's flush deepened.

"I'm not so sure. You have sold yourself in a sort of way to the god of Mammon, for you wouldn't do anything that might hinder you getting on in the world—you wouldn't handicap yourself by making a rash, improvident marriage. You have asked me to wait twelve years for you, to waste the whole of my youth waiting, but you haven't asked me to marry you at once, as your brother has asked my sister, and you're making much more than Tom makes."

She poured the broken disconnected sentences out rapidly, then she suddenly paused to take breath.

Montague leaned over her chair. His face looked very set and rigid. He was very pale.

"What would be the good of me asking you to marry me? I remember how you laughed when Katie got engaged to Tom six months ago. You told them you thought the engagement a great mistake, you shrugged your shoulders over love in a cottage, you swore that nothing would ever induce you to marry a poor man."

Rhoda began to laugh, but her laugh sounded a little forced and strained.

"You are quite right. I have always expressed the most worldly-wise sentiments. It would have been absurd of you to have credited me with a heart; only I don't think that you ought to pretend to be shocked or surprised when you learn that I contemplate making a really brilliant marriage. What else did you expect me to do if the chance ever came my way?"

She rose, glanced up at the clock.

"Come along, Montague, we shall lose the whole of the first act if you don't hurry, besides what are we staying here for?"

"I'm sure I don't know." He gazed at her irresolutely for a second, feasting his longing eyes upon the beauty that was not for him—wondering—trying to make up his mind to be rash, to be foolish—but always failing in courage.

They walked out of the restaurant. Just outside a flower girl was selling violets. She held up a great moist bunch of the flowers as Rhoda passed and at once the call of the spring was in the air—the wonderful call of the spring. Rhoda hastened on, brushing hurriedly past the flower girl, but Montague paused and bought a bunch of violets. He wondered a little ruefully how soon it would be before some other man would be buying a great shining exotic bridal bouquet for Rhoda. Never mind, she would wear his violets this afternoon!

She tucked the violets into the belt of her grey coat, but their spring cry hurt her, they whispered of spring dreams and spring fancies—they had nothing in common with vanity fair. Somehow her heart began to ache and she felt weary.

It was hot in the theater, but Kate and Tom sitting close to each other in the dress circle seemed to be enjoying the play very much. It was a silly play, Rhoda soon decided—an absurd musical comedy with a dairy maid for a heroine. The sentimental ballads that the dairy maid and her high born lover were always singing seemed to appeal mightily to Tom and Kate, but Rhoda thought the songs silly nonsense, and Montague, when requested to give his opinion, quite agreed with her.

"I thought all this cheap sentiment wouldn't appeal to you," she whispered tartly, "but do look at Kate and Tom. They are drinking in every word—they are actually enjoying it."

"Ah, but they have put on rose colored spectacles for the time being," he retorted. "We haven't—that makes all the difference."

Rhoda was glad when the curtain fell at length on the last act. She wanted to get home. Her head ached, and Tom and Kate vaguely annoyed her—they looked so absurdly, so ridiculously happy—merely because they had just settled to get married in a month's time, to set up house on a hopelessly inadequate income. Why, they ought to be feeling ashamed of themselves for daring to take such a risk, instead of looking as if the whole world belonged to them.

"Let us be lordly and extravagant just for once," Tom exclaimed on leaving the theater. "We will take a taxi all the way to Putney. We will imagine ourselves bloated millionaires, for this is really a great occasion. Kate and I have fixed on the date of the wedding—a month today, eh, Kitten, a month today!"

He smiled radiantly, just as if he was doing the wisest and most sensible thing in the world—and then he hailed a passing taxicab. The address he gave the driver was not that of the large comfortable house where Rhoda and Kate lived with their widowed father and brothers—it was quite a different address altogether, but no one but the taxi driver heard it.

Rhoda's headache got very bad indeed as the taxi made its way down to Putney, but at last she realized that they were being driven in an unfamiliar direction. She turned to her future brother-in-law rather querulously.

"Where on earth is the driver taking us, Tom? Did he hear you give him the address?"

"Yes, he heard right enough," Tom answered, a broad smile breaking over his face. "But we are not driving straight to York Lodge, Rhoda. We are going to Prospect Villa—that's the name of the little shanty that I took on a three years' lease this morning."

He laughed and looked at Kate, who blushed like a rose. Rhoda and Montague gazed at each other in turn, then Montague coughed a rather queer, dry cough.

"So we are to inspect the future residence of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Lester—the nest of the lovebirds." He played with his watchchain. "I'm sure I wish you and the kitten the best of luck, old man. I—I expect you'll both be awfully happy in your little home. I'm sure you will."

"We mean to be," Tom answered gravely. "And if troubles come, as troubles may, Kate and I intend to struggle through all right—besides, we shall be together."

Rhoda did not say anything but she wondered what she would be feeling like if she were driving up to the home that she hoped to share with a man she loved. Somehow she felt envious of Kate for a second—Kate did look so happy!

The taxicab drew up outside Prospect Villa. It was just a doll's house of a villa and stood in a little garden of its own. As Tom somewhat proudly announced, it was quite detached. He also called the attention of the company to three fine lilac bushes in the garden and a laburnum tree covered with yellow tresses and a little pink May tree.

"Kate won't lack flowers," he said. "There are some jolly rose trees in the garden at the back of the house and there's a small greenhouse and potting-shed."

Rhoda looked at the villa. It was very, very tiny. She did not feel at all envious now, but Kate appeared to be as happy as a queen who is just being shown her kingdom.

"Oh, Tom, what a dear, darling little house," she cried. "Oh, won't we make a lovely home of it—won't the windows look sweet when we have put blinds and curtains up—open the door and take me straight in——"

She clung to Tom's arm with the prettiest grace in the world and her eyes glistened when he drew a big key out of his pocket and dangled it in front of her.

"The key of our home," she whispered; "the dear key of our home!"

Montague put his hand upon Rhoda's shoulder. His face looked softer and more gentle than she had ever seen it.

"Let them go in alone," he whispered, "we'll join them presently—let them go in alone."

Rhoda's lips tightened; she watched Tom and Kate enter the little doll's house together and she and Montague stood outside.

"We'll come in later, old man," Montague shouted to his brother. "Show Kate over the domain first—Rhoda and I will explore the garden."

They did not do much exploring, however. They stood in the center of the little path and Rhoda drew her feather stole tightly over her shoulders, for the spring day was drawing to its close and the air ~~had~~ suddenly turned chilly. It was growing dark; twilight was softly descending on the garden, blurring the outlines of the bushes and the trees—a delicate haze seemed to hang over everything—a dim gloom.

The scent of the lilac blossom filled the air and Rhoda's nostrils drank in the perfume—once again she felt the call of the spring. She knew in her heart of hearts that this was the mating season, the time of the year when nature has ordained that youth shall turn to youth—but she fought against the knowledge.

"Rhoda," Montague touched her hand in the darkness, "I believe that Tom and Kate will be quite happy. They don't want as much as we want, I fancy. Would you like to live in a little villa like this—could you be happy here?"

She shook her head.

"I'm afraid not. I want a big house, many servants, all the luxuries——"

He drew a deep breath—was it a breath of relief?

"I thought so. No, we could neither of us be happy here." He paused for a second, his voice broke a little. "Dear old Tom, he is in the seventh heaven, though——"

"So is Kate," she interrupted, then into her voice crept a great hungry note of longing. "Oh, Montague, I suppose they are fools, but I do envy them being able to be content with so little. Are they really very foolish, or very wise?"

Montague's lips twisted into a wry smile.

"The wisdom of fools," he muttered, "the wisdom of fools!"

One of the windows of Prospect Villa opened and Kate put out her head.

"Come inside," she called out triumphantly. "It's too sweet—I just love every room in my home!"

Rhoda took Montague's arm, her hand shook a little.

"We shall never have a home, you and I, Montague, I am afraid," she whispered; "we shall dwell in state in big houses."

He nodded his head. He was vaguely aware that he would go down to his grave a rich and a lonely man, whilst Tom and Kate would have their memory kept green by their children. He had also a dim vision of Rhoda growing harder and colder as the years swept by—Rhoda, who could love as well as Kate if she chose.

"Shall we give up our big houses and try to find a little home, too," he whispered. "What do you think, Rhoda?"

She choked down a sob and she pressed closer to him in the gathering darkness. Then suddenly she turned and he lost her among the shadows—she had slipped from him silently. When three minutes later they entered Prospect Villa there was a hard look on their faces—they had nearly made utter fools of themselves—for one strange second they had fancied that the only thing needful in life was love.

found. But I could not write you. There was no way—no one to trust to mail it—and they had stolen my key," she whispered, and the confessing words with their quiver of forlornness told Ryder something of the story of those helpless days and nights.

"I didn't dare write you more personally," he murmured, "for fear they would find the note."

"I understood. That plaid about the box—that was so clever a warning. I kept the box and hunted in it."

"I wanted to tell you more about that locket. I dug it up myself from the tomb I was excavating—do you remember how you wished that I would dig from the sands whatever secret I most desired? And I found that. And it happened that at McLean's I had met the French agent who was searching for any trace of the Delcassés, of the wife and child of the explorer who had disappeared fifteen years before. That miniature was your image, and I guessed at once.

"McLean and I went to the pasha—O, I didn't tell him I'd met you!" he flung in, his eyes twinkling—"and we pretended we knew all about his marriage to Madame Delcassé and he owned up without a quiver. But when we tried to claim you for the French family, he doubled like a hare. He said the Delcassé child was dead, died when his own child was a baby, and that you were his own. But I was sure that you were more than 14, and that he was simply putting it over on us so as to have this marriage go on without interference—and so I tried to get the story to you. Even now I thought you ought to know," he added, as if in palliation of his invasion here.

For he realized now how tremendous an invasion it was.

All the guests about him had not given him that feeling, all that sea of femininity, those grave matrons whose serenely unveiled faces would burn with shame to be beheld by this stranger, those bright, slim girls, in their extravagant frocks, their tulle, their lace, their pearls, their diamonds, all the hidden charms that no man had yet seen stirred in him no more than an excited and adventurous curiosity.

But the vision of Aimée—that delicate beauty in its tragic irony of throne and diadem! It touched him to tenderness and to an actual sense of sacrilege at the freedom of his gaze. No moonlight vision this, ethereal and dreamlike, but a vivid, disquieting radiance of dark, shining eyes and rose flushed cheeks. He had never seen her hair before, midnight hair escaping in little curls from the veil and the diadem. And he had never really seen her mouth—wistful and gay, like the mouth of the miniature—nor her chin, so tender and willful—nor her skin, satin soft, in its veiling from the daylight.

She was more than young and sweet and fair. She was beauty, beauty with its elusive, ineluctable spell, entangled with the appeal of her helplessness.

A bright flush flooded her now and her eyes fell, in confusion, before the prolonging of his look.

"But it is dangerous—your being here," she murmured.

"The fortieth door," he reminded her.

Under her breath, "Ah, you remember?"

"I remember. And but last night I heard Khazib, the story teller, tell the tale and I thought of you and your warning—of the door that hid you, that it was forbidden for me to open."

"And so you opened it, monsieur." Faintly she smiled, with downcast lashes.

"And I came as you first came to me—in mantle and veil."

For a moment their thoughts fled back to that masquerade, which seemed so long ago.

"But it is too late," she said tremulously.

"Is it too late—for me to help you?"

At that her eyes rose to his again in a swift flash of hunted fear.

"O, take me away from him!" she breathed, suddenly, unpremeditately. "Somehow—somewhere—"

Another figure came towards them, Madame de Coulevain in all her severe elegance of black.

"Come and join your friends at the supper, my dear; there is no need for you to be pilloried here any longer," she observed with an indifferent scrutiny of the persistent veiled woman, and Ryder moved slowly away while Aimée came dutifully down from the throne, a huge black bending to hold her train.

"I thought you were never coming! What were you talking about?" demanded a voice in Ryder's ear, and he found Jinny Jeffries at his side, her bright gray eyes pouncing upon him with curiosity.

"O, I wished her joy—native phrases—that sort of thing," he answered mechanically as they drew back into an embrasure of the mashrubiyeh that formed one side of the great room.

"But you were talking forever. I saw you holding forth at a tremendous rate. Why wouldn't you let me stay and listen?"

"You'd have put me off my shot. I had to feel unobserved to play up."

"You must be fearfully good at Arabic," said Jinny guilelessly. "And what did she say?"

"Why—she didn't say anything in particular."

"But what was that she was showing you? I saw her bend forward with a locket or something?"

A plague upon Jinny's bright eyes! "O, yes, the locket," said Ryder with an effort. "She—ah—she showed it to me."

"But why?" Wasn't that awfully funny?"

"O, I believe it's a custom, courtesy stunt you know, to show a poor guest some of the presents," he explained, manufacturing under pressure.

"I wish she'd show me her rings. Did you ever see so many? It was the only thing about her you'd call really eastern—all those glittering diamonds on her little fingers. And did you notice her hands?" Jinny went on enthusiastically. "Jack, I never knew there was anything so lovely as that girl in the world. She's simply exquisite. I suppose it's her whole life," Miss Jeffries reflected, "keeping herself beautiful." Her eyes rested curiously on the feminine groups before them. "They haven't anything else to do or think about, have they?"

"I understand some of them are remarkably educated young women."

"What's the use of it?" said the practical daughter of an American college. "They can't ever meet any men, but just a husband."

"They can read for themselves, can't they? And talk to each other? And—well, what do you girls do with your education anyway? You don't lug anything very heavy about the golf course and the ballroom."

"Who wants us to? But we do bring something to committees and clubs and—and welfare work," Miss Jeffries maintained stoutly. "And we are always into arguments at dinners. While these girls—they can't dine out, they haven't anybody but themselves to argue with, and it doesn't matter a straw politically what they think—they can't even change the customs their great-great-great-grandfathers imposed. If I were one of these girls," she declared positively, "I wouldn't bother about Kant and chemistry and history—I'd stuff myself full of sweetmeats and loll around on a divan and not care what happened outside. Or else I'd be miserable."

"Perhaps they are miserable."

"Then they ought to fight. Think, think," said Jinny dramatically, "of marrying some man you've never seen—the way that lovely girl is doing. Suppose she doesn't like him? Suppose he's dull and cranky and mean and greedy? Suppose he bores her? Suppose she actually hates him? Why, Jack, it's horrible! And yet she submits—she submits to it."

"Suppose she has to submit, that she hasn't a soul on earth to help her? How would you fight, I wonder?"

"Well, you don't need to shout about it! That woman's looking now—that one with the green turban and the stuffed date eyes."

Nervously Jinny glanced around.

"It's a fearful lark," she murmured, "but I don't believe I'd ever have had the nerve if I'd realized. What do you suppose they would do, Jack, if they found you out? Those big blacks look so—so uncivilized."

Her eyes rested upon the great eunuch at the far entrance of the salon, a huge, hideous fellow, with red fez, baggy blouse and trousers, and a knife handle sticking piratically from a sash.

"He has on English oxfords," said Ryder lightly. "That's a saving something. But they aren't going to find out. I have an idea we ought to make our getaway now, and that we had better not go together. You go first and then I'll stroll along, and whisk off these duds in some quiet corner. I have to meet a man tonight, but I'll probably see you tomorrow. And don't," he entreated, "don't, as you love your life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, breathe a word of my being here like this to any one—any time—anywhere. I was an unmitigated ass to link you up with it. So be wary."

"O, I shall," Jinny Jeffries promised vividly, and with a last look about the old palace, the empty marriage throne, and the dissolving knots of guests, she gave a little nod to her veiled companion, sauntered without visible trepidation past the staring eunuch at the door, went down the long stairs where other departing guests were drawing on mantles and veils, and so made her way across a shadowy garden and out the gate that another black opened.

And then she drew a sudden breath of relief and glanced up at a sky of sunset fires and felt the free air play with her hair and face and so shook off, lightly and gratefully, that darkening impression of shuttered rooms and guarding blacks.

Little rivers of wine and fire were bubbling in Aimée's veins. She was gay at supper, as a bride should be gay. It was enough, for those first few moments, that she had seen him again, that he had dared to come and try to help her—that he cared enough to come!

Her heart sang little pæans of joy and triumph. She sketched impossible scenes of escape—she saw herself, in a shrouding mantle, slipping with him past the guests at the door, she saw them speeding away in a motor, she saw France, the unknown Delcassés—a bright, gay world of freedom and romance. Or, perhaps, if not tonight, then tomorrow. They would plan. She would obtain permission to take a drive and there would be a signal—a waiting car.

But, better now. She could not endure even the call of ceremony from that man who called himself her husband. The very memory of his eyes on her was intolerable.

Decidedly, it must be tonight. And Ryder would think of a way. She must get back to him—he would be lingering. She must get away from this hateful table, these guests and companions.

A wild impatience tore at her. She grew uneasy, anxious, fretted at the frightening way that time was slipping past.

Her radiance vanished, her smile was nervous, forced, as she sat at her table of honor, amid the circle of her friends, with a linked wreath of candelabra sending its sparkle of lights over the young faces and jewel clasped throats, over the glittering silver on the white satin cloth amid the drift of pink and white rose petals.

She began to bite her lips nervously. She did not hear what her bridesmaids were chattering about. Her eyes went often, with that stealth that invites regard, to the tiny platinum and diamond watch upon her wrist.

Would they never finish? Would they never be free? She wondered if she dared feign an illness, to rise and leave them; but no, that would mean solicitude, companions.

And now the slaves were bringing still another round of trays.

O hurry, hurry, her tightening nerves besought.

At last! The older women were going. Not even for a wedding would they deeply infringe upon that rule which keeps the Moslem women indoors after the sun has set. Ceremoniously each made to the bride her adieux and good wishes, and ceremoniously a frantically impatient Aimée returned the formal thanks due for "assistance at the humble fête."

She did not see that black mantle anywhere.

Her heart sank. Stupid, she told herself with quivering lips, to dream that he could dare to linger, that he had any way to get her out. By help he meant no more than getting letters to France for her. And yet his eyes when they had met hers— Surely he had meant—but when she had disappeared from the reception room to attend the supper, when there seemed no way of speaking again to her, and all the outsiders, all but the invited guests were departed, he had been obliged to go too.

Perhaps some one had begun to notice him. She wondered if he had been careful about his shoes, his hands. How had he managed about the dress anyway? And then she remembered that girl, that pretty American with the ruddy hair to whom she had seen him talking, and she conjectured that there was feminine aid and confidence.

A wave of bitterness swept over her. He had told that girl about her—he knew that girl well enough to tell her! And perhaps he was only sorry for the poor little French girl in the Turkish harem, perhaps they were both sorry.

Has he told that girl, she thought with bitter mutiny, that he had kissed her?

That girl must have been very sure of him not to be jealous of his interest in herself!

And now, they could be somewhere together, perhaps talking her over, while she was here—here forever.

She was so white now, so silent, so distrait, that all the chatter of the younger girls, who were lingering around her, could not dispel the feeling of depression. They cast covert glances of discomfort at each other, begged for more music from the orchestra, talked with an effort of the size and spaciousness of the palace and the magnificence of the feast.

She had told herself that she had ceased to hope. She did not know how false it was until the eunuch brought his message. Then hope really died.

The general was below and begged to be announced to madame.

"We fly!" whispered a lingerer with nervous laughter, and hastily the young people hurried into their tcharchafs and veils, murmuring among themselves, with sidelong glances at that white figure whose cold hand and cheek they had just touched, hastily they sped, like light footed nymphs in some witches' robes, down the long room, while Madame de Coulevain drew back a strand of the girl's dark hair and murmured, "But smile, my dear," to the still figure and escaped with the guests.

And then Aimée was alone in the great room, deserted of its throngs, a darkening room, full of burned down candles and fallen flower petals, with here and there the traces of the revelers—a scented handkerchief, a fan, a buckle from some French slipper, or a feather from an ancient turban clasp.

Like the ghost of some deserted queen, with her regal satins and glittering circlet, she waited. There was a moment of grace in which she tried to turn a gallant face toward the next moment.

Then he came, advancing. It may have been her distorted fancy, but down the long perspective that figure looked more mincing, more waspish, more unreal than ever. And she was conscious of that swift rising of dislike, of antagonism touched with reasonless fear.

. . . . . . . . . . .

He kissed her hands. She caught the murmur of compliments and the mingled scent of musk and wine. He had been dining at his reception for the men, but he called now for a table and more refreshment.

A small table was brought to the end of the room, near the marriage throne where all the day she had paraded; a richly embroidered cloth of satin was flung over it, and from the candelebras fresh lights shed down a little circle of brilliance.

Faintly Aimée protested that eat she could not, and then she made a feint of eating, lingering over her sherbets, because eating was, after all, so safe and uncomplicated. a thing.

The black brought champagne in its jacket of ice and filled their glasses.

The general rose. "A notre bonheur—to our happiness," he declared, holding out his glass, and she clinked her own to it, and brought her lips to touch the brim, but not to that toast could she swallow a single one of the bubbles that went winking up and down the hollow stem.

The glass trembled suddenly in her hand as she set it down. An overpowering sense of fatigue was upon her. With the death of her poor hope, with the collapse of all those flighty, childish dreams, the leaden weight of realities seemed to descend crushingly upon her. She felt stricken, inert, apathetic.

It was all so unreal, so bizarre. This could not possibly be taking place in her life, this fantastic scene, this table set with lights and food at the end of a dark, deserted old room, opposite this grimacing, foppish stranger.

She could barely master strength for her replies. How had it all gone? Excellently? She was satisfied with her new home? With the service? The appointments?

He plied her with questions and she tried to summon her spirit. she achieved a few perfunctory phrases, the words of a frightened child struggling for its manners. She tried to smile, unconscious of the betrayal of her eyes.

He told her, sketchily, of his day. A bore, those affairs, those speeches, he told her, gazing at her, his wine glass in his hand, a flush of wine and excitement in his face. She found it unpleasant to look at him. Her glance evaded his.

She stammered a word of praise for the palace. It must be very ancient, she told him. Very—interesting.

Buck and Spike Happened to Stop There When They Came to "Do" the Town.

VIOLETS blooming out of the asphalt at the corner of State and Madison streets could have offered no stranger contrast than did the appearance of Mr. Buck Litchen and Mr. Spike Howe seated on the vine shaded porch of a Prairie Junction boarding nouse. Mr. Litchen, indifferently following the maneuvers of a gay winged insect that flitted from potato plants to carrot tops and back in the vegetable garden, lit a cigaret and twirled the burnt match into the geranium bed that thirsted by the porch steps.

"Yes, it does seem funny to be back in 'civies,'" agreed Buck, hitching his trousers as he tipped back in his chair. "This stuff I'm wearing is just rags that I had packed away."

"I suppose there were times 'over there' when you thought you'd never need 'em again," speculated Spike.

"One time—just once. There was once when I thought it was all over but putting my name on the casualty list. Though I'd never be hitting over the country with you again at the old grafts. First fight I was in. My buddy and I was carrying messages. They wanted the left of the company to move up and straighten out the line. We just got well on top of the hill when the Germans tore loose. I dropped in the grass and my buddy dropped in the grass. Seemed as if we must have laid there a year, but I guess it wasn't more than half an hour."

"I've wondered," Spike interrupted, "if maybe all that kind of experience, shell shock or something, wouldn't have made you lose your old cleverness. I've thought about it while I was hitting around the country alone. You know how we always worked—fast, thought just a little quicker than the other fellow. That's how we always got by. You remember how quick we had to think out there in Lamora——"

"O, I've got more nerve than I ever had," scoffed Buck. "But I was telling you about this time 'over there.' We laid there flat in the grass, my buddy and I did, with the shells sizzing over our heads. I was dry and all the more so because I knew my canteen was empty. The powder and shell dust was making my tongue hang out. 'Wish I had a drink of water,' I said. Just said it. Didn't have any idea what buddy was going to do. Didn't expect him to do anything at all. But he raised up and reached back for his own canteen. A machine gun bullet got him square in the chest when he raised up—square in the chest. And then Jerry quit sending 'em over. If he hadn't raised up just when he did——"

Mr. Buck Litchen ended by watching the tops of the tall poplars by the gate turn their silver sides to the faint breeze.

"Well, we're together again," said Spike, returning to the practical present. "Been here a week now waiting for you. Tickled to death when I saw you pulling up at the gate a few minutes ago. Just leave your baggage here awhile. It's hot up there in that room. It's got a slanting tin roof and it's on the wrong side for the breeze. It's time we pulled something. Couldn't have picked a better town—small, asleep, out of the way."

"Yeah, you told me in your letter."

"I hate the heat of the day," Spike went on. "All you can do is doze through it. Give me evening when the sun has gone down. I like to watch the natives crowd up on the corner downtown when you start those coon songs to banjo accompaniment. I like to have them answer to your request to 'crowd up closer.' I like the way you used to say, 'We haven't anything to sell, gentlemen—merely demonstrating.' We've had lean periods, but we've had the times when we cleaned up, haven't we, Buck?"

"I'll tell the world."

"I see well enough you're the same old bird. There's no end to the dope we can pull now that we're together again. I suppose these hick towns seem pretty tame to you after all the noise 'over there.'"

"Can't get busy too soon to suit me," assured Buck, squinting at the dust sprayed hollyhocks standing in stately row at the vegetable garden's edge.

"We get out of town quick," advised Spike. "I've looked up the schedules—late train on the only road through here. And I'm going to have a surprise for you tonight when we leave. Just a little affair of my own—something I've been developing on my own hook."

"Yeah."

Shadows lengthened, and the arrival of other boarders on the columbine shaded veranda hinted that the hour of the evening meal was drawing nigh. Among the arrivals was a thin faced man in an alpaca coat who glanced toward Mr. Spike Howe and his companion with lips tightly set.

If he hadn't raised up just when he did——

"He's the bird that owns the town," explained Spike from the side of his mouth, "this house here and everything that's loose. Name is Meadowbrook. I guess he don't like the looks of you any more than he's admired my style."

They passed into the dining room and the gray haired, scrawny necked woman at the head of the table began her explanations that the high prices at the store and failure to get help in the kitchen were responsible for any shortcomings in the bill of fare. It had been so hot the night before she had been able to get but little sleep—there was so much to worry about nowadays—would Essie please shut off the phonograph for a minute—her head was buzzing.

"When you pay for a thing it's due you to get it," remarked Meadowbrook of the alpaca coat, peering about the board, his chin elevated in critical inspection.

"You wouldn't talk like that if Eddie was here," gulped the landlady. "Nobody ever said anything then. They didn't dare. Everybody paid up prompt then, too."

"Do you insinuate I haven't paid prompt?" snapped Meadowbrook, viciously shooting a fly from his nose.

"I'm only boarding out what you owed me."

"You know I paid you, Mr. Meadowbrook. Eddie had the receipt. He kept track of all those things."

"Show me the receipt," argued the old man. "You ain't been able to. And, young man, I'll trouble you to pass me the steak before it's all gone."

"You got arms like the rest of us, ain't ya?" came back Mr. Buck Litchen.

The girl, Essie, was moving about the table, filling the water glasses. Buck noticed that when she filled Mr. Spike Howe's glass her eyelids lowered and her cheeks flushed. He did not miss the flushed cheeks, nor the smirk on Spike's face when he caught the girl's eye.

Young as she was—bashful and barely in her teens—she thoroughly belonged there in the old house. It was an old house—sagging, carpeted floors, a hanging lamp decorated with glass beads, stereopticon and sea shell relics on the center table in the parlor, an organ in the corner, a crocheted tidy covering the place in the back of the sofa where the upholstery had failed to survive the years.

The cornstarch pudding having been served by Miss Essie, Buck and Spike repaired to the privacy of the room which Spike had been occupying for a week past.

"It will be the gold watches we get rid of down on the corner downtown tonight," began Spike, opening a travel worn valise. "'For advertising purposes only,' of course, 'simply to introduce the goods, fob thrown in.' A song or two with the guitar after we get the gas jet to flickering. I've got everything here. Work as we always did. Sure you haven't lost the old touch—the way of landing 'em just the right minute when they're all worked up into thinking they're getting something for nothing? I'll be glad, myself, to be leaving this old room. Don't blame me for not bringing you up here before, do you? Tin roof and hot as an oven. This used to be Eddie's room, I guess. Looks as if all his junk was left here."

"Looks like it, Spike."

"Thought I'd do a little reading last night, but there wasn't nothing but old geographies and arithmetics—name scratched all through 'em. There must have been a gang through these parts doing a big business with enlarged crayon portraits some time or other. I've had that one up there on the wall looking down at me all week."

"That one up there?"

"Yeah."

Mr. Buck Litchen slowly moistened the paper along the cigaret he had been rolling.

"Well, let's go," said Spike, rising.

"Wait a minute, Spike. No, I don't want a match. Wait a minute. I'm thinking about something."

"Come on, that ain't nothing but a kid arithmetic. I looked at it the other night. Never did care for 'em. Come on."

"Wait a minute, Spike. I want to sit here a minute. I'm thinking about something."

"Aw, come on."

"Go ahead. I'll be along in a minute. I was just thinking about something."

The boarding house was in blackness when they returned to it. Nearing midnight and still hot—great corn weather. Threatening clouds brooded low. The sleepless landlady came to unfasten the screen door from the inside.

"Why, Essie's with you," she greeted in surprise. "What you doing out this time of night? Thought you was in bed long ago."

"Come out on the porch, lady," requested Mr. Buck Litchen.

"Don't believe a thing he says," began the girl in tears. "The old buttinsky, he thinks he's so smart."

"No, I don't think I'm so very smart or anything else," defended Buck listlessly, "but I can stand to be called most anything rather than see a girl who don't know her own mind yet running away with Spike Howe. I know, she thinks she's living an awful dull life, not a bit like the novels she's been reading. Thinks she's wasting her life sticking around here, and she don't know what life is. I'll take how she feels about it in a year or two and not what she's got to say about me now. She's just at that foolish age——"

"Aw——"

"That's enough from you, Spike. That'll be all out of you. Essie ain't going away with no stranger, lady, just because he knows how to slick his hair back and a lot of new slang. Did Spike pay his board bill in advance with one of those gold watches of his? Count out what you owe her in real money, Spike."

"Aw——"

"Count it out, Spike. Now what would Meadowbrook's board for the year past come to, lady? You go inside and get a pencil and paper and figure it up. You don't need to tell anybody about it. It's coming to you, ain't it?"

"But, Buck," pleaded Spike when they were alone again. "That was my job, picking that Meadowbrook roll. Tough proposition, too, one of the toughest I ever went up against. He had it sewed onto him. I asked you this afternoon, Buck, if you had your old ability since you got back. Why, you ain't any more the same than nothing, you who used to——"

"Sh-h-h-h," silenced Buck. "She'll hear you, Eddie's mother will. What was it she said there at the table tonight—she expected Eddie might come back? No chance, Spike—no chance, not when you get a machine gun bullet square in the chest."

The Fortieth Door

SYNOPSIS.

Jack Ryder, a young American, is doing some excavating in Egypt, and is induced by Jinny Jeffries, a pretty American tourist he has known, to attend a masked ball at her hotel. He obtains a Scotch costume from a friend, Andrew McLean, an attaché of the English government, and at McLean's he hears the story of a French scholar who disappeared in the desert fifteen years before. The man was reported dead, and a wife and baby girl were left; now the inheritance of an estate makes it suddenly important to hunt up the child. But all trace is gone. McLean shows Ryder a miniature portrait of the young Frenchman, curiously mounted. At the ball Ryder is fascinated by a mysterious young girl in a Mohammedan costume who will give no hint of her identity. He follows as she slips away and finds she is the daughter of Tewfick Pasha, a Turkish official in the neighboring palace. The terrible ennui of her secluded life has led the girl to this escapade. At parting in the garden, to the girl's horror and amazement, Ryder kisses her. A moment later a servant finds her and says her father wishes to see her. Her fear of discovery proves groundless, but is succeeded by a greater one when her father informs her he wishes her to marry a repulsive old man to save himself from ruin. Ryder sees Aimée again, and when he learns that she is to be married leaves her in anger and returns to the desert to his excavations. There he finds evidence which convinces him that Aimée is the daughter of the Frenchman who disappeared. He determines to rescue her, and returns to Cairo. He persuades McLean to accompany him to Tewfick Pasha's home. This does not result satisfactorily for the visitors, as the pasha is suspicious and on his guard. He tells them the girl they seek died in childhood and that Aimée is his own daughter. Jack knows that he lies and finds a way to send Aimée the story of her French parentage. Aimée is unable to escape and is forced to carry through her foster father's plan. At the marriage feast Jack appears before the unhappy bride.

SEVENTH INSTALLMENT.

JACK OPENS THE FORTIETH DOOR.

WHEN Ryder had dispatched from the jeweler's who had polished the locket for him, that package with its secret note, and its warning plaid, he had no real assurance that the message would fall into Aimée's hands. But he could think of nothing better, and he argued very favorably for his stratagem. That miniature ought to have some effect, and given the miniature, and the bit of plaid cloth, Aimée's quick wit ought to divine a message.

She had always the key, he remembered, and the power of egress from her prison. And surely it ought not to be difficult for her to divine some way of getting a letter into the post. So his hope fluctuated between the garden gate and the daily mail at the bank, and he rather surprised McLean by the frequency and brevity of his visits, and by the duration of his stay in Cairo.

For that, he had an excuse, both to McLean and to the deserted Thatcher at the excavation camp, two excuses in fact—some belated identification work to be done at the museum and a cracked wisdom tooth. Chiefly he spoke of the necessity for dentistry, and accounted for his moods with his molar.

Of moods he had many. Moods when he contemplated his behavior lightly and brightly or darkly, in unrelieved disgust, moods when he refused to contemplate it at all. But he stayed. That was the conspicuous and enduring thing. He stayed.

Jinny Jeffries returned from the Nile by express to find him esconced at her hotel, and her bright confidence suffered no diminution of its self-respect. And it was through Jinny that chance set another straw of circumstance dancing his way.

Jinny had a frock she wished repaired. Mrs. Heath-Brown, whom she had met upon the Nile, recommended to her a Mrs. Hendricks, wife of a British soldier, and a most clever little needlewoman. Jinny looked up Mrs. Hendricks and found it impossible to secure her for some days as she was busy refitting for a fashionable wedding in the Mohammedan world.

A night later, and two nights before the wedding, Jinny made a narrative of the circumstances for Jack Ryder's benefit.

"Such frocks h'as h'I 'ave to do—and the young lady no more caring!" had been a saying of the Hendricks that Jinny passed interestedly on to Jack. She had no memory of the young lady's name, but distinctly she recalled that she was young and beautiful and to marry a general.

It was enough to launch Jinny's eager interest in Mohammedan marriages and foster the wish that she might attend one. She regretted Mrs. Heath-Brown's absence and her lack of acquaintance, and suggested that Jack ought to know some one.

"Better than that, I'll take you," said Jack with a promptness that brought a light to Miss Jeffries' eyes.

There was also a light in Jack Ryder's eyes, a swift burning of excitement and adventure.

Why not? The thing was possible. Muffled in a tcharch af and veiled with a heavy yashmak, armed with enough Arabic for the briefest of encounters, he might dare the danger. Who in the world would discover him? Who would ever know?

The thing was unthinkable. It was a desperate desecration, comparable only, in his vague analogies, to the Mecca pilgrimage and profanation of a holy tomb. But its very improbability would prevent detection.

Only Jinny had to keep her mouth extremely shut——before and afterwards.

He impressed this upon her so thoroughly, as they did their shopping for the costume together the next morning, that she had compunctious moments of solicitude when she said he really ought not to. She would feel responsible. Thereupon, he laughed, laughed, and dared her to be game, and she grew all mirthful confidence again.

But that night, sitting alone in a native café over his Turkish coffee, Ryder was grimly serious. He knew that it was a mad thing to do. He felt not so much the danger he ran from discovery but the danger to his already shattered peace of mind from another glimpse of that strange girl, that young unknown, on whom he had spent such time and thought, of late, that she seemed a very part of his existence.

What was the good of going to her wedding reception? Feebly he told himself that it was his only chance to inform her upon the history of the Delcasses. There might have been reasons for her nonappearance at the gate, for her not writing. He could have no glimmering of what went on behind those barred windows. This was his only chance—he meant to say, to tell her—but his eager senses murmured, to see her again.

That was it—to see her again. He owned the lure, at last with a bitter ruefulness. But—he brightened up at that—it was partly his duty to himself. Now he had all sorts of fool imaginings about this girl. He was remembering her as something lovelier than a Houri, more enchanting than fairy magic, more sweet than spring. He owed it to himself to rout these imbecile prepossessions and prove clearly and dispassionately that the girl was just a very nice little girl, a pretty bride, marrying into a very distinct life from his own—and a girl with whom he would not have an idea in common. A girl, in fact, far inferior to any American. A girl not to be compared to Jinny Jeffries. Besides, there was fun in the thing. It tempted him tremendously. It was adventurous, romantic, forbidden.

He heard the word echoed in Turkish behind him. So engrossed in his thoughts had he been that he had been inattentive to the rhythm of old Khazib, the tale teller's voice, as he held forth from the divan, beside his long stemmed pipe, to his nightly audience of men and boys, camel drivers, small merchants, desert men from the long caravans who were the frequenters of this café.

Tonight there were few about the old man, and Ryder had small difficulty in drawing nearer the circle. A green turbaned Arab, with the profile of a Washington and the naïve eyes of a youth, whispered to him courteously that it was the tale of the Third Kaland, and the Prince Azib was in the palace of the forty damsels who were farewelling him, as they were to depart, according to custom for forty days.

Khazib, with a faint salutation of his turban towards the newcomer, went slowly, sonorously on with his tale.

"We fear," said the damsel unto Azib, "lest thou contraire our charge and disobey our injunctions. Here now we commit to thee the keys of the palace which containeth forty chambers and thou mayest open of these thirty and nine, but beware (and we conjure thee by Allah and by the lives of us!) lest thou open the fortieth door, for there is that which shall separate us forever."

For a moment the café faded from Ryder's eyes. He was in the gloom of a garden, a shadowy darkness just touched by a crescent moon, and beside him in the shrubbery a dark, shrouded form, shaking its shawled head at him in denial, and whispering, lightly but tremblingly, "It is a forbidden door, forbidden as that fortieth. There are thirty and nine doors in your life, monsieur, that you may open, but this is the forbidden."

He had meant to look up that tale. And now chance was reminding him of it again. A superstitious man—Ryder's great-grandfather, perhaps—would have felt it for an omen of warning, and a devout man—Ryder's grandfather perhaps, would have taken it for a sign from heaven to divert his path, Ryder reflected upon coincidence.

"When he saw her weeping," Khazib was intoning, and now Ryder attended, his scanty knowledge of the vernacular straining and overleaping the blanks, "Prince Azib said to himself, 'By Allah, I will never open that fortieth door, never, and in no wise!'"

"A wise bird," thought Ryder to himself, drawing on his cigaret.

"And I bade her farewell," continued the voice, "Thereupon all departed, flying like birds, leaving me alone in the palace. When evening drew near, I opened the door of the first chamber and found myself in a place like one of the pleasaunces of paradise. It was a garden with trees of freshest green and ripe fruits of yellow sheen. And I walked among the trees and I smelt the breath of the flowers and heard the birds sing their praise the Allah, the One, the Almighty."

"Alhamdolillah," murmured Ryder's neighbors reverently.

"And I looked upon the apple, whose hue is parcel red and parcel yellow, and I looked upon the quince whose fragrance putteth to shame musk and ambergris, and upon the pear whose taste surpasseth sherbet and sugar, and the apricot, whose beauty striketh the eye as she were a polished ruby.

"One the morrow I opened the second door and found myself in a specious plain set with tall date palms and watered by a running stream whose banks were shrubbed with rose and jasmine, while privet and eglantine, ox-eye, violet and lily, narcissus, origane and the winter gilliflower carpeted the borders; and the breath of the breeze swept over those sweet smelling growths."

How inadequate, Ryder realized, had been the description given by the book of Genesis to the garden of Eden.

"And the third door," droned on the rhythmic voice, "into an open hall, hung with cages of sandal wood and eagle wood; full of birds, which made sweet music, such as the mocking bird, and the cusha, the merle, the turtle dove, and the Nubian ring dove."

A trifle restively Ryder stirred. He liked birds, but he wanted to be getting on to that fortieth door and this was slow progress. Not a sign of impatience marred the bright, absorbed content of the other listeners, intent now upon the wonders that the fourth chamber revealed, stores of "pearls and jacinths and beryls, and emeralds and corals and carbuncles and all manner of precious gems and jewels such as the tongue of man could not describe."

The story teller proceeded, "Then," quoth Prince Azib, "now verily am I the monarch of the age, since by Allah's grace this enormous wealth is mine; and I have forty damsels under my hand, nor is there any to claim them save myself."

The handsome Arab beside Ryder inhaled his pipe luxuriously. "By the grace of Allah!" he said reverently.

"Then I gave not over opening place after place until nine and thirty days were passed, and in that time I had entered every chamber except that one whose door I was charged not to open. But my thoughts ever ran upon that forbidden fortieth and Satan urged me to open it for my own undoing."

"I see his finish," said Ryder, interestedly to himself—and he thought of the analogy.

"So I stood before the chamber, and, after a few moments' hesitation, opened the door, which was plated with red gold, and entered. I was met by a perfume whose like I had never before smelt; and so sharp and subtle was the odor that it made my senses drunken as with strong wine, and I fell to the ground in a fainting fit which lasted a full hour. When I came to myself I strengthened my heart, and, entering, found myself in a chamber bespread with saffron and blazing with light. Presently, I spied a noble steed, black as the murks of night when murkiest, standing ready saddled and bridled (and his saddle was of red gold) before two mangers, one of clear crystal, wherein was husked sesame, and the other, also of crystal, containing water of the rose scented with musk. When I saw this I marveled and said to myself, 'Doubtless in this animal must be some wondrous mystery,' and Satan——"

"Satan the Stoned!" murmured Ryder's neighbor religiously.

"Satan cozened me, so I led him without and mounted him, and struck him withal. When he felt the blow he neighed a neigh with a sound like deafening thunder and opening a pair of wings flew up with me in the firmament of heaven far beyond the eyesight of man. After a full hour of flight he descended and shaking me off his back lashed me on the face with his tail, and gouged out my left eye, causing it to roll along my cheek. Then he flew away."

On rolled the voice, narrating the prince's descent to the table of the other one eyed youths, but Ryder was unheeding. And at the close he inclined his head with the other listeners, murmuring, "May Allah bless it to us, and to thee also," as he felt in his pockets for the silver which the others were drawing from turban and sleeves and sash to lay in the patriarch's lap, and then raised his head to question diffidently, "Would you interpret, O, Khazir, the meaning of that door? For I hear that it hath now become a saying of a forbidden thing."

The sage hesitated, sucking at his pipe. Then he said slowly, "To every man, O, youth, is there a forbidden door, beyond which waits the steed of high adventure with wings beyond man's riding. And so the rider is lost and his vision is gone."

"But for him who could ride?" Ryder suggested.

"Inshallah! Who can say till he has tried his destiny—and better are the nine and thirty chambers of safe pleasaunce than the lonely sightlessness of the outcast one. It is a tale if it were written upon the eye corners wtih needle gravers, were a warner to those who would be warned."

For a moment their eyes held each other, smiling but grave. Ryder's thoughts were of the morrow, of that forbidden entry he was planning to make, of the risks, the wild uncertainties.

Wisdom and counsel looked significantly out at him out of those patriarchal eyes. Prudence and sanity clamored within him for a hearing. And then he smiled, the whimsical, boyish smile of young adventuring.

"But whoever, O my father, has opened that forbidden door the veriest crack, and breathed its scent and glimpsed its dazzlement—then for him there is no turning back," he confided.

He rose and Khazi's eyes followed him.

"Luck go with you, my son," he said clearly, "in Allah's name," and smiling in faint ruefulness, "may Allah heed thee!" Ryder murmured piously.

Now, as he stood before Aimée, and saw her eyes widen with recognition, he knew that he would have need of all his luck and all his wit.

He stepped hastily forward.

. . . . . . . . . . . . . . .

"Alhamdolillah—Glory to God that he has permitted me to behold you this day," he murmured, in the studiously sing-song Arabic that might be expected from a humble Turkish woman in plain mantle and yashmak. "May Allah continue to spread before thee the carpet of enjoyment—" and then lower, almost muffled by the thick veil, "Can you give me a moment?"

Eagerly, significantly, his eyes met hers.

Half fearfully, Aimée flashed an excited look around her. The space before the marriage throne had thinned, for there were no more arrivals waiting to offer their congratulations, and the guests were clustering now about the tables for refreshment or drifting into the next salon where behind firmly stretched silken walls a stringed orchestra was playing.

Miss Jeffries alone was lingering near, but she moved off now—at a secret look from Ryder—with an appearance of unconcern.

"I am going to try my vernacular on the bride," Ryder had told her. "Don't linger or look alarmed. I won't give the show away."

So there was no one to overhear a low toned colloquy between the bride and the veiled woman, no one to note or wonder that the veiled woman was speaking, strangely enough, in rapid English.

"When I didn't hear from you I had to come, to know if you received the package and letter I sent——"

With a swift gesture of her little ringed hand Aimée drew from the laces on her bosom that heavy gold locket.

"Indeed I have it—and the note, too, I

THIS map is a reproduction of that used by Gen. Pershing at his headquarters at Chaumont. It shows the position of each individual division on both the allied and the German sides, as they appeared on the last day of hostilities, November 11, 1918.

The detailed information on the placing of enemy troops and headquarters is a tribute to the efficiency of the allied intelligence departments.

The original map is of such dimensions that four men standing abreast can study it simultaneously. The changes in position of headquarters, divisions, etc., were effected on the map by means of small tags affixed by pins.

In every respect the above is a faithful copy of the original map, except that the great reduction in reproducing the map has made necessary the enlargement of such details as the symbols used to designate headquarters, and the elimination of many of the unimportant towns.

The original map is now in the National Museum at Washington. Gen. Pershing has urged that it be preserved as a great historic document for the American people. This is its first newspaper reproduction in full color.

New Wraps for the Autumn Motor Trip

by Corinne Lowe

READING the fashion speedometer from left to right, we find, first, a coat of tan polo cloth; second, a brown leather with anything but leathery ruffles at the wrist, and last, a red polo cloth coat worn with skirt of red and black checked duck.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—Milord, the carriage waits! Enough, perhaps, for the gentleman of the manor, But with milady the carriage waits for the wrap.

In nothing else perhaps do we show just how we stand in relation to style than by the selection of our motor or sports coat. A mere clothed woman always thinks it doesn't matter about a coat of this kind. A clothes-y woman, however, realizes that this sort of thing is always changing and that the motor coat of last year is very different from that of this.

If we wish to be really economical in this domain it is necessary to do as our English sisters. Their sports clothes are as classic as their slang. It is safe to say that three generations have walked over Sussex downs or spent time in Scotch shooting-lodge in the very same kind of tweed suit and the very same kind of Alpine hat. As for the Inverness cape, the Englishwoman moves into that almost as soon as she is born and never once changes her address. She wouldn't think of altering it any more than she would think of hunting up some other way of expressing disaster than by her clipped "O, he came a cropper, you know."

So on this side if you wish to be always smart and always economical you select an Inverness cape early in life, install it as you would the stationary wash-stand, and never think any more about that detail. The smartest shops make these capes and some of the best-dressed women always wear them.

Otherwise, well, sports coat styles are always changing. This year, for example, we no longer see much of the deep armholes of several years past. Arm-holes are now rather stingy. Then, too, the cape back is no longer much in evidence. Some of the newest coats show a redingote front with a loose back—here is a mode particularly stunning in fur—but by far the greatest number of the season's sport coats are belted in the back with that frugal inch-wide belt which the French have been doing in every realm of dress.

Brown is perhaps the most fashionable color. It is, too, for that matter, in both suits and afternoon frocks. One finds this shade developed in evora—the material of which so many stunning new suits are fashioned—in bolivia, silvertone, velours, polo cloth, suede cloth and leather. There are some new brushed wool coats also which vary the program by having cuffs and collars of unbrushed wool of a finer knit.

The shawl collar is preferred just now to the choker. Particularly is this so when the coat is trimmed with fur. The fur used for motor coats is nowadays often raccoon and this, confined entirely to the tapering shawl collar, is particularly effective when used on raccoon-colored silvertone. This raccoon tint in coat fabrics is, by the way, one of the season's novelties.

At the left we are showing a sports or motor coat of tan polo cloth which illustrates some of the latest points in this type of garment. Here we have the long line, the slender belt and the shawl collar. In addition there are serial pockets which give a touch of drollery to a garment which otherwise might be just a bit too staid.

There is every chance that the leather coat which was so zealously chosen for winter sports last season is going to be just as popular this season with Miss Diana. In the center of the page we show you just how the designer goes about it. From the way he frills the cuffs and peps up the whole coat anyone might think that the lumberman's leather was as frivolous a fabric as chiffon itself.

At the last, is a sports costume warranted to make the color score as good as the golf score. Extremely smart is this red polo coat worn with a skirt of red and black checked duck. And, by the bye, checks are now awfully good in every kind of sports costume. In the "Hoot's Who" of fashion the Scotch tartans are particularly good, the black and green of the Black Watch being especially favored by smart designers.

In spite of the fact that the cape was so universally explored last spring, this graceful wrap is being worn now at all the smartest autumn resorts. Specially stunning are suede cloth ones in henna, orange and red. These are very full, have deep shawl collars and are lined with heavy satin which either matches or contrasts.

Fur coats, though not so dolman-esque as those of last year, are still very much dolled up. They have a tendency yet to look as though turned out by one of the best Eskimo tailors, for they are wrapped about the figure rather than perfectly severe. There are some stunning effects in mole skin, tailless ermine and sable. Among scarfs many of the most notable are of the fisher which has had such a vogue in Paris. The tendency is, in fact, toward brown and tawny tints.

When one is talking of wraps one can hardly forego mention of the overblouse. The overblouse is still coming over, but one fashion authority has just been telling me that the blouse with the very tiny peplum is much smarter on this side than the more earnest examples of over-the-skirt. The sweater blouse is a Paris product which is finding favor at present among the don't-care-how-far-we-blouse type. Among the regulation long tunics one finds much georgette much done in tinseled thread and much underdone in sleeves. Both gold and silver thread are used and these are combined with floss in color. Fringe is particularly good, but the wider ribbonized variety is now preferred to the shredded sort. In this connection, we may mention that black and white monkey is being used a great deal by Paris.

Meteor is one of the season's most petted fabrics and there are many foreign and domestic blouses which register this partiality. Some of these meteor blouses are made with the waistcoat front which has been held over from the past season.

Hats form an interesting contribution to the fall modes. Many of these add a deeper substance to the title of the Mad Hatter. If Lewis Carroll had turned his attention to millinery we might get this same sillinery.

First of all, there are the numerous kid shapes.

If we wish to be awfully slangy, we might say these have been kidded along quite a bit. There is Jeanne Duc, for instance, who has painted her kid hats in an all-over cloudy effect, so that they look as if they might be offering employment to camouflage artists who are left jobless by the end of the war. Under these circumstances the battleship is not more fantastic than the hattle ship.

Then there is the novelty use of fur. What liberties Odette, the Paris milliner, does take with pelts! Where are the snows of yesteryear, might inquire the bewildered ermine, when confronted with his own pelt dyed to orange or brown. Latest of these millinery furbishings is the soft little moleskin shape which Odette has traversed with tiny strips of ermine. The very latest method of checking one's hat!

If you wish a trifle light as air—or, might many a lady say, as hair—you turn to a novelty of the season in the form of flowers and fruits. These are made of the milkweed pods into clusters of grapes, buttercups, and morning glories. They are not only light as a cobweb, but the silk has the same fairylike glisten of look. These novelty flowers are tinted with the most subtle, Whistlerian touch, so that they have really almost a mother of pearl delicacy.

Talbot's favorite millinery color of the year is ivory. She uses it wholesale in a turban covered with velvet leaves of the same tint, and then, just to bring out its elusive coloring, she drops down a tiny curtain of a black maline face veil. Ivory must have, in fact, its complement of black. And, ruled by this belief, Talbot lines another hat of hers—a big black panne sailor—with plush of ivory tint. The plush, by the way, is not the hirsute specimen to which we are accustomed. It is a new, short napped plush, which the Parisians are using a great deal this season.

The hat of which I have just spoken is embroidered over the crown and upon the facing with the much advertised cellophane. This comes in all shades. So, too, does that other embroidery device, the spools of ribbonzine, which Rose Descat in particular has Peneloped all over her hats.

It still seems to be the mood of the foreign milliner to make toy models of Robinson Crusoe's tent. Fringe in most aboriginal freedom makes us think of wigwams and strange improvised apparel of the deserted island. Monkey fur is still pre-eminent, but it now has a rival in bear fringe, which, though not so limber, is quite as deep. Goat fur, a strange grayish white, also enters the fringe tournament and is seen on many smart models.

Ostrich is still used, and the most exclusive form is a half hearted glycerin one. Under a new system only the ends of the single ply feather are glycerined. Blondine, the substitute for paradise, also occurs frequently. And of small bright colored birds we see more and more. These last are poised on smart trotteur hats of velours and beaver, and are given a more effective setting by the embroidered twigs and tree branches which the millinery stage manager has given them.

It is reviving news to hear from a millinery expert just returned from abroad that the tricorne is now much in favor. The three cornered hat is becoming to most women—so much so that there are times when we all wish we might have been members of the Continental army. The fact of it is, indeed, that among all the jungle of wild new shapes and lush trimmings, we can always find a hat that looks as if it were intended to cover the head. Among these are the various new turbans and the berets. It is interesting to note, by the way, that many of the small shapes from Paris have a tendency to the double brims.

There is a passion for plaids in both millinery and gowns. So we have some of the newest blue serge frocks designed by Paris showing inserted plaits of bright tartan silk. Straw also acts as if brought up among the clans, and these plaid straws are among the newest trimming effects tried out by Premet this year. And, speaking of trimming, some shade of yellow is often used upon the afternoon frock of black or navy.

A tendency to blouse of one color and material with skirt of another is found in many of the latest French things. This is true not only of the evening gowns, with their quaint bodices of velvet or taffeta terminating in skirt of net, but of suits as well. Plain coats often attend striped or checked skirts, and in this way the popular tartan is given yet another chance.

THE TOMATO SEASON.

WE are in the midst of the tomato season. It is our bounden duty, for no end of reasons, to make the most of the tomato supplies. That woman is blessed who can stand in reverence before her own tomato vines. She can well be happy in the fact that they have yielded her generously quick returns for a small amount of care. Most other fruits grow on trees or shrubs nurtured through years. The tomato vine waxes in strength and produces fruit in a single summer. You are not in the habit of considering it as a fruit, you say? Well, try to. It is a fruit of the soil, anyway.

Blessed are those who can eat a tomato as they eat an apple, with salt, if they must, without it if they will. Tomatoes entirely ripened on the vines, and perfect from blossom to stem end, as so few market tomatoes are, except those hot house grown, deserve epicurean attention and devotion. They are the most beautiful to look at of all the salad materials, and rightly manipulated they are delicious grilled, fried, and plain baked.

The tomato is an indispensable adjunct in many kinds of fine cooking. As a soup ingredient it has an extensive repertory. It is delicious and suitable with eggs and meats and vegetables. It is decidedly questionable whether it is suitable with macaroni or spaghetti or rice. It may be if it is dead ripe.

So much, as preface, has been written for the reason that so many housewives can hardly see a tomato at this season without thinking it into a can. Can tomatoes now we must and should if we are thrifty and forehanded, if we have not done it already, but in our zeal for conservation of the supply there is some danger that too few tomatoes will get served in their most ideal state, or raw, at the time of the year when they are most likely to be ideal of condition.

It is probable that the supply for home canning this year will be ample, although crop reports might lead us to think the contrary, and possibly spur us to closer conservation of what we have. But the reports on the tomato crops are undoubtedly gauged by the commercial demand, or whether there will be an ample supply for the canneries. At any rate I have seen evidences enough this very year to make me think this true. Moral: If the supply for the commercial work is short, prices will be higher for canned tomatoes, and there is all the more need of putting up your own supply.

A crop report of Aug. 16 said of tomatoes: "Will be a light crop." Yet in one week from that time the market seemed well supplied with the large boxes of tomatoes, as it may be with bushels about now or a week or two later. In districts where grocery rents were not as high as in some others, we found tomatoes at 50 cents a box, a low price even in less H. C. L. times, and later in the season. On the same day that they were 50 cents a box in outlying districts, they were a dollar a box in central markets and "not delivered." Moreover, those I saw at 50 cents were good, and those for a dollar poor. Draw your own moral. On the same day I bought excellent tomatoes straight from a farmer, at his stall in a neighborhood market, for 65 cents a box.

If the crop is to be light, now is the time for all good women to come to the aid of the winter pantry. Home canned tomatoes are superior to commercially canned for a most fundamental reason. A small quantity can be handled more perfectly than can a large one. Of course there are canned tomatoes de luxe in glass, but these are prohibitive in price for most women, who can put up their own and hope to do so.

An expert writing of the commercial canning of tomatoes says that they must be worked up rapidly because there "must be no fermentation in any process prior to sterilization. Fermentation sets in very rapidly after the tomatoes are peeled, particularly in weather where the thermometer registers between 80 and 90 degrees F."

The woman in her own kitchen should profit by this bit of knowledge. If she scalds her tomatoes to remove the skins, and leaves them with a tepid temperature instead of cooling them rapidly with cold water, and then does not get them into the cans with dispatch, fermentation may set in and not be checked by the short processing. If the scalding is rapid enough the inside will not be warmed up to tepid.

I am quite aware that some women stoutly maintain that they "have no luck with tomatoes." I used to have perfect success by washing, scalding, peeling, and gently stewing tomatoes for half an hour, then filling them into thoroughly sterilized jars and sealing them, taking pains that the jars be running over full and sealing carefully, even when I used quite imperfect tomatoes.

The earliest of government bulletins on canning, written before cold pack days, said: "Every housewife knows how to can tomatoes. They are very easily kept, even in the common screw top jar. If one already has on hand a number of jars of this pattern it is best to use them for preserves or canning tomatoes, and to purchase the more modern styles for canning other vegetables. In using the screw top jars be careful to sterilize them first by placing in cold water, bringing to a boil, and boiling for about ten minutes. The rubber and top should also be immersed in boiling water for the same length of time. Remove them from the boiling water when needed, handling as little as possible. Be careful not to put the fingers on the inside of the top or the inner edge of the rubber. Fill the jar with the cooked tomatoes while steaming hot, put on the rubber, screw on the top firmly, invert it, and let it stand in that position until cool."

This point, about the fingers, is characteristic of the most important carefulness we must exercise in order not to unsterilize our containers and the rubbers after we have sterilized them. It is easy not to do so if we are careful. The canning tongs, sometimes called a "crab," are invaluable, if they are sterile, for taking jars, tops and rubbers from the sterilizing water.

There is one important reason why some women fail in canning, whether by the cold pack method or any other. They break the seal after the product is cold. They feel a curiosity to know whether they have screwed a top on as tight as it can be screwed, so they try to twist it farther, and if they succeed have most likely broken the seal which the heat made. If filled running over full, no air can be sealed in, and when the steam condenses a vacuum is formed which perfects the seal.

As to the cold pack method of putting up tomatoes, has not every ambitious woman in the land either farmers' bulletin 839, which I prefer, or bulletin 841, which gives the methods used in the southern states? If she has not been housekeeping, and now is and wants to can, she has but to send to office of publications, United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., for these. And there are state bulletins a score on the subject put out by the domestic science departments of the different state agricultural colleges.

All measurements are made level in these recipes. A teaspoon of regulation size holds sixty drops. Three level teaspoons equal one level tablespoon. Sixteen level tablespoons equal one cup (one-half pint). The half-pint measuring cup is the standard measuring cup used in modern cookery.

Café Frappé.

Beat the white of one egg slightly, add to one cup of ground coffee, mix thoroughly, and add one cup of cold water. Turn into a scalded coffee pot, and six cups of boiling water, and let boil three minutes (counting time when boiling begins); remove to back of range and let stand ten minutes. Strain through a double fold of cheesecloth. Add cream until of a rich café au lait color (about one-half pint). Add one and one-half cups of sugar, stir until sugar is dissolved. Chill. Freeze to a mush, using equal parts of crushed ice and rock salt. Serve in frappé glasses with a tablespoon of whipped cream (sweetened and flavored delicately with vanilla) set above each portion. The recipe serves twenty people one glass each.

Dutchess Apple Fritters.

Sift together one and one-third cups of flour, two teaspoons of baking powder, and one-fourth teaspoon of salt beat one egg until thick and lemon tinted, add to two-thirds cup of milk, beat again, and add gradually to the dry ingredients, stirring constantly until batter is perfectly smooth. Pare, core, and cut two Dutchess apples into small pieces and stir into the batter. Drop by spoonfuls into deep hot fat and fry to a golden brown. Drain on brown paper and serve as a dessert with creamy sauce.

To make this sauce, cream one-third cup of butter, add three-fourths cup of powdered sugar gradually while stirring constantly; add slowly three tablespoons of lemon juice and one teaspoon of lemon extract, and add slowly two and one-half tablespoons of milk while stirring constantly. Cook over hot water until mixture is thoroughly heated, stirring meanwhile.

Steamed Blueberry Pudding.

Sift together two cups of flour, four teaspoons of baking powder, and one-half teaspoon of salt. With the tips of the fingers work in two tablespoons of butter; then with a knife stir in gradually one cup of milk; add one cup of blueberries, dredged with one and one-half tablespoons of flour. Turn mixture into a buttered mold, set the buttered cover in place, and steam one and one-half hours. Serve with foamy sauce.

To make the sauce, beat the whites of two eggs until stiff, add gradually one cup of powdered sugar, and continue beating. Add one-fourth cup of scalded milk and one teaspoon of vanilla or orange extract. Beat thoroughly and serve at once.

Golden Fizz.

Into a mixing glass put the juice of two lemons, juice of one orange, and three-fourths cup of sugar; stir until the sugar is dissolved. Beat one fresh chilled egg until thick and lemon tinted; add fruit juice and shake in a shaker until foamy. Fill four tumblers two-thirds full of the fizz and fill glasses with thoroughly chilled ginger ale. Serve immediately. High grade ginger ale only should be used in preparing this delicious beverage.

MOUTH HYGIENE

By Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, an exercise, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, "Chicago Sunday Tribune."

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

I HEARD a story the other day about a girl who went on her vacation and arrived at a camp miles from home and a drug store minus her tooth brush. She immediately wired for one. It did not reach her until the end of the fourth day of her vacation. She said if she ever had to choose between a vacation and a tooth brush she would choose the latter. It meant more to her peace of mind and her well being.

She said: "You know my brother and his pals overseas were forever berating the beauties abroad because of their illtended teeth. And I have heard them say time and time again a girl could have all the other attributes on the beauty calendar, but if her opened mouth disclosed discolored and neglected teeth she might just as well be born an ugly duckling and stay so.

"And I was scared to death mine would suffer without their daily brushing. They are really the best asset I have, and I would not take a deliberate chance on starting them on the decaying path."

Teeth are a terribly important feature of conservation. To bad molars are being traced half the ills the world is subject to. Even insanity has been discovered to have as a cause bad teeth. Which is not so hard to understand when you realize the importance of food to health and the importance of health to the state of mind. And food to be of hygienic value has to be chewed by teeth that are capable of grinding it well.

And I take up the subject at this particular time for this reason: It is a time of more or less spending for clothes. And good clothes, even expensive clothes, to many women seem more important than care of teeth. It should be the reverse. One might even say, given a good set of teeth and a woman's clothes are of secondary importance. The teeth will bring her more admiration than the stunning fur coat or costly hat. And she can wear them with every dress and let them override its inexpensiveness.

But I don't think any woman nowadays has to be told about the beauty value of a row of pearls and a smiling mouth. She invariably comments on it herself in tones of envy if she possesses them not.

But now that vacation time is over and there is a certain renewed energy that will stand the pain of dental work where it must be done, it is urged that it be done before the energy is gone again.

And it is urged that the work be done before the money all goes for the fall and winter clothes. The instance of a young girl who has two distinct cavities in her front teeth and who is always apologizing that she will have them attended to when she gets enough money ahead—and always has money ahead for everything else but her dental work!

Outside of the daily use of the toothbrush there are other features of mouth hygiene.

The eating of coarse foodstuffs has latter foods are distinctly beneficial in a strengthening effect on the gums and cleansing effect on the teeth—the eating of toast, dry bread, popcorn. One of the foremost authorities on the subject of teeth emphasizes the importance of keeping the mouth clean of sweet, acid forming débris of food by selecting a preponderance of foods which are anti-acid. Celery, raw carrots, apples, and such food should be eaten at the end of meals. The result is a scouring effect by the increased quantity and flow of saliva. The highly concentrated foods of the modern day are at fault for much tooth decay. The food on the average table today is too soft to give the organs of mastication necessary exercise. The concentrated forms in which sugars and starches are taken make them especially liable to stick to the teeth and set up fermentation in the mouth.

Foods that are acid forming and harmful to the teeth when eaten alone are pastry, cake, chocolate, crackers, white bread, milk, dates, cane sugar, rice, and figs. These foods should be combined at a meal with a substance of highly acid taste or be followed by other food of the opposite class, included in which are parsnip, lemon, potato, pineapple, banana, apple, nuts, oranges, beef, fish, and duck. These counteracting the acids of decay. Celery, radishes, onions, apples, and oranges will scour the teeth of sticky pastries as no toothbrush will. The French and Italians begin a meal with a stimulating hors d'œuvre, and end with a simple fruit or dessert, which is an excellent example to follow. For it is what you eat last that influences the teeth.

It really requires more than the ordinary perfunctory use of the toothbrush to keep the mouth hygienic. The use of mouth washes and powders and dentifrices is confined more or less to the surface of the teeth. Teeth should be brushed thoroughly after each meal, of course. In addition the gums should be kept stimulated by the use of a stiff brush. If the gums are sensitive use a moderately stiff brush until you can stand the more vigorous treatment. This keeps the gum margins free from tartar and incidentally wards off pyorrhea, that prevalent and malicious complaint. While pyorrhea is not due to conscious neglect, it is due to neglect of mouth hygiene. Common salt applied to the toothbrush as you apply a dentifrice and rubbed into the gums is one of the best preventives of pyorrhea known. Three times a week it may be done.

Keeping the tongue clean is something that few realize the importance of and the tongue will accumulate tartar and bacteria near the root. Use tooth powder on your tongue and brush it as you would your teeth. To keep from gagging try to keep the brush away from the roof of the mouth. Food acids are serviceable in cleansing the tongue and a week solution of vinegar is good.

A FRIEND IN NEED

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to "The Tribune," but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

Rough Riding for a Cripple.

"I meet a poor mother every day taking her children to a day nursery. One little boy, 5 years old, is crippled. She pulls him in an uncushioned buggy that has no tires and it jolts his little body painfully. Do you think there is some one who has a buggy with cushions that they have discarded and would give it to this child? I can't tell you what it would mean to him in the way of release from pain. MRS. B."

I hope the buggy will be given soon. This does seem a pitiful case.

Bed for a Baby.

"I have a baby's bed that I should like to give to a little child who is in need of one. MRS. N. A. W."

What little baby is in need of the bed Mrs. N. A. W. has to give?

Dress Form to Needy Mother.

"I will be glad to give a dress form, size 38, to some needy mother. Please let me have an address, so I can tell her when to call. MRS. A. M."

We have many requests for dress forms, so I register your offer gratefully.

Wants Crochet Patterns.

"Do you think some of your readers might have crocheting patterns they could send me? I am doing crocheting at home to earn a little more money to help meet this awful high cost of living. MRS. H. B."

If some one has patterns this is a splendid opportunity for them to do a neighborly act.

Needs Baby Cab.

"I wonder if I might have the baby cab offered by S. W. I am the mother of nine children and the two youngest are very tiny. I would appreciate it so much, if I am not too late in asking. MRS. C."

I am so sorry that the cab is already given away. If another is offered you shall certainly have it for your two little ones.

He's Back from the War.

"I wonder if some one could help us. My husband has come back from the army and we have a little baby 8 months old. We have a little flat, but my husband is not making much money and we have a great deal of sickness. We need clothes. My husband has no overcoat. We would appreciate anything. Later we hope we can help some one in need. "MRS. R. C."

This brings up again that great problem which faces so many of our returned soldiers—a baby, a home, and small wages. I hope some one who perhaps could not go to fight can help in this way the men who did go.

No Clothes for School.

"May I ask through your column if there is any one who has any dresses I may have? I am 11 years old, and my mother is in the hospital and has been there for three months, and there is no one to buy me any clothes, and I have to go to school. So please answer as soon as possible. B. C."

I hope some one will answer right straight away, so that you may go to school, my dear, at once. And I hope your mother will be better soon and able to come back to you.

Wants to Make a Quilt.

"I am confined to a sanitarium and I want to make a quilt. Do you think some one might send me odd pieces of silk or satin or velvet and ribbons? I would be ever so grateful. "MISS J. B. M."

I trust some one can help this invalid out and by giving her the pieces she wishes to make the days of illness pass more swiftly.

Popular Sheet Music.

"Please give my telephone number to two or three who are willing to call for popular sheet music of the last ten years [West Side]. M. J. R."

We are grateful to you for the music offering. I shall forward applications received to you.

Boudoir cap made out of embroidered discarded georgette blouse. The two fronts used for top of the cap.

At right. Colored camisole to match skirt and to be worn under colored georgette blouse. Ribbon-shoulder-straps and narrow dyed lace band at the top—

ECONOMICAL HINTS FOR THE WARDROBE.

A lovely dark colored georgette blouse may look cheap if it is worn over a white or light colored camisole. The blouse may be the exact match of the skirt and be beautiful in itself, but still not be truly satisfactory. The reason is that the artistic unity has been violated.

The remedy is simple. When purchasing a skirt or a suit with a georgette waist to match, one should also get a camisole of the exact color of the skirt. A soft fine quality of sateen, or messaline, crêpe de chine, or any soft nontransparent material will do. The camisole can be made at home in spare time. It may be picot edged around the neck and the arm hole and have an elastic at the bottom and slip over the head. Now two points are gained, a pleasing unity and economy. One camisole of the above described kind will last as long as the blouse itself and will save laundry bills. This colored camisole can be washed and aired and kept fresh as well as a light colored one.

To mend a georgette blouse when it begins to show thin spots about the elbows, take a piece of flesh colored georgette, baste this under the worn place, but do not cut away the outside goods, nor turn in the edges of the patch. Now take a blonde hair and thread a needle with it and darn the two thicknesses together. Go lightly all over the worn place and a bit beyond. Glove mending thread may also be used if it matches the waist in color. When put on the mended place cannot be seen if the work is done carefully. The worn places under the arms can be mended with a piece of georgette to match the camisole worn with the waist.

A "run" in a stocking leg can be quickly mended by the aid of an oval embroidery hoop and a crochet hook. Slip the hoop into place and with the crochet hook pick up the last loop in the "run"; slip this over the first "step in the ladder," as a dear old lady put it. Keep on looping up the run until the last step has been picked up; now with a thread and needle fasten the last loop securely.

An extra size petticoat can easily be converted into a slip. Rip off the band or top facing. Take a band of lace, same color as the petticoat, and pin this over the bust. Let it pass easily under the arms; make shoulder straps of either lace or a piece of ribbon to match. Now hang the skirt from this lace yoke. Care must be taken so as not to have too much material in the sides. In most cases some of the goods may be taken out, and if care is taken may be made into a camisole; especially if the petticoat was one of silk or dark goods.

An attractive, durable, and inexpensive princess slip can be made at home from longcloth, cambric, or muslin. A double front gore is a desirable feature. Cut the slip from a well fitting pattern; join the seams by the means of French seams. Now take the slip to a shop where machine embroidery is being done [usually hemstitching shops do this sort of work]. Have a two inch wide scalloped edge at the bottom of the slip, around the neck and arm hole; have small half an inch wide scallops embroidered by machine. The cost is much less than lace or embroidery bought by the yard, and a simple, pretty, and durable edge is the result.

"JARDIN de ROSE"
THE FRENCH FACE POWDER MADE IN AMERICA

is the original "cold cream" powder. "JARDIN de ROSE" has always been made with a real cold cream foundation. This is what gives it its great clinging quality, its soothing and beneficial effect on the skin, and makes it unnecessary to use a cream before applying the powder.

And "JARDIN de ROSE" is not only made right—it is sold right. The original "JARDIN de ROSE" selling policy marks an epoch in the sale of face powders. "JARDIN de ROSE"—the most expensively-made face powder it is possible to make—is sold as a modern necessity, instead of merely a foolish luxury. By efficient modern methods and large volume of sales the price is fixed at only

Strange Weddings Contest.

Tell us about the strangest wedding you have attended—and the funniest. There's scarcely a wedding but has some humorous details. Tell your experience and that of friends. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on strange and humorous happenings at ceremonies. Manuscripts cannot be returned. Write on one side of the page. Address Strange Weddings Editor, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

The Mean Thing!

The bridegroom had been warned that he would have to make a speech at his wedding breakfast. He refused, but nevertheless he was called upon. He rose to his feet, blushing to the roots of his hair. In his embarrassment he inadvertently placed his hand on his bride's shoulder. Then he stammered: "I-I-I didn't want to do this. This thing was thrust upon me."

At the Last Moment.

Helen was a very absent minded girl. Her friends all prophesied that some dreadful thing would happen to her some day. But she would not only laugh and say that she hoped not.

She was to be married on the first day of June. As they were to leave for the train immediately after the ceremony a traveling bag was left open in Helen's room to catch the things remembered at the last moment. Her mother was fluttering about Helen adjusting her gown, when suddenly Helen said, "O, I can't stand these tight shoes. Give me my bedroom slippers and I will put my pumps on again when I am ready."

So the change was made. At this moment one of her sisters came in with a cake of white soap in her hand. She stopped to assist with the dress and laid the soap on the dressing table.

Finally, all was ready and every one was excited and tense. The wedding march sounded and on her father's arm Helen descended the stairs. She glanced down—Horrors! She had forgotten to change her shoes. She still wore the blue bedroom slippers. The march played on and she could not turn back. As she neared the improvised altar her glance fell upon her hands—clasping, as she supposed, her prayerbook. A violet scent reached her nostrils. She carried the cake of soap that her sister had laid on the dressing table.

"Fan and Knife."

When my cousin was being married the minister got rather fussed and toward the end his tongue got twisted. Instead of saying "I pronounce thee man and wife," he said, "I pronounce thee fan and knife."

A Thrifty Bridegroom.

An amusing incident occurred at a wedding at which I officiated some months ago. A country couple came into the office and inquired if they could be married there. I assured them that they could and without unnecessary delay they were united.

After the ceremony the groom said, "How much do I owe you?"

I replied in the usual manner that the law allowed $1.50, but that I had no fixed charge and he could give whatever he wished.

He went down into his trousers pocket and brought out a handful of nickels, dimes and quarters, and carefully counted $1.50, which he laid on the desk, remarking as he did so, "Well, I guess she is worth a dollar and a half, anyway."

Alarm Clock Music.

This story was told me by a preacher, who vouches for its truth:

One day, while on a vacation up in the mountains, a young mountaineer asked him to "tie" him and his best girl.

On the appointed day he arrived at the house, and was taken privately in an adjoining room to be told the wedding arrangements. "It's going to be the fashionablest wedding in these here parts fer a long time," the bride's mother proudly told him. "There's goin' to be a wedding march and everything."

The preacher saw no piano or organ, but supposed some local "fiddler" would furnish the music. Imagine, then, his surprise to see the wedding party march in to the loud ringing of an alarm clock!

Anyone Now Can Have Pretty Curls and Waves

Here's a hair curling secret that is decidedly "worth while." At bedtime apply a little liquid Silmerine with a clean tooth brush, drawing this down the hair from root to tip. In the morning when you look in your mirror you will be astonished and delighted to find your hair has dried in as beautiful curls as you've ever worn. The waviness will look so natural no one will guess it was artificially acquired.

You can obtain liquid Silmerine at any drug store and a few ounces will last a long time. It is neither sticky nor greasy and is pleasant to use. It is doubly useful because of also serving as a beneficial dressing, keeping the hair soft, silky and lustrous. After one trial you will never go back to the barbarous curling iron.

BRIGHT·SAYINGS of the CHILDREN

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, "The Tribune," Chicago.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

My husband and brothers were about to start on a hunting trip, intending to camp out for a few days. Eddie teased to go along, but was told he was too small to hunt. "Well," he argued, "you'll need an extra man along to do the cooking, won't you?" R. C.

Grace, for whom the novelties of the library had recently opened, enthusiastically demanded a book every day.

"Another book today! Why, you had one just yesterday; surely you have not read that so quickly?" her father said teasingly.

"Yes I have, daddy."

"Several lines at a time, or every word, so you will remember the story?"

"Every single word!" shaking her curly head emphatically.

"Well, what was your last book about; let me see, what did you say—on the last page?"

Grace looked at him thoughtfully for a moment, then:

"Why, it said, 'The end.'"

New neighbors had moved in next door and mother heard the children talking.

"Why, Elinor," said she, "how did you come to be acquainted with the little new boy?"

"Well, mamma, you see, he was over on his porch 'n I smiled at him, 'n he smiled, 'n then we was 'quainted."

My two boys had a falling out, one of them accusing the other of having his jackknife. Frankie, finding his knife later, made overtures to Jesse, whom he had accused of taking it, but the latter was reluctant to overlook being wrongfully accused.

"You thought I had your knife," he complained, in an aggrieved tone.

"Well, never mind that now," cried Frankie, cheerfully. "I've unthought it."

Buddy came into my drug store, and taking five pennies from his pocket, held them toward me, spread out on his hand. "Please," he said, "can you change these into a nickel for me? I don't like to carry so much money around. Mrs. H. R.

Little Barbara, two years old, having attended a rather lengthy session of the Sunday school, came home rushing to kiss her baby brother, and anxiously inquired: "Mamma, do you think Tommy 'members me?" H.

The other day Bobbie, who is a very active youngster, was being reprimanded for not being a good boy when his mother had company. She told him that she didn't see why he would be so nice some days and then so naughty just the day her company was there.

"Well," said Bobbie, "there is nothing the matter, just you have company on the wrong days." A. C. K.

Alice, fond of cheese but seldom allowed to have it, was alone one day in a room where a mouse trap was baited with a very appetizing piece. Hearing a sharp little cry we hurried in and found the poor child with a badly pinched finger.

"But," she managed to say, "O I'se so hungry for cheese." H. P.

Helen's idea of a party was good things to eat. Shortly after she had left to attend her first birthday party she came home, one tiny hand clutching tightly several pieces of candy.

"Why, Helen," I said, "why aren't you at the party?"

"Well, you see, mother, we ate it all up and I brought some for you, too."

Ruth, Bobbie, and Walter, 4 year olds, were playing ball. Ruth finally got the ball and refused to let it go although the boys tried to persuade her to give it up so they could go on with the game.

Finding that coaxing didn't gain them anything, Walter slapped her and she began to cry. Walter's mother then saw what was going on and scolded him for being so rude to his little playmate, and Walter said: "Well, but mamma, I hit her just as loose as I could." A. E. S.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

by Mary Brush Williams

BEAUTY IN NEW STYLES.

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—In the shade of one of the enormous tent umbrellas which shelter the tea tables in the Ritz garden a woman listened intently to a friend's description of a smart opening she had attended that morning. She had been to another the day before and still another the morning before that. "Why," exclaimed the listener, "then I can wear that draped skirt of the dress I bought in the spring, and I can wear my one piece suit one year old."

"You think you can," consoled her companion, "until you see these new ones and then you know you can never wear anything you have ever worn before."

Being interpreted, this means the new styles are out in full blast, they seem in a way to follow the lines of the old and the lines predicted, and yet they are utterly different in a subtle, almost indescribable way. Buyers from all the nations who may have come to scoff remained to purchase, and the prediction has not come true that the French are so paralyzed that they cannot get up their former beautiful styles.

I do not know whether in a description they will sound so very different. We have been prepared for paniers and we have paniers. We expected the skirts to be a little longer, and some of them are longer by a good deal. We expected the Moroccan note, and we got it. Still, we gasp and are surprised at the wondrous beauty and the unexpectedness of the actual models when they parade before us on living figures. Men clamor for you to take them to the openings, as to a beautiful musical comedy, and no musical comedy was ever staged more artistically.

Many of the models are not wearing stockings. I know one whose under clothing consists complete and entire of one pair of trunks such as men wear for swimming, except that they do not cover so wide an area as the men's, and they are of pink silk. There are little clusters of rose buds garlanding them. One of the costumes which she displays over this is of white tulle. Her body is colored a sunburnt brown, and her strong young legs with their little garlands of roses show through it, not vulgarly, but with the freedom and the beauty of art.

A favorite trimming is chicken feathers. Gen. Pershing was a little alarmed at one of his dinner parties to have a woman appear in an evening dress in which rooster feathers were sprinkled all over her skirt, and taller, stiffer ones embellished her hair. A few days later one of his staff came to him to reassure him that it was all right—there was nothing wrong with his guests. He, the staff member, had been to an opening and he had seen rooster feathers scattered broadcast over costumes.

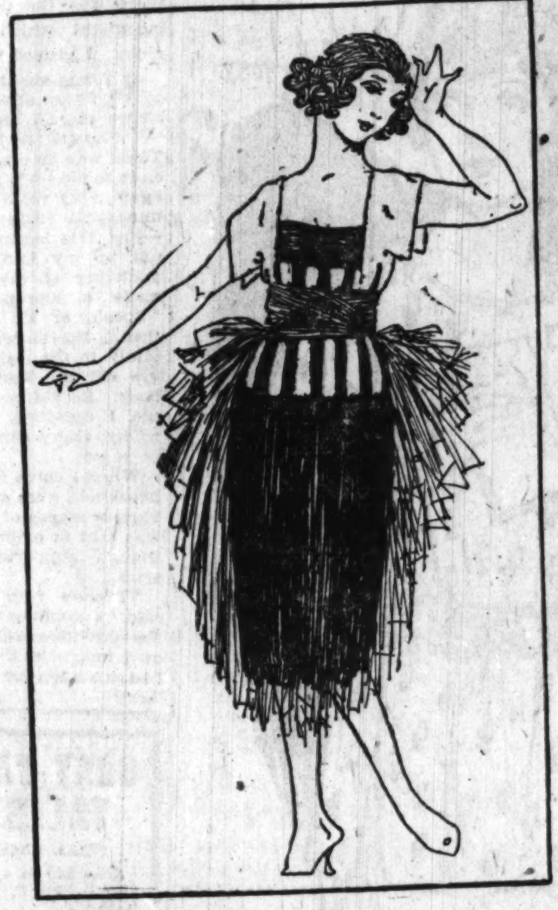
Another new trimming is goat skin, instead of real fur—there being little real fur hereabouts. There never has been a season when it has appeared less plentifully on costumes. Lanvin has nearly all of her tailored dresses banded with a wide collar of goat's hide, tied with ribbon. Indiana and Illinois ought to be able, not only to raise their own trimmings, but inaugurate an export trade this season.

But to get down to something more specific. The turbaned lady in the sketch is attired by Paul Poiret, who is making a stir with his Moroccan motifs. The jacket of this costume is of embroidered scarlet satin. It falls over a silver girdle. The vast paniers and the skirt are of silver cloth, shot with lavender. The material is embroidered in deep blue, pale green, and golden flowers. The turban is of cloth of gold.

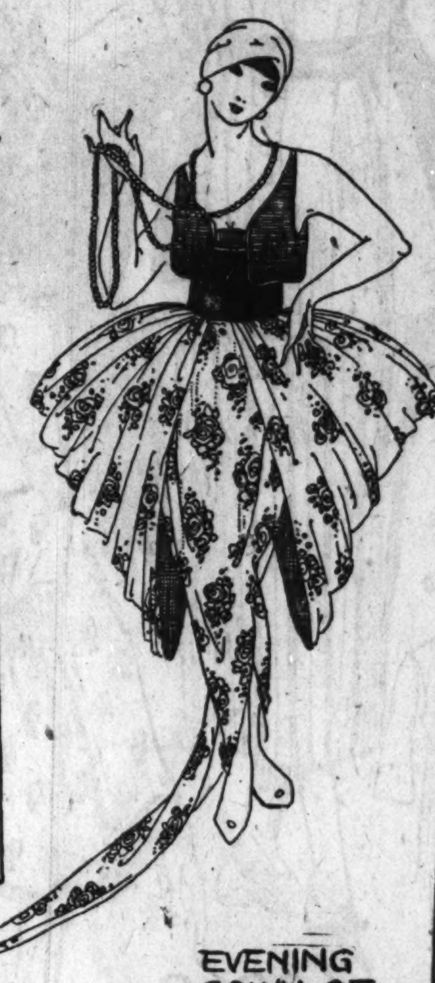
The costume with pointed overdress is also by Poiret. The panier effect is in rose tulle. The skirt itself, as you will observe, is rather slender in outline, but it is reinforced by two sets of overdraperies to make it stand out. One set is in the form of bulging, barrel-like paniers at the sides and the other is a pointed overdress. The bodice is of glazed leather, edged with stiff gold lace.

Poiret seems to be the leader in the movement for the abolishment of backs to evening costumes this winter. If you made an inventory of the smart houses of Paris you would find a scant dozen of backs, I think, in evening costumes. The back to this dress consists of a single mauve colored jewel, which lies against the mannikin somewhere between the shoulder blades low down, and is held in place by the same chain which you see going over the shoulders. It suspends between this and two other chains coming up from the waist line. There is absolutely no other back than this.

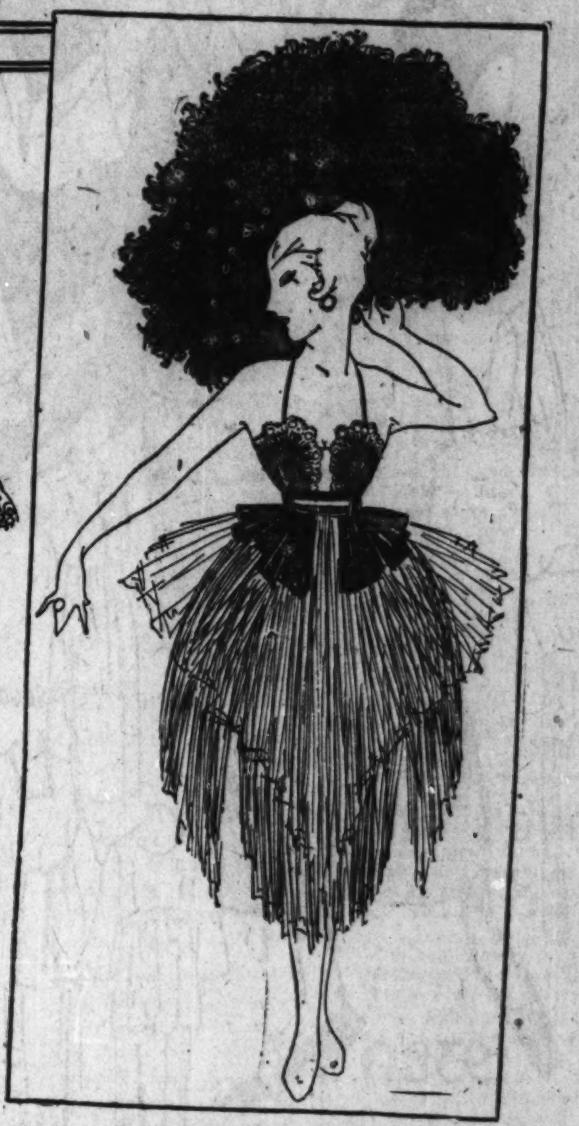
Mr. Poiret does not believe in a general way in necklaces. When he uses them they usually fill some definite function. He has one suspended across the shoulders in the back. It does not appear in front. From it hang two clusters of lace. They fall to a point below the waist line and separate, like undrawn portieres, leaving the back between the shoulders bare. When one has finished dancing and feels a little cool—or, more accurately, a little hot—she can reach back and draw them over her bare arms and chest in front. Mr. Poiret is using a great deal of duvetyn and much fullness. His things are lovely, but impractical.



DANCE FROCK WITH ERMINE SHOULDER TABS



EVENING GOWN OF SILVER CLOTH EMBROIDERED IN COLORED FLOWERS



POIRET COSTUME WITH GLAZED LEATHER BODICE

Last winter in New York I had a French dinner dress which the maid at the hotel was always telling me was shorter in the back than in the front. She was forever pulling at it, and she finally advised me to sell it. That maid is going to have to adjust her mind this fall to a world which tolerates the skirt of uneven length. I do not believe there is a dinner dress in Paris the same length all the way round. I saw one the other day at Worth's which was of cloth of gold, scalloped round the bottom in wide scallops, which rose well upon the ankles in front and dropped almost to the ground in the back. The queen of England will be in style for one time in her life, for never has she worn a trained court robe that did not soar from the ground in front.

The accompanying dance frock is of a style which threatens to be popular indeed. The under tunic is shorter than the overdress, and the overdress is shorter in the back than it is in front. The barrel shaped skirt and the bodice are of black jet. The girdle and the heavy flounces are of black tulle. The whole costume is made unusual and striking by the audacious note contained in the shoulder tabs that take the place of sleeves. They are of ermine, as are the vertical stripes over the blouse and the upper part of the skirt.

RING LORE - - BY DORIS BLAKE

MAUDE MARTIN EVERS

DO you know why the diamond is the stone of stones? Do you know why it is placed on the fourth finger? And how began the custom of betrothal rings?

Much has been writ around the sacred, albeit expensive, emblem—much that hath the sound of reason and much that hath the scent of superstition. It is for you to choose of the lot that which will make you happy and leave that which may make you sad. I only ask that you treat these folklore stories in the spirit in which I offer them—just for the fun of it.

Well, the diamond is the stone de resistance because it is a clear mirror, where everything shows true. And it has all the colors of the rainbow of happiness united in its depth.

The fourth finger is the chosen one because of a vein commonly believed to run from it to the heart.

The left hand is the ring hand, as the emblem of submission, the right hand being the hand of authority. The wife's submission, therefore, was the original promise with the placing of a ring on her left finger.

Warning is sounded against the acceptance of an engagement of any stone other than the diamond, which is and always will be the circlet of eternal devotion and a talisman against the ills of faith and trust to which poor human mates are heir. Even though you be free from superstition on the ring subject, you are urged to keep away from a stone with an unlucky reputation.

"Those engaged with an emerald or opal ring will never be married," so saith the folklore scribes.

The betrothal ring was given first in lieu of dower money.

E'en the day on which the ring is bought has something to do with the destiny of the bride and the groom to be:

To buy a wedding ring on Monday presages a life of excitement and bustle.

On Tuesday, a carefree, easy life.

On Wednesday a life saddened by a gay and faithless mate.

On Thursday, your desires all will be gratified.

On Friday, work hard, but reap a full harvest.

On Saturday, success in love and business.

If the bride buys the ring she will live unhappily.

The golden wedding ring is a pledge of faithfulness.

The platinum wedding ring is a pledge to keep her in luxury.

A man will never marry the girl he bought the ring for if after buying it he tries it on the finger of some one other than the bride to be.

Disaster threatens if your engagement ring wears off before you marry.

To work a good luck charm the bride should kiss the wedding ring before she puts it on.

No wedding there will be if the lover drops the ring while trying to put it on his sweetheart's finger.

To lose an engagement or wedding ring is unlucky, as even Mr. Shakespeare says in the Merchant of Venice:

"As Portia gives her wealth to Bassanio:
I give them with this ring,
Which when you part from, lose,
or give away,
Let it presage the ruin of our love."

It is bad luck to the bridegroom who gets the wedding ring by credit or gift. A wedding ring must be purchased—not taken as a gift—by the bridegroom.

If the bride wishes to be ruler of the new home she must be sure that when the ring is placed on her finger, it slips clear down into place at once.

In some countries it is considered sacrilegious to ever remove from her finger the ring placed there at the altar. And in others it is a sign of wretchedness for the woman.

A ring habitually worn on the first finger indicates an overbearing spirit; on the middle finger, dignity and temperament; on the third, love and affection; on the little finger, a competent spirit.

A wedding ring should never be removed from a sick, dying, or dead person.

To evade the evils that follow later, if your wedding ring slips off within twenty-four hours of the ceremony, remove it and put it on again.

A separation is threatened if you allow any but a partner to remove the wedding ring.

It is bad luck to remove the ring to show it to friends.

Unhappiness unfolds before you if on a second marriage you forget to remove the former wedding ring.

If the wedding ring grows too tight for the finger it portends evil (the fat evil, likely). If it breaks it portends death.

In some countries it is customary to put the wedding ring into the wine pitcher, and the person whose cup contains the ring will be the first to get married.

If the bridegroom in his nervousness at the altar drops the ring in the act of putting it on the bride's finger, the ceremony would better be stopped right there.

The bride who breaks her wedding ring will be a widow soon.

The lost wedding ring forebodes an early separation.

If the man wears a wedding ring also, the one of the two who first loses the ring will die first.

A girl who takes a ring off a man's hand is in for a disappointment from her sweetheart.

A BOY AND A GIRL.

GEORGE and Vivian had been going together for five years—in fact, since their little boy and girl days. He was 18 and she was 16 when they planned to get married at an early date. Both sides of the family consented to the match, but advised that the love sick young people wait a few years, at least, before really marrying. This the impatient young people were unwilling to accede to, but promised to think it over. They did—and decided that the thing to do was to elope, unless their parents would give their consent to a "regular" wedding, with all the fixings.

However, as the parents had discussed the matter from all points, it was decided that the people had better wait three years, when George would be of age, and then have the wedding. Possibly before that time the boy and girl would change their minds, and it is always safest to change a mind before the wedding than after.

But, no, the young people wouldn't hear of such a long delay, and hied themselves to the nearest church one night, and got married. They were quickly forgiven, although all the older people were a little nettled at not having their advice taken. To them it was just "puppy love," and they were afraid of the future—when that "puppy" love would outgrow itself.

The happiness of the young people was short lived, but in a manner altogether different from what the older people had prophesied. Vivian got the "flu," after seven months of happily married life, and died, leaving George nearly desperate with grief. The parents consoled themselves with the thought that, as he was so young, he would soon forget the lovable Vivian. But he could not forget so easily, and after five months he was stricken with pneumonia, and without struggling for life in the least, died, with the name of "Vivian" on his lips.

KITCHEN KLENZER

Antoinette Donnelly's Beauty Answers.

A. E.: DO YOU MEAN BY THE "innumerable small holes in your face" enlarged pores? I take it you do. After washing the face for the night rub ice over the skin, as it has a toning up influence. This is best following a massage of the face which I would advise your doing immediately after washing. Use a good skin food. I have a formula, if you have not one, which I shall send you in return for a stamped addressed envelope. Then end up with the ice rub or witch hazel or alcohol.

MRS. E. A. R.: PLEASE SEND ME stamped addressed envelope for the reducing instructions. Yes, it was a real, honest to goodness woman whom I reduced thirty-six pounds in six weeks. She was so real there was 204 pounds of her. Furthermore, hundreds of women have written me that they followed the instructions I gave them and reduced ten, fifteen, twenty, and even up to fifty pounds. So, Mrs. Doubting Thomas, if you provide the faith in me and my works and the stamped addressed envelope you have every chance of being taken into the fold of the Slim and Svelte.

I Don't Have To Worry, Now!

THERE was a time when I worried over my baby, because he was so thin and pale. We were trying to feed him raw milk with water because I couldn't nurse him—but it was too hard for his little stomach to digest.

"Isn't there some form of milk easier for him?" I asked my doctor.

"Let's try Nestlé's Milk Food," he said. "That is just pure milk, you know, in powder form—but much easier to digest because the curds are broken up—and more nourishing because just the right amount of sugar and cereal is added."

I don't have to worry, now!

Those dimpled arms and legs—that slow, sweet, contented smile—those long, quiet, restful nights and the happy days—they tell me my baby is safe at last.

If you are worrying about your baby, I hope you will try Nestlé's Food. The Nestlé Company sent me free a Mother's Book on how to take care of baby, and enough of the Food for twelve feedings.

If you fill out and send the coupon below, I know they will be glad to help you as they helped me and as they have been helping mothers all over the world for fifty years.

NESTLÉ'S MILK FOOD

FREE! Enough Nestlé's for 12 feedings. Send the coupon!

Nestlé's is pure milk in powder form that is already modified and does not require the further addition of milk. Always pure and safe, always uniform, and free from the dangers of home modification, Nestlé's has stood the test of three generations and has today the largest sale of any baby food in the world.

Moonshine.

It was the first night of my visit with friends in the country. I was sleeping on an upstairs porch, to which I had access through the window of an unused room. Needing more covers in the night, I crawled through the window on my way to fetch them from the hall, where I remembered having seen some.

As I entered the room, I decided it was unnecessary to turn on the light—there was the door leading into the moonlight which streamed into the room. I groped my way across to it.

As I was about to pass through the door a figure appeared in the hall just before me. I stopped short.

"Who is it?" I asked, startled. There was no answer. The figure was close to me. "Who is it?" I demanded again. My voice sounded strange and unnatural. Still no answer, no move—just this leering, defiant silence. I put up my hands to stop the wild pounding of my heart. The figure made a slight move toward me. "Speak, or I'll yell!" I threatened, then. No answer. I moved uncertainly to the right. The mocking figure did the same. I moved hastily back. So did he—now he would grab me, I reasoned. So I yelled, loudly, wildly, many times—and then I knew no more.

When I came to, all members of the household were gathered around me in various stages of dress and undress. I was still in a limp heap on the floor, though supported now by friendly arms.

"There's your burglar," some one said. I summoned courage to look in the direction indicated, and saw my own image in the pier glass which I had mistaken for the door in the moonlight.

Wasn't He Disappointed?

One day as I was scrubbing our back stairs some people came to the house to look at it, as it was for sale. I was dirty and so, to escape them, I ran down into the cellar and jumped into an old wine barrel. When the people came downstairs the man said, "I see you've had wine." Walking over he looked into the barrel and saw me. I don't know which was the most embarrassed, but anyway, I shall never forget it.

"Never Again."

I work in an office where I am alone a great deal of the time. One day I looked down on the street and saw my sister headed for my building, and as my bosses were out thought I would have some fun. I put some red ink on the blotter on my desk and took a revolver out of a drawer. When I heard the elevator start up I laid my head on the desk near the ink, which would of course appear to her as blood, and took the weapon in my outstretched right hand. I could barely control my laughter as I heard her come into the room. Then she stopped without saying a word. I waited a second, and then sixty seconds, and getting frightened I looked up and beheld the out of town manager of the office staring at me with a dazed expression on his face. I certainly felt like shooting myself then for being so foolish, and I never again shall get so dramatic, at least during office hours.

No Harm Done.

While teaching in an Idaho town I was invited with one of the other teachers to the home of some new acquaintances in the country for Sunday dinner.

These people were musical, the husband being a violinist and his wife accompanied him on the piano, so I asked them to play. They had four children and the woman said they played little, only just to keep in practice, as their time was occupied. However, when my friend who was to take us back to town arrived they consented to play for us.

After several selections the wife said, "We had better stop, or you will be tired of us." Quick as a flash I responded, "O no, keep on, by all means—I think you need the practice!" They all shouted with laughter, especially my friend, who had not heard the previous conversation, but the remark was taken as I meant it and not as it sounded, so no harm was done. However, my friend still jokes me about my complimentary remarks.

Third Floor—Center

and as well assures you absolute comfort, and corsets that wear unusually well, and because more and more women realize that fact, more and more women insist upon having their corsets properly fitted. The fitting service here excels that of any other store, first, because of the skill of each of our corps of corsetieres, and then because they have at their service, to select from, a complete variety of famous R & G and Binner corsets, which means that they can find exactly the model your figure should have, in exactly the size you should have—the fitting service, with all that it means to well dressed women, is offered you here without extra charge.

We ask your attention once more to the fact that quality in corsets is most important to watch just now, for, because of the sharp advance in prices of all materials needed in a corset, many corsets may not be up to standard—and so the careful woman will ask for R & G or Binner corsets.

Binner corsets, as illustrated, for the tall woman who wants a very low bust, but needs considerable thigh control, made of extra firm coutil. Its special feature is the way it controls bulging thighs—standing, it fits extra snug and close; elastic lacing below front steel, also elastic lacing over thighs, giving ample room to sit comfortably. You don't feel that you are wearing a corset when you are fitted to a "Binner," and yet they reduce the hips and thighs wonderfully; sizes 22 to 36, at...... 7.50

The HOME HARMONIOUS

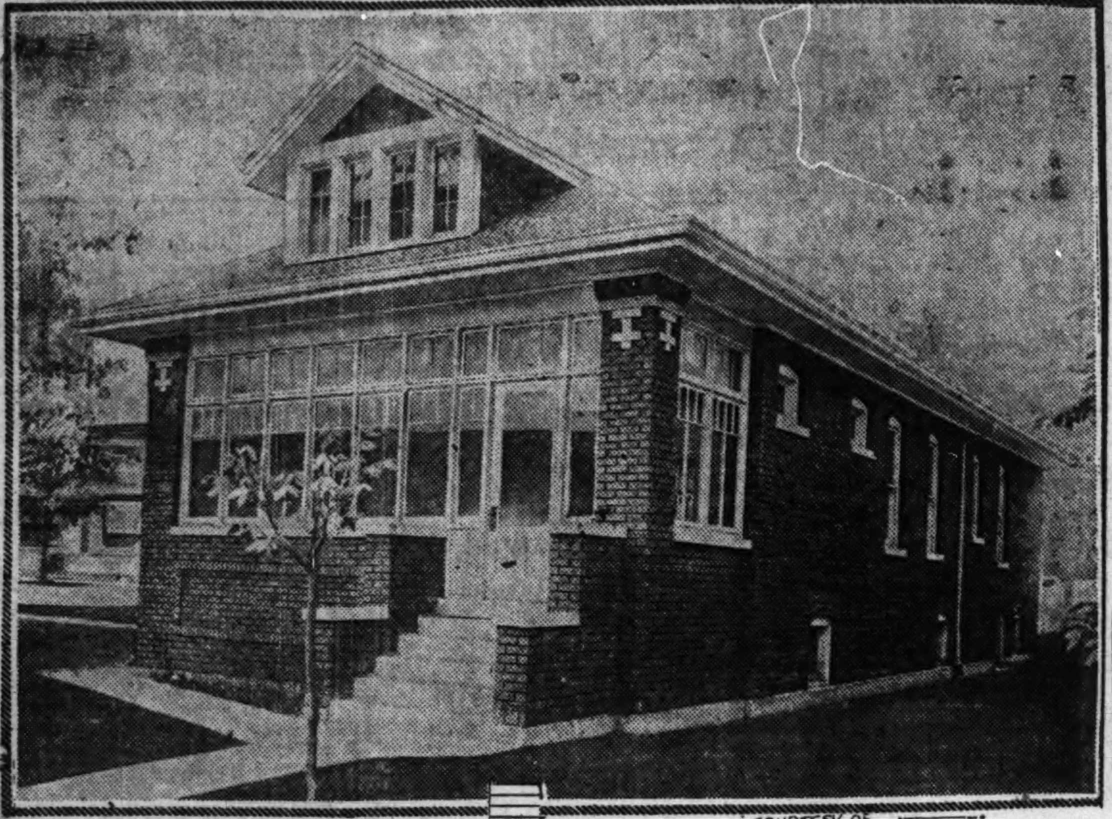
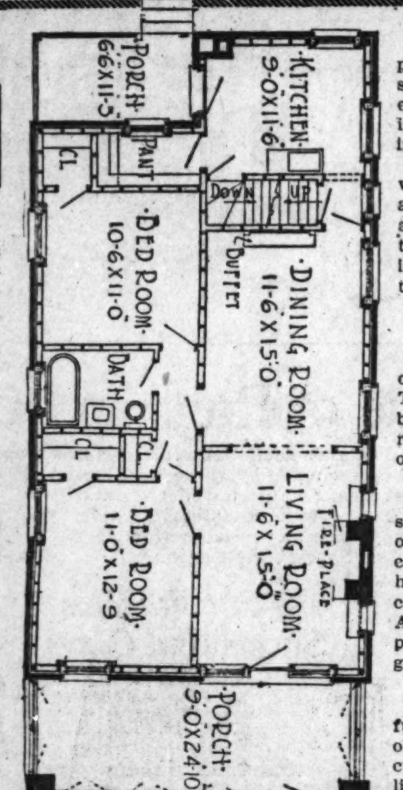
by Anita de Campi



A LITTLE BRICK HOUSE ON A TWENTY FIVE FOOT LOT



COURTESY OF THE AMERICAN BUILDER

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

A NARROW BUNGALOW.

MAKING a house as fireproof as possible, thus lowering the insurance rate; making it attractive, desirable, and light; and constructing it so that it will be warm in winter and cool in summer—these are things that the home builder wants embodied in his house and at the least possible cost.

Brick, hollow clay tile, and stucco houses, if the stucco is applied over either of the former materials, provide the owner with the advantages enumerated. Brick is generally used in cities, because there is less danger of fire spreading from one house to another; hollow clay tile is being used more and more for the same reason.

Permanent buildings, as brick and hollow clay tile homes are called, are cheapest to build in the long run; in fact, now there is little difference between their cost and structures of frame. That is the reason that most of the homes being built in Chicago and its suburbs and a great percentage of those erected in the rural districts are of burned clay materials.

For the city and suburban home builder, where real estate is expensive, a narrow bungalow is most desirable. The design that accompanies this article is excellent for large cities and also perfectly suitable for the rural districts and smaller towns. The bungalow is only 24 feet 10 inches in width and 45 feet long, but in it are five good rooms, exclusive of the glazed-in living porch across the front, which really adds another large room.

This design was made with a view to economy in the cost of construction. It will be noted that the walls are straight. Irregular wall construction is costly. But withal the straight lines, the exterior is most attractive. The overhang of the roof, the dormer window in the attic, and the panel of face brick and concrete trim in the porch pillars all are effective in removing the plain appearance.

The floor plan that accompanies the perspective of the bungalow shows how well the rooms are arranged for the convenience of the housekeeper and the comfort of the occupants. Having all of the rooms of the home on one floor is the feature that appeals to the apartment dweller. A bungalow has all the advantages of an apartment and none of the inconveniencs and annoyances that come from having to depend on a janitor for heat, hot water, and the other service that he is supposed to give, and from living so close to other families.

The living porch is 24 feet 10 inches by 9 feet, and is so arranged that it is glassed in winter and screened in summer. Ranged on one side are the living room, dining room, and kitchen, while on the other connected by a short hall are two bedrooms, with the bathroom between. Each room is of good size and all have sufficient windows to provide good ventilation and plenty of sunlight. The attic space is large enough to provide for a current of air in summer and to keep the house warm in winter.

While this bungalow undoubtedly will not appeal to the builder who has a large amount of money to put into a home, it is excellent for the family that wants a comfortable and convenient place to live, but has only a few thousand dollars to expend.

Answers to Inquiries.

Why not try a scenic paper instead of the tapestry in your dining room. This may be had in tones of buff and blue to match the colors in adjoining room. Make lampshades of deep gladiola pink.

Use mauve painted furniture in your sunroom, trimmed with tiny lines of old blue. Have lampshades of straw colored silk, and on the library table have a runner of brocade in bouquet colors with light mauve predominating. At the windows and French doors place draw curtains of old ivory silk gauze.

Venetian glass is delightfully colorful. Try that on your buffet. Use old blue gauze over ivory transparent curtains. Make the lampshade of brilliant turquoise blue veiled with old blue chiffon. Try lettuce green in your sunroom with tobacco and sand striped sunfast at the windows and an old blue rug.

Keep to mahogany in your bedroom since you already have several good mahogany pieces. Sun room painted furniture is often quite usable in small dining rooms. For the living room make an informal selection, with a view first of all to real comfort. Have a couple of upholstered chairs and a big davenport, a gateleg table, several smaller chairs—the Windsor type is nice—a bookcase and one or two little tables. Plain voile curtains are always good. You will need a dressing table and chair and perhaps a rocker in your bedroom, and other articles depending on the size of the room.

This scheme would radically change the appearance of your room. Light French gray wall, mulberry rug, one cardinal chair (a large chair), others covered with chintz, showing touch of cardinal among flowers on a French gray ground. Curtains in two tone striped French gray sunfast, tied back with cardinal cords.

Varied Activities of Women.

Edith Beals and Ethlyn Thayer are members of Michigan's forest fire fighting brigade.

Mrs. William Booth Jr. conducts a commercial school in Peking for Chinese boys as well as men.

Four thousand women are included in the membership of the Saskatchewan Grain Growers' association.

Miss Margaret Myers is the champion peach picker of California. In a Yuba City cannery, where she is employed on a piece work basis, her lowest day's wages has been $14, while her average is $20.

Housewives in Covington, Ky., have organized a coöperative store in an effort to cut the high cost of living. Stock is sold at $25 a share and will return a dividend at the end of the year of 7½ per cent in commodities.

The most decorated woman of the war is probably Mrs. Hilda Wynne of the British Red Cross society, who was awarded no fewer than seven medals, crosses, and other distinguished honors for her fearless efforts on behalf of the wounded soldiers of Italy, France, Belgium, and Russia.

The women's stockade at the United States war prison barracks, Fort Oglethorpe, Georgia, has been closed. Mrs. Henry H. Morgan, executive officer in charge of the barracks, will return to Wisconsin, where she will reorganize the newly created and established state bureau of child hygiene.

SPECIAL TRAINING COUNTS.

COMPARATIVELY few of the women who have attained conspicuous success started their careers without special business or artistic training.

If a girl is thinking of supporting herself by her own efforts and possesses some natural talent, it behooves her to cultivate that talent so that it may be turned to commercial advantage. If she is without artistic tendencies, a course in one or more of the commercial lines open to women is suggested.

The girl without training or especial qualifications is handicapped at the very beginning of her career, as she is rarely trusted with any but the simplest of routine work, for which she is meagerly paid.

This is the day of business as well as professional specialists, and one must be trained in one line of work in order to specialize.

The progressive girl realizes the advantages which come with a few months' training in a particular branch of office work, fits herself accordingly and is able to start on her career with the knowledge that she can step into any office prepared to carry out the work given her and that she is able to command a respectable salary.

Any large commercial house is evidence of the fact that it pays to spend a few months training for work in an office. The girls who start fresh from grammar or high school are usually put to work opening and sorting mail, running errands from one department to another, filing, acting as information clerk, etc., for which they are paid from about ten to fourteen dollars a week; while the girls in the same house who do stenography, bookkeeping, billing, etc., are paid on a much higher scale of wages. It is usually from the latter class of workers that a girl is chosen occasionally to fill one of the few executive jobs which the house has to offer its women employés.

When young women are ready to start to work they are inclined to feel that the extra time spent in learning a special branch of office work is that much time wasted, and they haven't sufficient patience to give to the task, hence they start working for a pittance and keep on working for years on little more than that.

A young woman of my acquaintance worked as stenographer and secretary for four years before her marriage, and when after the death of her husband she found herself forced to earn a living for herself and two children, a few weeks only were necessary for her to again prepare herself to take dictation, and she was able to start working for a considerably larger salary than she would if she had had no previous business training.

The time and money spent in fitting herself properly for work in an office are more than repaid to the business girl in the desirability of the jobs opened to her by the training. Also a sense of independence is given the trained worker, for she is not dependent on one business house for a job, as is often the case with the untrained.

To every young girl who is considering going to work when vacation time is over I would earnestly suggest that she prepare herself properly for the business world by spending some little time learning to do stenography, bookkeeping, or to manipulate one of the many efficiency devices with which the modern office is equipped.

WHAT TO WEAR.

A PERPLEXING question for people who neither entertain nor go out much is that of what to wear on various occasions. For those to whom this has been the cause of uneasiness the following suggestions may prove of help:

After 6 o'clock in the afternoon, evening dress is correct for both men and women at formal affairs. With décolleté gowns American women do not wear hats, although the Parisians often do—or did before the war. Long kid gloves may be worn or not, as preferred. For some time many fashionable women have given them up for everything except grand opera and large dinners and balls. At the latter two functions they are frequently dispensed with soon after entering the drawing room or ballroom, and are not put on again. For small dinners and other evening parties of a more informal nature, a semi-evening dress or a simple dinner frock may be worn. If there is any doubt as to the size of the affair and the kind of clothes that are appropriate, it is quite permissible to telephone the hostess to ask her advice.

To afternoon or noon entertainments women wear tailored suits or afternoon gowns, with hats, gloves, and whatever wrap the season requires. A man at social gatherings taking place during the daytime wears a dark cutaway [or "morning"] coat, gray striped trousers, gray socks, waistcoat, tie, and gloves, a white shirt, patent leather shoes, unless the occasion be strictly informal, when a business suit may be substituted. Dinner coats are proper only for more or less unceremonious home festivities, or—as is the case in England, where men's fashions are really set—for "stag" parties.

T. M. K.: The minister takes his place, and immediately afterward the bridegroom and best man enter from the same door by which the minister has previously come in (a small one near the chancel), and stand at the right of the chancel steps. Then the ushers walk up the aisle, followed by the bridesmaids, the maid of honor, and lastly the bride, on her father's left arm. In the recessional the bride and bridegroom come down the aisle first, the maid of honor and best man just behind them. The two last named precede the bridesmaids and ushers, who walk in couples. The parents of the bride and bridegroom are the first to leave their places after the bridal party has gone.

Lift Off Corns!

Doesn't hurt! Lift touchy corns and calluses right off with fingers

Apply a few drops of "Freezone" upon that old, bothersome corn. Instantly that corn stops hurting. Then shortly you lift it right off, root and all, without pain or soreness.

Hard corns, soft corns, corns between the toes, and the hard skin calluses on bottom of feet lift right off—no humbug!

Tiny bottles of "Freezone" cost but a few cents at drug stores

Cuticura Hair Is Usually Thick and Healthy

Start him right if you wish him to have thick, healthy hair through life. Regular shampoos with Cuticura Soap will keep his scalp clean and healthy. Before shampooing touch spots of dandruff and itching, if any, with Cuticura Ointment. A clean, healthy scalp means good hair.

Dust children's skin with Cuticura Talcum, an exquisitely scented baby, skin and face powder. At all druggists' 25c.

Important Notice to Chicago Housewives—

Derryvale Genuine Irish Linens

are now on sale at THE FAIR—and are obtainable here only in Chicago

We are making this announcement with some pride, for not only does it mean a further extension of our service to Chicago housewives, but also it constitutes another recognition of our leadership in this field. In each city one leading store is given the exclusive distribution of the fine Derryvale Irish Linens. Knowing The Fair's supremacy in the home-furnishing field, the makers naturally turned to this store to handle their product in Chicago.

DERRYVALE. Genuine Irish Linen

"Typical scene in the Irish linen country"

Derryvale linens are woven in the heart of old Ireland's linen country from the finest long fiber flax grown. They have a silky sheen, a wonderful lustre that is not marred by years of service—and they launder like new.

Every piece is guaranteed to give satisfactory wear

In view of the scarcity and the generally high prices of genuine Irish linens, our prices are particularly attractive, being based on orders placed far in advance at quotations then prevailing. And to introduce the Derryvale linens to Chicago, we have arranged for tomorrow a very remarkable sale.

Table Cloths and Napkins Below Wholesale Prices

Tomorrow we shall feature Derryvale genuine Irish linen cloths and napkins in five handsome round patterns—rose, scroll and conventional, Scotch thistle with ribbon band and "true lovers' knot," American Beauty rose and conventional, ribbon sprays of tulips with Greek Key border and conventional, chrysanthemum with Greek Key border. At the prices we are quoting for this sale, this is one of the most remarkable offerings we have made in recent years. We must limit each customer to two cloths and two dozen napkins, and it must be understood that these prices prevail only while this special lot lasts.

Table cloths, size 70x70, regular price 7.25, tomorrow at 4.39

Table cloths, size 70x88, regular price 8.98, tomorrow at 5.39

Napkins to match, size 22x22, regular price 10.49, the dozen, 6.39

How to Set the Table for Every Occasion

This 48 page book, written by an authority, Mrs. Sara Swain Adams, contains full directions for setting the table correctly for informal as well as formal occasions, together with many suggestions for table decorations for holidays and special events, as well as valuable information on the care of table linens. It is beautifully printed and bound in board. Ordinarily such a book would sell for 1.50, but you may obtain it in our linen department for 50c.

70 Inch Irish Linen Table Damask, 1.98 Yd.

Derryvale pure Irish linen table damask, 70 inches wide, in excellent designs, will be specially priced tomorrow. Limit five yards to each customer, while 1,000 yards last, at, the yard, 1.98

In addition to the qualities of cloths and napkins mentioned above, all the other qualities of the Derryvale Genuine Irish linens will be here in complete assortments. Those housewives who want the more expensive linens will find here patterns of exceptional beauty in linens that will prove very attractive values at whatever price they may wish to pay.

Horse Big Factor in Farm Work

By Frank Ridgway

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

AFTER a Chinese arrives in this country it does not take him long to find the reason for his country's backwardness in agriculture and the reason for the prosperity of the American farmer. The farmer in China today plants the seed and harvests the crop in much the same way as his ancestors did thousands of years ago. Pioneer American farmers started out depending largely on their own muscles to prepare the seed bed and gather the crop, but they soon quit that. That was drudgery, and they began to devise means to eliminate it.

Many factors have played an important part in the elimination of drudgery on the farm, but if the farmer goes carefully over the long list of blessings that have come to him he must give the horse a place near the top, if not at the top. The horse has contributed as much as any other one thing to keep the American farmers from the old laborious and inefficient way of doing his work, and has earned the right to be considered the standard power for farm work.

He is still playing an important part on the farm. There is hardly a farm operation in which he is not used from the breaking of the ground to the gathering, storing, or marketing of the crop.

"Despite the erroneous idea that many people have, the horse still furnishes 97 per cent of all power used in field work on the farm," says Wayne Dinsmore, secretary of the Percheron Society of America. "The tractor furnishes the balance. American farmers are the most efficient of any agriculturists in the world. They produce more per capita than any other nation, due to the fact that they use horse power efficiency and in larger units with more labor saving machinery than any other nation.

"Every farmer in the central west is equipped with gang plows, disc harrows, grain drills, corn planters, corn cultivators—both one and two row cultivators—mowing machines, side delivery rakes, hay loaders, grain binders, and corn harvesters. All of these implements require two or more horses; all are equipped with seats so the operator, whether he be the farmer himself or hired man, can ride. The use of these implements enables our farmers to do more work in less time, with less expenditure on purely manual labor than in any other country. In fact there is little purely manual labor on our farms now. The work is nearly all done with teams and most all implements are arranged so the farmer can ride."

Mr. Dinsmore, one of the best known horsemen in America, does not guess at these things; he knows. He has stacks of facts and figures and has studied the horse situation from all angles.

"Despite these facts just sighted," he continued, "there is a great difference in the efficiency of labor on farms in various parts of the United States. In the Palouse country in Washington, Idaho, and Oregon, they plow with eight and ten horse teams, strung out in pairs one in front of the other hitched to three bottom gang plows, and plow eight and a half acres per day per man. This is twice as much as is accomplished by the average farmer in the corn belt; four times as much as is accomplished by big farmers in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and eight times as much as is accomplished by the farmers in New England. This is but one instance of the difference in the efficiency in the various farming sections of the United States."

This difference in efficiency in utilizing horse power in the field is due to the number of horses used per man and the manner in which they are used, said this drafter enthusiast. Some farmers in the wheat sections of the west use as many as twenty-five and thirty horses hitched to a machine and handle them with little difficulty, but they are finding out new ways of handling them more efficiently.

"It is an axiom," said Mr. Dinsmore, "that more efficient use of horses leads to more efficient horses and will have an influence upon the breeding of more powerful horses which are capable of doing more per day than those now in general use. All of this has its bearing on the cost of production. It enables farmers to produce crops more cheaply and make it possible to sell them at a lower price and yet allow for a fair profit. It must not be forgotten that the increased costs of production are always passed on to the ultimate consumer and every city family is interested in more effective use of horses by farmers, for it contributes in some degree to a reduction in the cost of living."

While those in the city are interested from the standpoint of the consumer in more efficient use of horse power, the farmer is interested in it from the standpoint of a producer. With the advent of the tractor the term horse power carries with it two meanings, and there is a difference of opinion among farmers as to the ultimate result of the contest that has been waged between the tractor and the horse as a form of farm power appliance. While the tractor is yet in its formative development, those who have studied the question are satisfied that it has come to stay.

The horse and the tractor have each a distinct work and duty on the farm. It is the opinion of Mr. Dinsmore that tractor competition to draft horses on the farm has not reached its limit. "The use of the tractor," he says, "will continue to increase up to a certain limit of profitable replacement, wherever that may be, and the farm power question will then go into a balance between tractors and horses, just as it has in the cities. The proportion of horses displaced on the farm, however, will be much less than in the cities, for there are many factors on the farm which do not exist in the city to retard the use of gas engine power units. Among these the more important are soft ground, lack of skilled mechanics, distance from repairs, and the high cost of gas, oil, and repairs. Horses also cost less, whether reared or bought, and are maintained at a much lower cost."

America needs more horses. Horses and mules are still far from extinction on farms in this country, for there are still about 25,000,000 of them, but there are millions more acres to be broken and to be put under cultivation and millions more horses yet unborn will be called upon to help in this great work of producing more food, which will help to reduce the cost of living.

The big, heavy drafter is the kind most desirable, and with the new hitches now devised one farmer can drive four, six, eight, or ten horses in tandem pairs with little difficulty. This enables the farmer to reduce the number of men on the farm and thereby decrease the cost of production.

The draft horse has probably done more to change farming from drudgery to a business that should appeal to anybody who does not mind getting up early in the morning than any other factor.

DORIS BLAKE'S ANSWERS TO LOVE PROBLEMS

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped, addressed envelope.

He Visited a Palmist.

"Dear Miss Blake: A palmist to whom I recently went told me that a certain line on my hand would be a detriment to my success in life unless it were removed. He explained that this could be done only by an Egyptian magnet, offering to do it for a certain price. I refused to take what he said seriously, although he asserted that it would be the greatest investment I could ever make. Was I not right? Can the lines on the hands be changed; with what effect? The palmist was only temporarily in the place I visited him, and I would not have considered paying him the money, but I desire to know whether he could have done it. "JAMES."

I guess your Egyptian magnet friend, James, is close kin to the gentleman who sells the big buildings to Ezra from Podunk. You made a better investment of your money by refusing him a share of it. It would take more than an Egyptian magnet to change the lines in one's palm if there is anything in palmistry, as the claim is character and habits are registered in the lines.

To Write or Not to Write.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been reading your column and now I should like a little advice. I have corresponded with a boy ever since he went into service and I knew him a year before that.

"Although his letters are absolutely straightforward he some way makes me feel that he cares, but when I am with him I feel differently. He never takes me anywhere, but always treats me perfectly. I have suggested a stop to our correspondence several times, but he will not listen to it.

"I shall be away all winter and I hardly know whether to keep up a correspondence or not. My people are all very much impressed with him, so I cannot get an unbiased opinion from them. Please tell me what to do. "MARY."

It may be that the young man has no money to take you places. He may be one of the type who would not take you anywhere unless he could take you to a nice place. It takes most of these returned men a little while to get on their feet financially, and if you are made of the stuff that good friendships thrive upon you will be patient.

Her Boy Friends.

"Dear Miss Blake: This is my first appeal to you for help. Can you tell me how I can make my boy friends treat me as I want to be treated—that is, I don't like to have their arms around me, and I don't like to be kissed; but when I tell them that they say they don't believe me. When asked to kiss them good night and I refused two of them told me they could tell I read your advice and advised me to stop, but I won't. CONSTANCE."

You stick to me and my advice, Constance. Tell the boys to write to me—that I have something I should like to say to them. I won't scold them, but I would like to ask them if they have nice young sisters what they would think if they came upon them suddenly being mawled around and cheapened by young men. Suppose you ask them, in case they don't write me.

A Boy She's Anxious to Meet.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am very much interested in a certain young man and would desire his acquaintance. I was with a girl friend when she stopped to talk to him, but evidently she didn't have brains enough to introduce us and that was my only chance of getting acquainted. He lives in the neighborhood and I see him quite often. When I pass he looks at me from head to foot, in other words 'sizes me up.' I do not like to flirt, as it is very cheap, but how can I get acquainted? "ROSE."

It may not have been a lack of brains at all. Some girls are a bit selfish in the matter of introducing a man friend. Now you will have to win the friend over to arranging a meeting and an introduction.

West Leads East in All That's Best in Modern Homes

By Mme. X.

THERE'S no doubt about it; we westerners are far ahead of easterners in the comfort and conveniences of our rural living. The visiting delegates to the National Garden club convention, held on Chicago's north shore last June—men and women from the supposedly more civilized summer resorts of New England, New York state, and neighboring districts—were much impressed with our screened living and dining verandas, our second story open air sleeping porches, our many picturesque swimming pools, and the superlative convenience of our household arrangements.

Gas cooking aranges and hot water heaters, electric washing machines, and vacuum cleaners are still rare in eastern menages, though hereabouts they are to be found in even the simplest homes. The screened porch was invented and first used in the west, and is only slowly finding favor farther east.

For thousands of years mankind has been experimenting and perfecting in construction, so as to produce a nearly airtight house, only to find it necessary to escape from it into open air sleeping, eating, and living quarters. The private bathroom for each member of a household is no sooner achieved than it is found insufficient. We must have garden swimming pools, where whole communities meet in scantest attire and seek refuge from summer heat.

First of Swimming Pools.

The Arthur Aldises were the pioneers among swimming pool builders, and to this day theirs is the most popular and populous of its kind, though by no means the biggest on the north shore. It is odd that those opulent folk, who skim the cream off summer from Evanston to Lake Bluff, should prefer the narrow confines of a concrete basin to the spaciousness of nearly and quite accessible Lake Michigan, but they do.

Even before they instituted their pool, the Aldis gardens were a favorite Sunday morning rendezvous for their many friends. I don't know hereabouts a more inviting, various, unselfconscious and altogether charming country place than this one belonging to this hospitable couple. It is with a great sense of repose that one goes into it. There's no obvious attempt at gardening or landscaping.

The rather high, vine covered, white wooden house represents no architectural period. At one side of the garden is the low browed cottage that was formerly the famous playhouse, which taught us all the value and possibilities of the Irish playwrights, and developed so much latent local talent for amateur acting. Nearby is Red Bird cottage, originally fitted up by Mrs. Aldis as a refuge for weary nurses; now, however, the summer abode of the James Keeleys, who also inhabit for the time the quondam playhouse.

In the center of a rambling, spontaneous domain of shrubs and flowers the famous pool lies, gazing with a sort of lidless stare at the sky, unless full of a splashing, chattering humanity.

Tennis Court in Demand.

In the sheltered southwest corner of the grounds the tennis court is in such constant demand that it doesn't seem as if the grass had time to grow long enough for the lawn mower to be needed. On Sunday mornings a full gallery of spectators is always to be found sitting under the shady trees that border one side of the court.

Among players or onlookers you will usually find the Hugh McBirneys, the Howard Shaws, the Joseph Ryersons, the John McCutcheons, the Russell Tysons, the Charles Atkinsons, the James Keeleys, the Edward Bennetts, Mrs. Edward Hasler, the Walter Brewsters, Prentiss Coonleys, Hugh Johnstons, William Turner, and some of those attractive navy couples, such as the Zogbaums, Odells, and Carpenters from the training station further north.

When any of these onlookers lose interest in one set of players they can adjourn to Charles Atkinson's nearby court, which enjoys the privileges of the Aldis grounds and nestles just back of the McCutcheon and Atkinson white cottages.

Perhaps the most delectable feature of the whole place, however, is the comfortable seats under the spreading apple trees and in the arbor, where a little spray leaps and falls into a marble bowl, tickling the backs of a family of goldfish. On warm moonlight nights—and the recent summer has made a record in this line—the garden seems under a magic spell, and its proprietors and their guests frequently sit there until long after the witching hour, without imitating yawning graveyards.

Other Attractive Resorts.

There are many other pools east and west of the Northwestern's tracks. The Robert J. Dunhams' is a lovely and tempting bit of water, of irregular shape, with vine covered rocks on one side, a shaded lawn on the other, and a picturesque structure at the end composed of two dressing rooms connected by a pretty pergola. It is a favorite spot, especially with the youth of the neighborhood, friends of Miss Caryl Dunham.

The Robert Thornes have one of the largest and handsomest of the north shore swimming pools, where the expert can have full swing for various stunts. The William V. Kelleys' pool, on Green Bay road, is the joy and goal of numerous of the younger clan.

None of its ilk has a more cheerful social record, however, than the charming pool set in Mrs. James W. Thorne's lovely flower garden. It has been the scene of many midnight swimming parties this last summer, with refreshments served on the nearby terraces. It has become the habit of the gay young married set, of which the Thornes are prominent members, to adjourn there from dances and bridge parties along about midnight, and to become more or less amphibious. The mild stars have looked down on the Howard Linns, Lawrence Armours, Newton Perrys, Frank Hibbards, Edward Cudahys, George McLaughlins, and many other disporting themselves in the Thorne pool.

Other north shore pools glimmer in Winnetka in the William G. Hibbards' poetic garden and in the George Higginsons' and the Edward Burlings' charming grounds. Not to knew how to swim nowadays—well, it shows you're not in the swim or are afraid of the lines your Annette Kellermans might reveal.

Word has come from Rio Janiero that our former fellow citizen, Herman Gade, who has been serving as charge d'affaires in the Norwegian legation there, has been appointed minister from Norway to Brazil. This is a long step upward in his diplomatic career, but also, I fear, means that he and his family will henceforth only be visitors to, not residents of Chicago, and Lake Forest—a great social loss to their wide circle of friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Gade and their daughter, Miss Alicia Gade, will probably come here soon before settling more completely in Rio. Their son, Gerhard, is visiting his uncle, Charles G. King, in Lake Forest before returning to Harvard.

Mrs. Gade's sister, Mrs. Arnold Klebs, is sailing for Switzerland with her youngest daughter, Miss Newell, next Wednesday to join her husband, Dr. A. C. Klebs, who left this country some time ago. The Klebs were building a new house near Lausanne on the shores of Lake Geneva, when the war broke out. This was never quite completed. They are now going to finish it and make their permanent home there.

A well supported rumor has it that there aren't enough ships sailing the seven seas to carry the Americans who are applying for passage to Europe next spring and summer. The government and banks needn't worry about our oversupply of gold coin. There will be thousands and hundreds of thousands of our compatriots only too anxious to scatter it personally over devastated, depopulated, and impoverished Europe. Given half a chance we ourselves would brave the discomforts of that unheated, bathtubless, old civilization over there.

American Hospital at Reims.

Meanwhile Mrs. Russell Tyson and others are working to further the project to build and endow the American Memorial hospital in Reims, and are busy soliciting contributions to help in founding it. That truly remarkable organization, the American Fund for French Wounded, is parent of the scheme, and attractive and up to date plans are already being perfected to provide a building in that the most tragic and historic of all French cities to house the one hundred beds which will compose the hospital. Six thousand dollars will endow a bed. Already seventy-five beds have been subscribed for.

The present appeal is being made to Lake Foresters to provide a bed "in honor of those who went from Lake Forest and did not return, or in gratitude for those who have returned." Checks may be sent either to E. D. Hulburd, president of the Merchants' Loan and Trust company, or to Prentiss Coonley of Lake Forest.

The need for such an institution—it is for women and children—grows in Reims every day. There are so many casualties there from falling walls and from unexploded bombs and hand grenades that the temporary hospital now there in charge of the former nurses and doctors of the Overseas hospital (founded by suffragists) has already over a hundred patients.

A Visit from the Archbishop.

An amusing story comes from the inner circles of the A. F. F. W. in Reims. The archbishop of Reims made a visit to the organization's headquarters, where a number of fine young American girls are still working. When he extended his archepiscopal hand with the archepiscopal ring on the forefinger for the reverend kiss, which it is customary to imprint on said ring, the buxom but inexperienced damsels one and all gave it a hearty handshake.

After the visit the archbishop was driven back to his shattered palace by one of the A. F. F. W. motor corps girls, a scion of a wealthy New York family. As he descended from the car he handed her a tip.

The girls think that they got even with him, but I think the last innings belong to the archbishop; don't you?

Anyhow, be sure to contribute something to one of the beds for this splendid, permanent memorial of the time the two republics fought side by side for freedom and the right.

The present state of international irritation and criticism is a case of inevitable reaction of nerves stretched too tight and suddenly released. Time will restore the balance, and for ages to come American and French youth will be taught the story and shown the monuments commemorating the greatest struggle in history when the French and ourselves stood side by side.

Cantacuzenes in Chicago.

The most notable visitors in Chicago at the present moment are Prince and Princess Michael Cantacuzene, who are the guests of Harold F. McCormick. The Princess Cantacuzene, as you doubtless know, is on one side the granddaughter of our most famous general, Ulysses S. Grant; on the other of the late H. H. Honoré; a daughter of the late Gen. Frederick D. Grant, and a niece of the late Mrs. Potter Palmer. As far as a republic like ours can go her lineage matches any in Europe.

Her husband is a member of an an-

[illegible] and aristocratic family in the Ukraine. His beautiful old home was burned, its contents stolen and dispersed, the estate pillaged by the peasants. The Cantacuzenes are, nevertheless, counting on returning there some day and rebuilding and restoring it all.

Princess Cantacuzene has meanwhile developed an unusual literary gift and her articles in a contemporary periodical describing Russia before, during, and after the revolution make some of the most interesting and delightful contributions to that vast library of war literature which grows daily before our eyes. They say that a whole building in Berlin has been dedicated to this literature and is to harbor every consequential word in every language written on the subject.

Moving to Boston.

Mrs. Arthur Ryerson and her daughter, Mrs. George W. Patterson, are visiting in Lake Forest. They have come on a flying trip to collect the latter's possessions to transplant them to the home the Pattersons are planning in Boston. Mrs. Ryerson is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Ryerson, while Mrs. Patterson is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson Jr.

In Boston Mrs. Patterson will find her cousin, Mrs. Donald Frost, and many other ex-Chicago friends, such as Mrs. William James (formerly Miss Alice Runnells) and Mrs. Hendrix Whitman (formerly Miss Adelaide Chatfield-Taylor).

So many young Boston men have come out here that it is, perhaps, but a fair exchange to have Chicago girls go there—but we miss them!

THE AMERICAN ARMY AND THE BRITISH NAVY.

The English are temperamentally and traditionally opposed to an army. The statesman who allowed the British navy to decline, so that it was revealed to popular perception as declining, would get into the worst of troubles. The statesman who tried to persuade the British that they ought to have an adequate army policy would get into trouble if the public thought there was danger of that policy being adopted.

Great Britain must have a navy, the dominating navy, and does not want an army. That was the policy before the war. It is a policy unchanged by the war.

When the British speak of disarmament they mean that they should preserve the policy they had before 1914 and that other nations should disband their armies and keep their navies below the strength which the British would think might challenge the British navy.

The effectiveness of a navy is largely relative and the British taxpayer is not interested in maintaining an extraordinarily large fleet merely to have it extraordinary. He prefers that it dominate because the others, individually or by possible combination, are not equal to it in strength.

Great Britain at first viewed with astonishment and dislike the proposals of Secretary Daniels to make the American navy the greatest in the world. A great many Americans thought that Mr. Daniels was bluffing or dreaming.

Now the British are criticizing Secretary Baker's army plans and Americans must hope that Mr. Baker is neither bluffing nor dreaming. We cannot understand an attitude such as that taken by the British.

They have retained all they want to retain. They had sea power and sea control. They assert as their policy that this is sufficient for their security. They assert that nothing less would be sufficient. They do not want any more, but they want that, and they have it.

There is no question of foreign interference with British navalism.

Great Britain is not giving advice and is not criticized. It seems impossible that a people should assert such a right for themselves and then declare that the American army plans are hostile to the intent and purpose of the league of nations.

The comment that the American army, as Secretary Baker wants to establish it, would destroy the league or make it a sham, is inexplicable. If Mr. Baker wants a large regular army it is because the war department foresees many new and strange purposes to which the American soldiers may be put under the league.

We have them in Siberia and northern Russia and Germany and elsewhere. Great Britain wants us to send them to Armenia. They are supposed to go wherever there is nothing to be had but trouble.

In addition to a large regular army, which must be large if it is to undertake military missions everywhere in the world, the United States wants universal service for its own national well being and security, for the development of its youth and the guaranty of its future.

Expeditionary forces would not be developed by universal service. The nature of the plan indicates the nonaggressive character of the citizen army of the United States. It is America's right to train its young men, organize, equip, and discipline them.

The proposed military policy of the United States will not hurt the league of nations. It may do it some good.

JOHN MILLER.

Printer's ink has been lavished from coast to coast and reams of foolscap have been subjected to the stammering pens of thousands in the vain effort to set down something in mere words which might match the surpassing loyalty of William Tanner. We may as well scratch and scrawl our poor knowledge of the unknowable.

Tanner's death was a thing apart. Everything in the whole world was excluded from him in that last moment save the one moving impulse of normal man that "This is the woman thou gavest me." So he had sought her out from among all women, so had he clung to her, and so he died with her. It was the thing William Tanner had to do. So long as we think of Tanner and his wife we shall visualize a man and a woman locked in each other's embrace, clear chiseled in the glare of a headlight, eternity yawning—everything else tumbled back into the shadows.

It is because of this tumbling back into the shadows that we have almost lost sight of John Miller. Here is a man whose deed comes under "Greater love hath no man than this: that he lay down his life for his friend." We do not say that Miller, the flagman, has a place in that beautifully tragic picture of the Tanners. His is a study by itself.

Tanner lost his life; gained, we think, the whole world. Miller, 52 years old, serving patiently in his little niche at the railroad crossing, no great emotion to move him, nothing to take with him into eternity, no surge of passion to steady him in the trial, nothing to justify him but his stolid loyalty to the human race of which he is such a distinguished member—this John Miller clung to the attempt at rescue until the locomotive knocked him down, ground off a leg, and threw him, a broken thing, into the shadow.

John Miller deserves the thoughts of his fellow citizens; deserves their substantial recognition. For as William Tanner symbolizes the bond that keeps a man and woman as one, John Miller is the symbol of human brotherhood.

REGULATING EVERYBODY.

No Fourth of July oration used to be complete unless the speaker devoted a considerable part of his address to the "glorious freedom" enjoyed by the individual American citizen. We were taught to believe, and we did believe, that America was distinguished above all other countries because it granted the freest scope for individual action; and it was our pride that this freedom existed in every aspect of our political and economic life.

We inherited our beliefs from the men who fought the revolutionary war and drafted the constitution. They feared perhaps more than anything the domination of the state over the individual and they devised an elaborate series of safeguards to prevent this very thing. They believed in a strong central government, but they were equally convinced that its activities should be confined to certain definite purposes.

The hatred of tyranny in this country is probably as strong as it ever was. We hated the tyranny and despotism, as we saw it, of Czar Nicholas and Kaiser Wilhelm. We would not even now subscribe to the theory of a benevolent despot.

It is a question, however, whether as a matter of fact we are not asking our government to assume the power and functions of a benevolent despot. Every demand for nationalization of this or that industry, every demand for a new form of government control, every demand, in fact, for state assistance, whether by legislation or prosecution, to help us out of a difficulty is a step towards creating a despotism of the same order which in the past we so roundly denounced.

Consider, just as one example, the effort that is being made to get legislation to regulate the corner grocer. Now it may be true that in many instances he is engaged in profiteering; it is perhaps true that legislation may furnish a remedy. But the sturdy individualists who built this country would never contemplate such a remedy. For one thing, they had too strong a belief in the law of supply and demand to think that written law could afford effective relief; if one dealer was profiteering it was their idea that another one could be found who was not, and that in any event a purely artificial condition could not last if the consumer exercised good judgment in making his purchases—in other words if he made an ally of the natural (and ultimately inescapable) law of supply and demand.

But perhaps more than anything else they feared the encroachment of the state. It is obvious that if the state is going to regulate the corner grocer, the next step is the regulation of the corner druggist, then the hardware merchant, and so on till every occupation is included, not even excepting the soap box orator. In such circumstances the Fourth of July orator could no longer boast of the freedom of the American individual, whatever else he might have to boast of.

We do not contend that modern conditions do not require a greater degree of state intervention than was necessary when the nation was young. But there is reason to believe that without realizing the consequences the American people are coming more and more to surrender their individual independence and lean on the state. Nowadays the American instead of thinking what he can do for himself thinks first of how he can get the state to do something for him. Consciously or not his ideal of the state is that it should be a benevolent despot.

MODES IN THE MOVIES.

Back a few weeks there came to Chicago a woman of artistic proclivities, who, after inspecting our young women, pronounced the verdict that the cinema is teaching them how to dress. We have been turning this over in our minds.

Reflecting upon the truism that man is an imitative animal we believe there could be no greater blessing conferred upon the race than an ability to choose the right kinds of things to imitate. Thus far in the movies we are only moderately agreed upon certain examples. We think that sanguinary episodes ought to be kept out of sight so that youthful minds may not become contaminated. We have cinemas "for adults only" because we think that after a certain birthday we ought to know better.

But there seems, in our opinion, one feature of the silent drama which cannot, under the laws of high lights, be subjected to any more rigid censorship than is imposed by the very limitations of photography; and this is of modes for women. If women will imitate the modes of the movies they will not go far wrong because fate and the dry plate, hypo and high lights, all of which are inexorable, have decreed that distinct lines and blacks and whites only shall register.

If these symmetrical lines of artistically hung skirts will register on the screen they will register on the street. Our young women of Chicago, so our visiting woman of the arts tells us, are beginning to register.

Probably it is well that photography has its limitations. Without them we could expect to hear that every cinema theater in America had turned its audiences into frenzied gatherings of envious women, all seeking to copy modes so bewildering in texture and color as to defy any except the immortal tailors of Paris.

Simplicity is perforce the mode slogan of the movies. In simplicity lies elegance. If our women will learn to dress simply we shall have got something out of the movies we never put there.

MORE WAR INCAPACITY.

[St. Louis Globe-Democrat.]

As each new development of incapacity and reckless extravagance in the conduct of the war comes to light the mind subconsciously sets itself to resist the shock of still other revelations. To the disclosures of the excessive expense and the almost nothing of outcome of the conduct of the board responsible for the production, or, rather, the nonproduction, of aircraft have been added the revelations of the failure of the ordnance department to produce small arms, machine guns, or artillery for actual use in France in anything like the quantity needed or possible, in spite of expenditures that were astonishing in their magnitude. Now comes the information, dragged to light by the house committee investigating the conduct of the war, that the munitions plant constructed in Ohio, which was estimated to cost not more than $1,500,000, actually cost $14,000,000 in an uncompleted state.

Excessive expenditures to secure speed where speed was a vital necessity may be excused, even approved, but when excess of cost was accompanied by extreme dilatoriness and inexcusable delay and inefficiency, as was the case especially with all the undertakings of the ordnance department, it cannot be condoned. The war was a big thing, to be sure. It was unfortunate that we did not have in executive positions more men who measured up to its bigness.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO.

"Lord, what fools these mortals be!"

STAND IN LINE.

Up in the morn when Big Ben rings,
Grabbing my hat and coat and things;
Hustle along, just feeling fine;
Get to the "El"—and stand in line.

Out again for the noonday lunch,
Trailing along with the rest of the bunch,
To put on the eats at the feed-bag sign;
And when we get there we stand in line.

Homeward-bound when the day is done,
Tired and hungry, but ready to run;
Back to the "El," up the stepped incline,
Reach the station, and stand in line.

After supper to the movie show,
Me and Mable and baby go,
To see "The War on the German Rhine."
Same old story. We stand in line.

Wonder if, when our life work's o'er,
And we all set out for the golden shore,
Saint Peter will give us the stand-back sign,
"Hi! quit your crowding there! Stand in line!"

BACCHUS was about as poor a judge of distance as the inventor of near-beer. A Greek poet introduces him as advising nine parts of water to three parts of wine. Near-wine was considered wholesome and nourishing, while sheer-wine was held to be the devil. Yet most people believe that Bacchus was a devil of a fellow.

And That's the Way It Goes.

[From the New Albany, Ind., Ledger.]

One of the most popular and gratifying features of the Ledger is the Want Ad Column. Remarkable results have been obtained by advertisers. In one week, one pocketbook was recovered, the owner of another was located, and one woman recovered a lost $10 bill. Newcomers to the city have found it effective in obtaining homes and furnished rooms. Owners of rooms have secured quick results. A kodak lost on Silver Hill was returned the next day after it was advertised last week. And that's the way it goes.

A BOY in Carlinville was "kicked in the feed lot" by the family horse. Suggested that Dobbin be renamed High Cost of Living.

WE'VE SEEN HIM.

Sir: Our idea of a moral coward is the gink that furiously pushes the button on the elevator, looking so fierce the while that one fears for the life of the unfortunate attendant, and who, just before the elevator comes in sight, steps back, mingles with the throng, and changes his look from that of Spartacus the Gladiator to that of Jonas Meek from Meekville.

Still there's time for a merry song
Whatever earth may say.

Colder, colder the great winds blow

No need to ask old Time for alms

When Death shall come he'll find our palms
Warm to his icy touch.

And if we may, we'll sing to him
The sweetest song we know,
And out into the silence dim
Follow where he may go.

Follow where he may go, my own,
Whatever road he take,

ABSTRACTS FROM THE REPORT OF CHICAGO HEALTH DEPARTMENT.

THE Chicago health department has been unusually successful in controlling typhoid fever. The number of persons dying from the disease in 1918 was thirty-five, representing a rate of 1.4, as compared with a rate of 173 in 1891. The number of cases reported was 270. Admitting that there were between 350 and 400 cases among the almost 3,000,000 people, we find that typhoid is now in Chicago a disease of minor importance.

The measures which have brought about this result are protection of the water supply, pasteurization of milk, suppression of flies, having the cases properly nursed, and vaccination.

The drainage canal was opened in 1900. From time to time new intercepting sewers have been built, until now no sewage enters the lake within the boundaries of the city. But even this was not enough. Chlorination of the drinking water began in 1910. It was made complete in 1916.

In the old days, milk borne epidemics of typhoid fever were frequent. In 1908 the first pasteurization ordinance was passed. Since 1916 all milk has been pasteurized.

In the old days there was a stable and an open manure box on thousands of lots. Now there are very few manure boxes and the fly nuisance has been greatly lessened. All cases of typhoid fever are cared for in hospitals, unless there is no likelihood of spreading the disease.

A moderate number of people are vaccinated against typhoid. At the present time typhoid vaccination is done with lipovaccine. One injection is given, no illness is produced, and an immunity lasting two years and often longer is produced.

All of these measures can be employed in towns and on farms—locations which still have a high typhoid rate.

In the armies during the great war they used small appliances for sterilizing less than barrel lots of water. In fact, the market now affords tablets for sterilizing water in two gallon quantities. Sterilization is practicable in lots of three gallons a day, 1,000 gallons, and on up to hundreds of millions of gallons daily. Campers and hunters especially use the tablets, but there is no reason why they should not be used by farmers and people in towns too small to have water works.

Milk can be pasteurized in the home. Some small communities now require their milk dealers to pasteurize.

It is not difficult to learn how to nurse a typhoid patient and dispose of the excreta in a safe manner. All excreta must be covered at once, sterilizing chemicals must be added, and after a certain time—say one hour—the material buried. The hands must be washed frequently. Vaccination can be done by any one who knows how to give a hypodermic.

DIPHTHERIA—In recent years there has been no progress in suppressing diphtheria. The rates were greatly reduced by laboratory diagnosis and the use of antitoxin. But the limit of good they can do was reached several years ago, and we have had to wait for some new procedure to again start the course of improvement. Let no one misinterpret this statement as meaning that diphtheria is as bad as it used to be. The conditions which prevailed prior to 1895 would not be tolerated now.

The new procedures now being applied are the Schick test and vaccination. When diphtheria breaks out in a school or a children's home they make a Schick test on each child. This test shows that about one-half of the children are incapable of catching diphtheria. Such children are allowed to do about as they please. The susceptible children are vaccinated against diphtheria. Diphtheria vaccination causes less trouble than smallpox vaccination. It is still on trial, but in the various cities it has been tried on a few hundred thousand people in the aggregate.

INFANT WELFARE—Prior to 1890 the physicians were busiest in July and August. While some of the sickness was due to diarrhoea among adults, the great bulk of it was due to diarrhoea, summer complaint, dysentery, and cholera infantum among babies.

The record shows that the babies do not get sick as they did in the old days of raw milk. In some sections of the country not many more than thirty babies a year out of each thousand born die in their first year from all causes. The rate for the city at large is not much over a hundred. But this statement is misleading somewhat because there has been an increase of pneumonia among babies. On account of diarrhoea becoming markedly less and pneumonia worse, the record shows that now the latter is the more deadly disease among babies.

The reduction in the death rate from diarrhoea among babies is due to several causes. For one thing, all the milk is pasteurized. As has recently been said, even small cities can have pasteurized milk, and home pasteurization can be done when the market milk has not been treated.

Women know better how to care for babies now. Every health department issues booklets on baby care; the national government gives away excellent treatises. The subject is taught in some schools, and visiting nurses are traveling about in the country, as well as in the cities. Another factor is the reduction in the number of flies. It is only a question of time until the country people will get as active in fly campaigns as the city people now are.

As the summer sickness rate of the babies has fallen, the winter sickness rate has risen. The increase in the pneumonia rate offsets some part of the decrease in the diarrhoea rate. We have not paid much attention to the condition of the air. The next twenty years should see an improvement in the quality of the air we breathe somewhat commensurate with the improvement in food, milk, meat, and water which has come about in the last twenty years.

The pneumonia problem is not limited to babies. The death rate from pneumonia is not declining. On the contrary, it is higher now than it was fifty years ago. Of no other bacterial disease is this statement true.

The health department requires that all cases of lobar pneumonia be registered. The number of cases of pneumonia registered in 1908 was 1,499. The number registered in normal years recently has been about 10,000, although the epidemic of 1918 caused 28,309 cases to be registered in that year. The number of cases in a normal year is not far from 20,000.

The houses from which cases are reported are placarded. The sputum is received in cloths or paper and buried. The laboratory diagnoses the kind of pneumonia bacteria present and the department supplies serum for treatment of proper cases.

As a part of its campaign against pneumonia, the department stopped smoking on the surface and elevated street cars. It had been the custom in Chicago for men to smoke on the front platforms of street cars and in the smoking cars of elevated trains. This space was always badly ventilated and the floor was always covered with spit. The regulations preventing smoking stopped the spitting nuisance, so far as the street cars were concerned, and improved the ventilation of some of the elevated cars.

In its fight against influenza in 1918 the department issued vaccine free. It required that pneumonia and influenza be reported. It did not close saloons, churches, drug stores, or schools or stop the street cars. It did close theaters, dance halls, and other places of amusement for a few days. It was of the opinion that, however effective it might be in the rural districts, or however correct might be the policy in the abstract, so far as the large cities were concerned closing as a means of controlling an epidemic of influenza in a large city is not necessary. The necessary contacts of business and of community life in general in a large city are so many, so varied, and so uncontrollable that nothing is gained by closing the few meeting places which it is feasible to close.

During 1918 the department distributed many thousand doses of vaccine. There were no reports of harm done by it. There were many reports of its efficacy. The department, therefore, plans to again distribute it free this autumn and winter. The vaccine is now put up in oil and vaccination is done in one sitting instead of three—the requirement in 1918.

The law against basement bakeries was passed in 1907. At that time about 1,000 bakeries were operating underground. Many of these had long time leases, and many others could not be hurriedly moved without hardship. The underground bakeries have about disappeared from Chicago. The baking is done in well lighted, sanitary shops, and the demand for the products has increased, as was to have been expected.

Getting well ventilated rooms has proven a very difficult proposition. It was necessary first to settle the question as to what was good ventilation. The building code of 1910 was the first to be passed setting standards of ventilation and congestion of occupation. In 1912 the department organized the first ventilation bureau. The theaters and moving picture places are now well ventilated. The street cars all have ventilation systems in operation. Ventilation of schools, work shops, and business places is gradually being brought about.

WORRIED BY SWOLLEN LEG.

Mrs. T. O. J. writes: "1. Three months ago I gave birth to a baby. On the eighth day of the lying-in period a swelling developed in the left thigh, extending down into the heel. A cough developed at the same time. What might this cough be? Do you think it has any connection with the swelling? I am run down in flesh.

"2. The baby seems to be gaining, being fed every two to two and one-half hours, and to all appearances is feeling well. Lately (two weeks) he has passed water every ten to fifteen minutes. Is it possible the milk from my breast is not good, or that he is ill?"

REPLY.

1. You had milk leg, probably due to an infection of the vein of the leg. It is possible that the same infection was responsible for same condition which developed in your chest. You should have your chest examined.

2. You are feeding your baby too frequently. Feed him at three hour intervals, and once only after 10 at night. Rinse his diapers thoroughly with rain water after washing with soap and water.

TELLS OF BABY'S DIET.

Mrs. J. E. M. writes: "My baby is 4 months old, weighs 11½ pounds and weighed 7¾ at birth. As I could not nurse him I tried cow's milk of different degrees of strength, but none seemed to agree with him. He had colic a great deal. I am now giving him the following: one shredded wheat biscuit soaked for fifteen minutes in one pint of boiling water, then one-half pint of milk, a little sugar and a little lime water are added. Mixture is strained through cheese cloth.

"I feed him every three hours, then give him a little pepsin in warm water after feeding. He does not have colic and has gained a very little in the last month. Will you kindly inform me if he is getting all the elements necessary for his development?"

REPLY.

Your baby is not getting enough milk. Since you are feeding him as you are, I suggest that you add three-quarters pint of milk to the hot biscuit tea instead of one-half pint, and if this continues to agree with him at the end of a week increase to one pint. I think he will do well without the pepsin.

FEARS ATTACK OF NEPHRITIS.

P. A. L. writes: "I have a mitral leak fully compensated. Would this end up finally with nephritis? I am leading a moderate life."

REPLY.

Probably not, assuming that you continue to live right.

WANTS FACTS ON "T. B."

Mrs. J. W. H. writes: "Please tell me where I can obtain information on prevention, treatment, and cure of tuberculosis. I want all the information of any character on this subject that I can get."

REPLY.

Write to your state board of health and to your state tuberculosis society. If you wish to purchase books and take a journal, write to the Journal of Outdoor Life, 381 Fourth avenue, New York City.

CONVERT INSURANCE SOON.

Kansas City, Kas., Sept. 5.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—I, see your paper every day and am wondering if you can settle some insurance questions for me. Please tell me if the term insurance is not converted, does it increase in premium rates each year? Also, if I should wait, say four years, and then convert my insurance to a twenty year endowment policy, would I lose those four years? I mean as far as the twenty year term is concerned? Wouldn't the four years count on the twenty and leave sixteen more to pay? If I convert my insurance to a straight life policy now, at the age of 21, what would be the premium on each $1,000? What would be the premium if I should wait four years and then convert it to a twenty year endowment? That would make me 25. It looks like a losing game if I don't convert it now, doesn't it?
R. S. F.

The premiums on term insurance increase each year. It is certainly advisable to make your conversion as soon as you possibly can, for if you are thinking of taking out a twenty year endowment policy the years you keep your term or annual renewable insurance do not count on the twenty years of the endowment policy.

If you wish an ordinary life policy now your monthly premium rate on each thousand dollars of insurance will be $1.17; on a twenty year endowment at the age of 25 $3.33.

PHYSICAL EXAMINATION NOT NECESSARY.

Chicago, Sept. 8.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—Since leaving the army I have been seriously considering taking up the work I did before entering the service. In that work I was never allowed insurance. I am physically all right, and, if possible, would like to keep up this war risk insurance after converting it. Will my occupation hinder me from holding the insurance, and will I have to take a physical examination? If so, who stands the expense of the examination? What is the monthly and annual premium rate for $10,000 in a twenty year endowment policy? My age is 32.
G. T. L.

Any officer or man who has kept up his premiums may convert his policy irrespective of his physical condition or occupation at the time of conversion. At age 32 the premium on a $10,000 twenty year endowment policy is $33.80 per month or $393.80 annually.

LOCKING THE STABLE DOOR.

Chicago, Sept. 3.—Editor of The Tribune.]—Concerning the mayor's appeal to congress in today's TRIBUNE:

I agree with his honor in all that he says, except that part of his appeal opposing military training. To me it is foolhardy for us to oppose compulsory military training unless we feel sure that the United States will never again go to war, or unless we are of the universal opinion that the United States shall never again go to war (and no true American thinks in terms of "shall never" when his country's honor is in danger. Therefore there is little likelihood that the shall never's will decide).
D. P. C.

MAYBE HIS WORD IS SUFFICIENT.

Chicago, Sept. 4.—[Editor of the Tribune.]—I have just read President Wilson's speech as reported from Columbus, O. Why doesn't he tell us how the league of nations is going to stop war?
A. D. B.

A BULL'S EYE.

Chicago, Sept. 8.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I do not care to stir up any more strife between the rank and file and the officers, as I cannot see that will do any good, but the rank and file were muzzled during their period of service, and now it's their time to howl, and I am in favor of letting them have a place to howl in, and yet not taking either side. I indorse Stanley MacDonald's article in the Tribune, being a very fair and accurate presentation of the facts, without regard to personal grudges. It is a bull's eye.
G. H. M.

A SANE POSITION.

Iowa City, Ia., Sept. 7.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—To any fair minded reader it must appear that THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE is taking a sober, sane, and judicial position respecting the reservations which are proposed to be attached to the league of nations covenant. Surely we do not want to be at the mercy of the "human passion" on which the president lays so much stress. It is the most unreliable thing.
R. G. O.

MORE GENERALS.

Chicago, Sept. 6.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—If congress really wants to know what the people will support with heartfelt applause, a bill should be passed authorizing the president to promote all regular army officers who were given command of combat divisions at the front to the grade of major general in the regular establishment.
GUSTAVUS M. BLAIR.

THE MARNE DRAMA

By Lieut. Kurt Hesse of the German Army

BERLIN, Aug. 7—Two months' search for a really worth while story of how the German soldier at the front felt when he began to realize the war was lost, a written record of his sensations during the period when American troops uptilted the scales, a recital of his emotions the day he first faced the khaki clad ons of the United States, has been rewarded. That reward was the discovery of a seventy page booklet by Lieut. Kurt Hesse of the Fifth Grenadiers, called "The Marne Drama of July 15, 1918." Hesse was at the front four and one-half years, and in that time held nothing but front line jobs. What he writes are his vivid impressions. And he calls the events of July 15 on the Marne—the day American troops stopped the German tide at Chateau Thierry—not the "turning point of the war," but "the climax of the drama." The translation may be rough in spots, but the story is there—the story of what the Americans did to the Germans at Jaulgonne, just above Chateau Thierry, toward Reims. From this point the story is Hesse's.

PARKE BROWN.

"DEMAIN nous marchons à Paris," we said laughingly to the commander of the 3d battalion of the French 3d infantry, which, forced back to the Marne by our attacking grenadiers, was compelled to surrender on the eve of May 30.

"Non, monsieur, à Paris? Jamais! Pensez à 1914! La Marne!"

The French lieutenant-colonel spoke with seriousness and dignity and we respected his pride—and began to think more seriously. But then we rejoiced in the wonderful success of the day! The Marne reached! Within four days we had come from the Chemin des Dames across the Aisne and the Vesle to this famous river. We had had hardly any losses and the enemy, on the contrary, had lost heavily. On to Paris!

That night orders came from the headquarters of the 36th division. We must hold the line we had reached. It was a disappointment, but we didn't know the situation. In the morning at daybreak, when our water carriers went down to the Marne, they were met by well directed fire from the other bank. We were facing an enemy who had no thought of further retreat.

Between us was the Marne, a fast, deep river between sixty and eighty meters wide near Chateau Thierry. The hills on each side are covered with forests, orchards, and vineyards. Standing with my commander on the hills of Chateau Thierry that morning we saw, indeed, a paradise before us. The sun was laughing. A fresh wind blew through the valley. No war here—peace!

There was nothing to be seen of the enemy, but now and then there was a rifle shot as someone exposed himself carelessly.

Then, during the first days of July, men returning from leave told us while we were resting at Fere-en Tardenois that on July 15 we should cross the Marne. And so for days we practiced the attack. And on July 12 we learned details of the operations. Under the orders scouting was limited. Only the commanders of regiments and battalions and a few company commanders were allowed to look over the ground.

My regiment, the 5th grenadiers, was to cross at two places near Jaulgonne on the right of the 36th infantry division, with the 10th division to our right and the 175th infantry on our left. The infantry and machine guns were to cross first on pontoons and later on ferries, while artillery and the trains were to follow when the bridges were ready.

The first orders for the operation were delivered late and I was working over the details when an enlisted man was announced. Excitedly but with restraint he asked whether it was true there were Americans opposite us and that our plans of attack had been betrayed: I calmed him, but began a cautious investigation of what the men thought of the attack. They showed full confidence in their leaders, but nevertheless there was a vague feeling that we wouldn't win. "The infantry has instinct," is an old saying among the veterans of the front.

A MAN of clear vision could foresee failure. The enemy had captured several prisoners, including an officer carrying important documents in violation of orders. Here and there a few men deserted. Contrary to all our previous experience, we did little to conceal our intentions, the ammunition trains, for instance, standing in great numbers on open roads in broad daylight while enemy fliers hovered over them for hours.

We passed two days protected by forests five kilometers from the Marne. We suffered little from shelling. It was raining a little, to be sure, but we had suffered worse.

"On July 15 at 1:10 a. m. the artillery begins firing. At 3:40 the barrage will advance 300 meters. Then the infantry crosses and at 4:50 a. m. it attacks behind the barrage."

Those were the orders. Thank heavens, now we knew what we were to do! Except for trifles the equipment was ready. Some pigeons were missing, the wireless station had gone astray—but the big thing was that all units had their orders in time.

On July 14, shortly after dusk, the infantry was conducted to its stations. They were between 600 and 800 meters from the Marne on the slope toward the river bed, facing the enemy in the middle of the forest. There were no trenches or dugouts, only signboards, and they couldn't be seen at night. And such a dark night I never saw before in my life. In the woods a man couldn't see his hand before his face. The ground was smooth and slippery. We constantly ran into trees. The air was filled with gas and strange sounds as the enemy sent over a few heavy shells.

This lasted for hours and hours. The infantry was late because the march in the darkness took much longer than had been estimated by daylight. The strain on the men was enormous. And when at last they arrived the reports were not pleasing. There already had been some losses. The exhaustion was extreme, some of them were sick and a number had strayed.

What? Isn't it time to start yet? Everyone is drowsy. And then suddenly deafening artillery fire begins. I looked at my watch. It was 1 a. m. Had our artillery made a mistake? Firing wasn't to begin until 1:10. But there were explosions both in front and in back of us. That explained it. It was the enemy who had started firing.

Ten minutes later we started—not in unison as ordered, but now here and now there—but it increased steadily for ten minutes, so that our hopes were revived. Then our fire weakened again and often the enemy's was stronger than our own.

Soon telephone lines both ahead and to the rear were destroyed. It was 3:50 and we had no reports. From the rear they kept pressing us with questions, but we couldn't answer them. It was 4:39 before news came. The left forward attacking battalion of fusileers reported heavy shelling, two companies had been routed completely, and there was grave doubt about the situation. There was no word whether the Marne had been crossed and regimental headquarters sent out scouting patrols and at last came definite reports.

THE 1st battalion on the right had been caught by enemy artillery in the narrow lane leading down to the river. Only parts of it got through. The pioneers have failed. The pontoons are stuck fast 100 meters from the bank. Crossing at this point is impossible, as strong enemy infantry with numerous machine guns is tenaciously defending the other bank. On the left things look a little better. The fusileer battalion has reached the river with two companies and is crossing. A big part of the 2d battalion which was to have followed in reserve already has crossed and holds the railroad about 600 meters south of the river. But the attack gains no further ground. Strong enemy forces block it.

That is the first picture. The infantry in the great Jaulgonne forest, where the undergrowth is so thick one can hardly force his way through, but where there is scarcely a single tree trunk big enough to stop a rifle bullet. The concentrated fire of the enemy artillery pours in. Not a spot escaped. Over here the steady shelling of a heavy battery. In the depths of the forest the explosions are terrific, unnerving. Over there a clearing is ripped and torn up every five minutes by a light battery and almost immediately becomes a vast crater field. And the narrow lane at the right is covered with heavy shrapnel bursts.

The men run headlong, searching for cover. And then that howling, moaning shell—so hollow sounding! Gas masks on! A minute ago we could scarcely see. Now we can see nothing. Clammy despair seized many men. They felt helpless. The wounded are shrieking. In a hoarse voice the company commander finally shouts an order:

"Fall in! Has every man a rifle?"

Now forward through the narrow lane into which steel is pouring, but it is the only path down to the river. Down a short distance stand the pioneers. Their leader is helpless. He has only a few men left and the infantry lends a hand to carry the pontoons to the river.

A new volley! Every one is running away! Several dead and a wrecked machine gun lie beside the pontoons. But there are other pontoons below! Let's get forward! Anywhere away from here!

THE crossing continues at fair speed. We look at our watches. Great heavens, the barrage has already advanced! Fall in! And the companies get new objectives, entirely different from those planned. The railroad is crossed, Varennes station is taken after a short fight, the Moulins-Varennes road is passed, we are 1,000 meters south of the Marne and start up the south slope of the valley.

From the right there is sharp firing. In the morning fog we see advancing troops—Americans! Every little ways they halt, stand, and fire. Our men run back. The situation is bad. Where are the grenadiers? Their attack must have been stopped. Doesn't the artillery see what's going on? It is still putting down the barrage according to the original orders and it continues to do so until 11 o'clock. Then it is free for other work, but probably it will accomplish nothing, observation is so difficult. Low fog veils the picture, the corn is high, patches of woods and orchards mask movements.

The leaders of the two battalions ahead see it will be dangerous to wait. Everything at hand in the way of a weapon is turned on that enemy at the right. It must be admitted he is not afraid of death. Only when the machine gun fire and the desparate shooting of the infantry reaps a bloody harvest in his ranks does he stop and retreat. In our lines there is a sigh of relief, but everybody knows the truth: Our attack has failed. What we must do is try, with our inferior forces, to hold the position we have won.

The railroad embankment seems suitable for defense. It offers protection, but, on the other hand, it is a good target for the artillery. Therefore, the more advanced units are pulled back, with the open right flank strongly protected. At 11 o'clock we established contact with our forces on the left, but on our right the 6th grenadiers, who crossed the river early, have encountered a stronger enemy force and have been annihilated. A large part of the regiment is led away as prisoners down the Surmelin valley, through which we were supposed to attack.

One of our companies, which by a miracle pierced the enemy's lines, thinks those troops are German forces advancing and goes forward almost among them. Up above enemy batteries are firing unceasingly and down below the American infantry columns are marching. Then the German company is detected and is caught in a difficult position. But it fights bravely and during the night its commander and a few men make their way back to our lines. That was a bright spot for the day, but it was the only one during the operations.

On the afternoon of July 15 we improved our line a bit, as the enemy withdrew slightly along the Marne, fearing, apparently, a double flank attack. But that didn't change the general result of the day; it didn't affect the biggest defeat of the war!

YOU understood it after one glimpse of the north slope of the Marne valley. Never have I seen so many dead; never such terrible pictures of a battle. The Americans on the other bank shot two of our companies to pieces. Lying hidden in a corn field, they let our men approach to within between thirty and fifty paces and then shot them down. This enemy had courage, it had to be admitted, but he also displayed savagery.

"The Americans slaughter every one!" was the cry of terror of July, which for a long time had its effect on our men.

At home they were laughing at the inadequate training of this enemy, at the American "bluff," and at other things. That we lost more than 60 per cent dead and wounded of the men who went into the battle on July 15 was due mostly to him.

Unhappily our hope that perhaps we might be more successful on other parts of the front was disappointed.

Of course there were the usual rumors—"Reims taken," "The Bavarian division on our left has pierced through a distance of fifteen kilometers"—but alas, none of them was true. Everywhere it was the same picture—a death defying attack, terrible losses, and no remarkable success anywhere.

On the Marne front we had formed a long narrow bridgehead. It was to be expected that the strongest sort of attacks would be directed against it. We prepared ourselves, but had little hope of holding it for long.

On July 17 the first attacks began. They were repulsed. On July 18 the attacks were more violent and tanks were used. But they were stopped. And that day we greeted the order, "The front will be withdrawn behind the Marne," as our salvation. That night we withdrew. The bridges were under fire and one had been destroyed. But still we came out fairly well. At least the enemy didn't detect the movement and our patrols succeeded in holding their places on the south bank and then retiring safely.

We hoped for a rest. Such a day as July 15 shows its effect on body and nerves for weeks. Our ranks had grown thin. Melancholy thoughts had taken possession of most of us. Such a lot of comrades we had left on the other bank! We couldn't even bury them all. Each man had the feeling it would be his turn next.

Then came this report: "Things are going badly on our right. The enemy has attacked in strength out of the forest of Villers-Cotterets and has advanced fifteen kilometers the first day. We must retreat."

We gritted our teeth, but even before we received the details officially we knew it was true.

And the same troops which had just suffered so heavily were ordered to make the final sacrifice, to hurl themselves against the overwhelming attack. They did it quietly—sacrificed the rest of their veterans of 1914—and preserved their honor.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

by Fanny Butcher

Last week's best sellers in a leading book store were:

FICTION.

"Mary Oliver" [Macmillan], by May St. Clair.
"The Lion's Mouth" [Doubleday-Page], by C. N. and A. M. Williamson.
"Dangerous Days" [Doran], by Mary Roberts Rinehart.
"Moon and Sixpence" [Doran], by W. Somerset Maugham.
"The Old Madhouse" [Holt], by William De Morgan.
"The Passionate Pilgrim" [Bobbs-Merrill], by Samuel Merwin.

NONFICTION.

"Belgium" [Appleton], by Brand Whitlock.
"Joyce Kilmer's Poems, Essays, and Letters" [Doran], by Robert Cortes Holliday.
"The Iron Hunter" [Macmillan], by Chase S. Osborn.

"MARY OLIVIER," by May Sinclair [MacMillan], is the most epochal of all the books which have made this year another golden age of novels. It is the full blown flower of a great movement, an essence of all the rare fragrances which have made of the urges of modern poetry and prose something almost tangible enough to be drunk deep through physical nostrils. Impressions are no longer fleeting pictures, mazes of sound and sight and fragrance. They have been imprisoned in words—in poetry, a little of it so lovely as to blind the eyes of mortals, some of it—naturally—but the incoherent babblings of gropers after that light. Some of the modern free verse is vibrant with the freedom of the glad things of the universe—most of it is sheer twaddle.

When an impressionist's heart really beats with the heart of the essence of all things, he enmeshes truth. There have been a few poets who did it. James Joyce did it in a measure in "Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man." But his book was as the bud is to the flower compared with "Mary Olivier." May Sinclair has proved herself a poet, a winged creature herself, in this book. It is James Joyce raised to that intangible nth power. It is the poetry of the vers librists, impressionists, the symbolists, all of the gropers after beauty stripped of words, sublimated into impressions.

It is not like any novel that has ever been written—except "A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man," which was unlike anything that had ever been done, and yet there is nothing ultra-normal about it, nothing strange. It seems the most normal way in the world of writing the story of a woman's life. You may think it "queer"—you probably will, and you will probably decide that you'll put it down, stop in the middle, anywhere, it matters not, every page is the same, and yet through the whirr and maze of impressions you are blindly holding out your hand, as Mary is, for the answer to it all. "The Great Hunger," that wondrous tale of the search of a man for God, happiness, or whatever one chooses to call it, might have walked hand in hand with "Mary Olivier."

The Zionist movement is the subject of two volumes of importance. "History of Zionism, 1600-1918," by Nahun Sokolow, has had added to it the concluding second volume with an introduction by M. Pichon, French minister for foreign affairs. The first volume bears an introduction by the Right Hon. A. J. Balfour, M. P. And Dr. Morris Jastrow has written "Zionism and the Future of Palestine" [Macmillan] as a non-Zionist, who is in sympathy with the effort to establish Jewish colonies in Palestine, but who opposes the reorganization of Palestine as a Jewish state.

"Gone West" [Knopf] is the latest but probably not the last word on the future life. It is the message of a civil war veteran, a doctor, who, dead before the great war started, took an active part in caring for the wounded and dying. He pleads for the "boys" who yearn to communicate with their loved ones, pleads with those who are still alive to make that communication possible. Heaven hasn't harps and streets of gold, he says. It's just like the earth, "just a world of beautiful fields and forests, streams and lakes as you have." If anybody can get comfort from "Gone West" he may have my copy.

In Orange county, New York, the overseas method of library service is being used among the farmers on the R. F. D. routes. Books are delivered and returned by parcel post, as they were in the A. E. F. The system has proved so satisfactory that its success is being used as a basis for a demand for the revision downward of the parcel post rate on books. It is unfair that books should have an almost prohibitively high parcel post rate when magazines, some of them weighing quite as much as a book, should go for a fraction of the rate.

Word—belated word—comes from London of the death of Mrs. William De Morgan, widow of the famous novelist who died about a year ago. Henry Holt & Co. have had on their lists for a year "The Old Madhouse," one of the novels which Mrs. De Morgan completed after her husband's death. But a time of paper drought is no time to publish such lengthy novels. Mrs. De Morgan also finished "The Old Man's Youth and the Young Man's Old Age." Neither of the novels has yet been printed in England on account of economic conditions which, of course, accounts for their not appearing here.

Seeing "La Bodega" [Dutton], the new Blasco Ibanez novel, newly translated and published here, but written sixteen years ago, which gives aid and comfort to the enemies of our present state of drought, reminds me that a Spanish friend of mine, who is likewise a most literate person in the French language, says that of all Spanish writers Blasco Ibanez is the most French; that his original Spanish sounds like a translation from the French. Since my Spanish is confined to adios and a few choice and bombastic sounds which I fondly believe to be impressive expletives, I can't say whether or not the Spaniard is deeply and perhaps unconsciously influenced by his interest in the language and literature of France. He certainly must like Paris, since he elects to live there. By the way, he is coming to the United States soon to make his acquaintance with the Americas complete. He knows South America well, as we all know.

"Roosevelt" [Jackson Press] is the first literary flare since the war of that ardent kulturist, George Sylvester Viereck. It purports to be a psycho-analysis of Theodore Roosevelt. It is, in fact, a violent upholding of the ways of German propaganda, a scurrilous indictment of the propaganda furthered by the English, and an apologia pro vita sua bound up with a paper on the great president. Some big publishers demanded that the advertisements of the book be taken out of the Publishers' Weekly and many booksellers whose suspicions of Germany did not automatically cease on the day peace was declared are refusing to sell the book.

Harold McGrath has just sold the movie rights to "The Yellow Typhoon," his newest novel, not yet published, for the insignificant sum of $30,000. He ought to call it the "Golden Shower."

"A Year in the Navy" [Houghton-Mifflin], by Joseph Husband, is interesting to middle westerners not only because we, as a section, took the navy to our hearts, not only because there are few books of life in the American navy, but because Mr. Husband spent his months of training at that spot dear to Chicagoans, "Great Lakes." He may—he probably was—one of those nice looking sailors you had for dinner one Sunday, one of those fresh (looking, not acting) gobs you danced with so vigorously every Saturday evening.

No, G. C., "Leonard Merrick" isn't the entertaining and charming gentleman's real name; or, rather, it wasn't, but it is now. At the age of 21, when he finally managed to get on the stage for a brief career, he changed his real name of Leonard Miller to Leonard Merrick. Merrick is now his own name by legal process.

A new novel by Lucas Malet is promised for fall by Dodd, Mead & Co. "Deadham Hard: a Romance," it is to be called. It is the first novel for several years from the gifted daughter of Charles Kingsley. In private life Lucas Malet is Mrs. Mary St. Leger Harrison.

"From Mud to Mufti" is the title of the fall Bruce Bairnsfather book. It is, like "Bullets and Billets," a record of the cartoonist's experiences. As for me, I like him better when he writes captions under his pictures than when he tries to "write." As Rupert Hughes so patly says: "You can't have everything."

ETERNITY and the TOWN PUMP

by James Gibbons Huneker

AFTER a strenuous summer it would not be a disagreeable idea to rest a bit and gossip about Eternity and the Town Pump. Let us begin with the good old pump, ever the symbol of prohibition, cleanliness, and local scandal. I am the happy recipient of the life story of John McCormack, transcribed by my colleague, Pierre V. R. Key.

It must have been a difficult job to achieve such smoothness in narration and maintain harmony. Mind you, the Only John (the Irish Jean) tells his own story, interprets the various happenings in his comparatively brief and crowded brilliant career. You hear his voice throughout, yet you feel the shaping hand—a tactful hand—of Pierre Key. I should say, after one swift reading, a happy collaboration. A subtitle might have been "or The Broth of a Boy from Athlone." John McCormack is foremost among the musical "best sellers" of his generation. In my youth they were Ole Bull, Adelina Patti, Nilsson, Joseffy. Then, followed Max Alvary, the De Reszke brothers, Lilli Lehman, and Paderewski, Caruso, Fritz Kreisler, Elman, Heifetz, Josef Hofmann, Galli-Curci, and McCormack. If he had dropped the "Mc" he wouldn't sing Irish ballads the way he does.

Now, I am never concerned with the box office receipts. Full many a charlatan sails to glory and the land of the multimillionaire, and you puzzle over the reason. But McCormack is not only a "best seller"; he is, mirabile dictu, a serious artist who can sing an old Celtic melody and melt the heart in your bosom and then sing Mozart and Handel with captivating art. No wonder Pierre Key found a congenial task in the preparation of this big volume.

Jules Bois needs no introduction to our reading public. A poet, mystic, dramatist, and novelist, he is known the country over as a charming conferencier. During the war he became a notable factor here in the propaganda of French culture. He is now in California recuperating. Judge of his astonishment when he read in the cabled news from London of the success at Covent Garden of his opera book, "Naïl," set to music by the industrious Isadore De Lara. But no mention of the librettist, although he is a distinguished man. Only last month I commented upon the unhappy position of the librettist. Apparently Mr. De Lara forgot that he had a splendid book in "Naïl," one, I am tempted to add, that demanded more original music than his. We took De Lara's measure here [New York] years ago in his "Messalina" at the Metropolitan Opera house. "Naïl" was produced at the Théâtre de la Gaîté, Paris.

I assure you the book is not only of literary value, but rich in dramatic possibilities; not to mention the exotic coloring and atmosphere. Jules Bois has been represented at the Odéon by his "Hippolyte couronné," and at the Comédie Française by his "La Furie." As a novelist his "Le Vaisseau des Caresses" might very well be translated. It is realistic or nothing. He has also written, and in English, a novel, "The Splendor of Sacrifice," which deals with certain phases of the war spirit, chiefly in America, a book charged with the loftiest idealism. I remember in 1896 Joris-Karl Huysmans saying to me: "Read Jules Bois. Read his 'Satan and Satanism.'" I still have this quaint study of diabolism with the signature of Huysmans—who wrote for it an introduction. The devil is not dead, was his contention, and hardly two decades had passed when 1914 and its apotheosis of the diabolical confirmed the prophecy of the great French writer.

OUT of the hodge-podge which I call my life I have had to distill some sort of philosophy. Not a philosophy of iron certitudes. I have never been an agnostic. I have always believed in something, somewhere, somewhen—as Emerson would say; in fact, I believe in everything. I am a Yes-Sayer to life. Any extravagance but the denial of reality. The "vicar of hell" is he who teaches the negation of things. Man is a vertical animal. But he is also mobile, an animal that adapts; because of his more numerous aptitudes he is differentiated from his fellow animals. His "fall" occurred when he went on all fours and worshiped ignoble sticks and stones as true gods. The gesture was well meant, but the attitude undignified. It was a throwback to the anthropoids; it savored of a return to our primal animalism. Nevertheless, it is better to be a polytheist than an atheist.

The gods are ever moving through the heavens to remoter constellations. Nothing endures but mobility, changeless change. Yet we dare speak of stability, personal immortality, the absolute, when nature abhors an absolute. Relativity rules. Monism and Pluralism are different names for the same thing. The optical apparatus of the humble housefly mirrors more worlds than does the human eye. The Eternal Return is Now; it is the Eternal Recommencement. Hope of future life is the aura of young, healthy cellular tissue. The sap mounts. The call of the cells. Love is cell-hunger. Youth alone is immortal. Youth is always right. As Cabanis, the materialistic philosopher, puts it, man is a digestive tube pierced at both ends. With advancing decay, the fires of the future pale, then burn out. But we must believe; the very act of affirmation puts courage into our marrow.

Plato called Time "a moving image of eternity," believing that the gods were unable to make the earth eternal. To each man his mysticism. Everything that is to be has already happened; the tiny segment of the curve of events that we call the present is not the best vantage point from which to grasp the mighty wheel of life. Even the norm of our existence may not have been the norm in ages past. As Ibsen suggested, perhaps two and two make five on the planet Jupiter. Our reason is the crystallization of ancient experiences. The constancy of the human intellect proclaimed by Remy de Gourmont may be one more metaphysical illusion. Historical perspective is too limited to permit any but generalizations on the theme. As for fatalism, what else are those who write of free-will or immanence but fatalists? If the exterior world is a mirage of our inner self, then the lack of continuity, the fragmentary attempts at disjoined thinking without sequence or import, are not all these natural for the reason that they exist?

The queer being that peers at us over the back wall of our consciousness, our phantom twin, our true self, the wanderer and his shadow, the old man of the sea, Sinbad's burden, Frankenstein's monster, our subliminal consciousness—what is this mocking devil doing there, sneering at our worldly pretenses, and laughing when we fall and skin our mean little souls? Is he Brother Death? We only know that we carry this unwelcome companion from the cradle to the coffin. We appease him with our heart's blood, with flimsy lies, and for a time succeed in stifling his importunate, accusing voice. What if our neighbors should overhear him scolding us in the reaches of the night—that night of the soul so thrillingly described by St. John of the Cross? What a scandal that would be! Every human has his Horla.

MOST men and women are disappointed with life, which they believe has played them a scurvy trick. And it has. Its chief function is first to illude, then disappoint our false hopes. The majority die of spiritual arterio-sclerosis, resulting from too high blood pressure caused by vain imaginings. Your doctor detects the danger with his sphygmograph, your spiritual director used another sphygmograph, examination of conscience. It is efficacious. The chief thing it shows you is that life, at first a feast planned by the mighty Barmecide host, later proves to be a succession of appearances; his guests never taste essences, only yearn for them from afar. Our five senses abet life and play the immortal game to perfection. The efferent nerves carry from our centers a filament message to the exterior world; our afferent nerves convey back to us the world's message. We are, literally, imprisoned for life, with the privilege of telephoning our cerebral "central," asking it to phone us the news of outer existence.

It is the greatest fairy tale imaginable, our life. But it is not free—O, no! In a physical sense we are the grandchildren of vegetables, which live by solar heat; and the so-called lower animals—query: Why lower? Like them we, too, are automatons, ruled by the same rigid laws of determinism; we borrow our vitality from the vegetable and animal kingdoms, and thus we are nourished by a triple distilled solar energy. Nature does not always seem coherent, and Prof. de Vries, the great Dutch author of the transmutation theory, showed me, when I visited in 1912 his garden at Amsterdam, that nature creates by leaps as well as in orderly succession. This philosopher-physicist actually produced new flower species over night.

Our nervous system is the whole animal. And these nerves may be so finely spun, so subtly responsive, as to receive messages from the Fourth Dimension of Space—wherever that lovely land is located. Henri Bergson asserts that life is a division, a dissociation, not association, not an addition of elements. And at the end the peasant knows as much as the philosopher. But the philosopher doesn't believe this.

Personal liberty is a chimera. To be sure, man is born with a skin, not with a carapace like the tortoise; nor is he unwieldy as is the elephant. He is the lord of the soil, but only for a certain period. Napoleon, the superman of the moderns, declared that "Liberty is the necessity of a small and privileged class endowed by nature with faculties higher than those of the mass of mankind; it may, therefore, be abridged with impunity. Equality, on the contrary, pleases the multitude." Of fraternity he said nothing, probably because there was nothing to say, even though we call it by such a high sounding name as altruism. Fraternity is like an ornamental banner that hangs outside in fine weather; when it rains it is quickly folded and brought indoors. It usually rains in the land of fraternity. I began my "dark saying on the harp," and I fear it is ending in obscurity, in a Celtic twilight. What am I trying to prove? Nothing. In life nothing can be proved except disillusion, and that formidable monster, ennui, may be escaped by study. And by the same token, anything may be proved, even the victory of Zeno's Tortoise over the swifter paced Acilles. The sea lives without the approval of man, collaborating only with the wind. But we live by a parallel of our sensations, so we wonder when time and tide are not propitious.

MAETERLINCK asks: "Are you of those who name or only repeat names?" I fear that I am one of the repeaters. No man is a hero to his wife, and I think that no writer should be a hero to his readers. It is an impressive pose—that of omniscience, or of lofty morals; but a whited sepulchre is soon peeled of its whitewash. If a critic can't be human, then let him become a pedicure or a bugologist. Neither praise nor blame should be the goal of the critic; to spill his own soul should be his aim; notwithstanding the talk about objective criticism, no such abstraction can be put into concrete practice. A critic reveals his prejudices. It is well to possess prejudices. Eclectic is my taste in creeds and cultures. And in cultured eclecticism may be found the depths and shallows, defects and virtues of our times. I am the child of my century, and can echo Mallarmé's exclamation: "Hélas! J'ai lu tous les livres." But I have set my feet on the trail of Bohemia, the fabulous "seacoast" that lures all men. You may be as prudish as an oyster, as sober as a judge (naturally, a judge who doesn't drink), but you shall not escape a touch of lunar folly. My moonshine came from the Seven Arts; they are indigenous to Bohemia.

Having ranged from Eternity to the Town Pump, let me conclude by saying that without hope it is impossible to achieve the hopeless. And the hopeless is the only thing worth achieving in our too obvious existence. I believe that every one who has sung a song of hope has had his wish answered, indeed, as William James has said, no prayer is ever unanswered. But this is the secret of Pulcinella.

Chicago Divinity Schools Now Open for Year's Work

IN THE next few weeks all the theological seminaries in Chicago will have started their year's work. Some opened the first week in September, several open during the coming week and a few do not begin until October.

The Cathedral Theological school (Roman Catholic) opened in the new Quigley Memorial building, Rush and Pearson streets, Sept. 1. Three new professors were added this year—the Rev. James Halleran, the Rev. Robert McGuire and the Rev. Stanislaus Bona.

Garrett Biblical institute (Methodist), connected with the Northwestern university at Evanston, opened two weeks ago with an unusally large enrollment.

McCormick Theological seminary (Presbyterian), Halsted street and Fullerton avenue, holds its opening service next Tuesday morning at 10:30 o'clock. The Rev. Prof. Cleland B. McAfee will deliver the address. New professors this year are the Rev. J. H. Boyd, D. D., homiletics and practical theology, who comes from a large church in Portland, Ore., and the Rev. Prof. John A. MacIntosh, philosophy of religion.

Union Theological seminary (Congregational), Ashland and Washington boulevard, will open Sept. 30 with two new professors, the Rev. Dr. P. D. A. Leavitt and the Rev. Hjalmar Salmi.

The divinity school of the University of Chicago (Baptist) opened when the fall term of the university began, the first week in September.

Western Theological seminary (Episcopal), 2720 Washington boulevard, will open next Wednesday with the largest entering class in several years.

The seminary of the United Evangelical church does not start its sessions until Oct. 5. It is located in Maywood.

The Rev. Harold L. Reader of Webster Grove, Mo., who served twenty-two months in France as chaplain of the 110th Engineers, will be the supply at the new First Baptist church, Drexel boulevard and Ellis avenue today and next Sunday. The new building, which was purchased from the Plymouth Congregational church, was used for the first time last Sunday.

The Rev. Phillip Andreen, D. D., pastor of the Olavus Petri Lutheran church, Ainslie and Sawyer avenues, will deliver an illustrated lecture, "A Summer in Sweden," in the church on Thursday evening. Next Sunday the Luther league will take charge of the services, when the first annual reunion of the members of the church will be held. The afternoon service will be addressed by the Rev. Peter Peterson, D. D., of the Augustana Illinois conference. The church congregation was formed two and a half years ago.

The Rev. Llewellyn B. Hastings is the rector of St. Alban's school for boys, which opens in its new home at Sycamore, Ill., Sept. 15, having moved during the summer from Knoxville, Ill.

Fr. Hastings is a graduate of the University of the South (Sewanee, Tenn.) and received his theological training at Western Theological seminary, Chicago. He was ordained to the priesthood by the late Bishop Grafton in 1909. During his seminary course he was on the staff of the Cathedral of SS. Peter and Paul with duties at Lawrence hall, a boys' home.

After his ordination he became rector of St. James church, Manitowoc, Wis., later accepting a call to St. John's church, Elkhart, Ind. In 1910 he was appointed rector of St. Alban's school, succeeding the Rev. Charles W. Leffingwell, D. D., who founded it in 1889. Under his direction it has steadily grown and improved to the extent that its graduates are accepted without examination by standard universities and colleges.

The school now occupies the buildings of Waterman hall for girls, which was closed last year. Boys of 12 and over are accepted as far as the capacity of the school will allow. The faculty is made up of three clergymen and five laymen. The bishops of Chicago are on the board of visitors. "Every boy recites every lesson every day." is the motto of the school. Special emphasis is placed upon habits of obedience, promptness, cleanliness, and self-reliance.

The Garfield Park district of the Chicago Church federation will hold meetings at the Sears-Roebuck Y. M. C. A., Kedzie avenue and Arthington street, next Tuesday to discuss problems in connection with the year's work. The first conference will be held at 9:30 a. m. The subject: "What shall the church seek to accomplish in the ensuing season?" will be discussed in its various phases by the Revs. S. A. McCullom, B. D. Kearns, Austin Hunter, F. A. Hosmer, and A. T. Stephenson. The Rev. J. A. Jenkins will speak on "The Pastor and Post-war Problems," and the Rev. H. T. Williams on "The Timely Message of the Church to Men." Supper will be served at 6:30 p. m., followed by further program. The Rev. F. A. Hosmer is president of the district federation.

The Rev. L. G. Engelstad will be installed today as pastor of the Bethel Lutheran church, Humboldt boulevard and Dickens street. The former pastor, the Rev. C. E. Tiller, will take part in the service, which is to be held at 10:30 a. m.

Today will be observed as "a memorial service to our soldiers" by the Wesley Methodist church, 2231 North Halsted street.

AMERICAN EXPRESS
Travel Department
Announces Its First European Tour
since the beginning of the war, to FRANCE—BELGIUM—ITALY and the Battlefields of Europe
Sailing from New York via the palatial Cunard Steamer
MAURETANIA, OCTOBER 2nd

The Ban on European Travel for Pleasure Is Off. The Government announces the issuing of passports to France, Belgium and Italy after September 15th. Applications may be made now. Americans have eagerly awaited this definite official assurance. Looking forward to this time, our Travel Department, including its experienced travel managers in our offices throughout Europe, has been preparing to serve tourists in our way—"The American Way"—the way with the personal service and attention to details which Americans expect when they travel.

The Mauretania Party will be limited in number. Lieutenant Geo. Whiting Seaton of the Visitors' Bureau of the American Expeditionary Forces in France, and who personally conducted official Congressional parties to the battlefields during the war, is a member of our staff and will be in charge of the parties while visiting the battlefields.

The Itinerary Includes Cherbourg, Paris, the Marne, Rheims, Chateau-Thierry, Belleau Woods, Verdun, St. Mihiel, the Argonne, Brussels, Antwerp, Louvain, Ypres, the Hindenburg Line, Bruges, Ghent, Zeebrugge, Ostend, Montreux, Geneva, Marseilles, Nice, Monte Carlo, Corniche Drive, Genoa, Rome, Naples, Florence, Venice, Milan, and return to Paris.

Hotel Service—Conditions are now reasonably satisfactory throughout the route covered and the best hotel service afforded is assured.

Railway Service—Invariably this will be first class.

Automobile Service—Seven-passenger touring cars will be used extensively on all side trips.

Airplane Service—In keeping with the spirit of the times, and of the American Express Travel Department, excursions by airplane over the battlefields will be included. Alternative arrangements will be available for those who prefer them.

"The American Way" offers tourists the results of world-wide travel experience. "The American Way" is backed by one of the oldest, largest and most responsible organizations in the world, The American Express Company. Its record of service to Americans in Europe at the outbreak of the war is gratefully remembered by thousands. Its war assistance to the American Expeditionary Forces and to the various organizations engaged in war activities is well known. It was the official carrier of money and parcels to British prisoners of war in Germany. Its Travelers' Cheques are currency the world over.

The Battle Trails of our glorious American boys are fresh today. Trenches, dugouts, machine-gun nests, battered cities, scarred fields, clusters of white crosses—all the implements and results of war are just as they left them victorious. Tomorrow the visible evidences of the great conflict will have disappeared.

Write at once for booklet of details, information, prices, etc. If you expect to visit the battlefields of Belgium and France either this winter or next spring, plan now. We shall provide for you in the order of application.

Next European Tour Sails—October 29th.

American Express Travel Bookings are already numerous for personally conducted tours this winter to the West Indies, South America, China and Japan.

The Rev. Emerson O. Houser will be installed as pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Lake View on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. The Rev. E. D. Kearns, moderator of the Chicago presbytery, will preside and conduct the services, and the Rev. Prof. Cleland B. McAfee of McCormick Theological seminary, will preach the sermon.

When Cardinal Mercier comes to Chicago as the guest of Archbishop Mundelein late in October he will be greeted by a large chorus made up of selected members of the choirs from all the Roman Catholic churches in Chicago. Rehearsals will begin this week at a convenient place down town. An appeal has been issued for candidates for this chorus to send in their names at once to the Rev. J. Edgar Bourget, diocesan director of church music, Cathedral of the Holy Name rectory, 30 East Superior street.

The installation service of the Rev. Earnest Bourner Allen, D. D., as pastor of the Pilgrim Congregational church, Oak Park, will take place on Friday. In the afternoon at 2 o'clock a preliminary fellowship meeting will be held, at which there will be several speakers, including the Rev. R. W. Gammon, district secretary of the Congregational Educational society; the Rev. A. H. Armstrong, D. D., executive secretary of the Interchurch federation, St. Louis, Mo., and the Rev. Nicholas Van der Puyl of Oberlin, O., special agent, department of labor. The installation service will be held at 8 p. m., the sermon being delivered by the Rev. G. Glen Atkins, D. D., of Detroit, Mich. The Rev. C. T. Brown, Caspar Wistar Hiatt, Osora S. Davis, and W. E. Barton will also take parts of the ritual.

Chicagoans who summer in South Haven, Mich., and those interested in the summer camp of the Girls' Friendly society which has its summer camp, Holiday House, there, will be interested in the consecration of the new church building of the Church of the Epiphany (Episcopal) there, which takes place next Wednesday morning. The Rt. Rev. John N. McCormick, bishop of western Michigan, will consecrate the building. A number of clergy of Michigan and from Chicago will be present. The Rev. Kenneth Ives is rector of the parish.

The sixty-third annual convention of the National Federation of German-American Roman Catholics will be held in St. Martin's church, Princeton avenue and West Fifty-ninth street, beginning today and lasting until Tuesday evening. Archbishop Mundelein will read an important message from the [illegible] at the Sunday evening service. The following program has been outlined:

The Rev. W. A. Murphy has been appointed pastor of the new Italian Roman Catholic church, which occupies the building formerly used by a Methodist church at De Kalb and Leavitt streets. It will be called St. Callixtus church, and will be dedicated next month by Archbishop Mundelein. The first services were held last Sunday.

Father Murphy is a native Chicagoan, but received most of his education in Italy, and so is well qualified to be the pastor of Italian people. He graduated from St. Ignatius college and completed his theological courses in the American college in Rome. He served as assistant in St. Thomas Aquinas parish, where he organized the Stayms club, a notable organization for young men. In 1917 he was appointed Knights of Columbus chaplain at Great Lakes Naval Training station.

The Sheridan Road Swedenborgean church resumes regular services today. Mrs. Munger's Friday noon classes will begin Oct. 3. The Kenwood and Humboldt Park parishes began services last Sunday.

An unique service in connection with the twenty-second Zionist convention now in session will be held this evening at Herzl school. Classical Hebrew will be used in all the proceedings. Prof. Israel Frielander of the Geological seminary of New York will speak (in classical Hebrew) on "Hebrew Culture." There will be other addresses.

The Young Judea organization, which consists of over 50,000 young men and women who are affiliated with the Zionist movement, will hold a special session of the leaders and delegates tonight in the ballroom of the Auditorium hotel. Of the 1,500 delegates who attend the convention of the Zionists at least 300 are Young Judea workers and leaders.

The session will be called to order by Emanuel Neumann, the educational director of the Zionist organization. An address of welcome to the visiting delegates will be made by one of the Chicago Young Judeans. Miss Henrietta Szold, secretary of education, will be the principal speaker.

The new Roman Catholic church at McHenry, Ill., will be dedicated today by the Rt. Rev. P. J. Muldoon, D. D., bishop of the Rockford diocese. The former structure was destroyed by fire two years ago, since when services were held in St. Patrick's church. The Rev. Edward Berthold is pastor of St. Mary's church.

The topic in many pulpits today will be "The American Constitution." The churches have been asked to observe this Sunday in connection with the nation-wide observance of Constitution day, Sept. 17, the one hundred and thirty-seventh birthday of the constitution. Those who are furthering this observance feel that the proper understanding of the basic principles of our government will do much to readjust the present differences in our social and political structure.

Boyd Shorthand

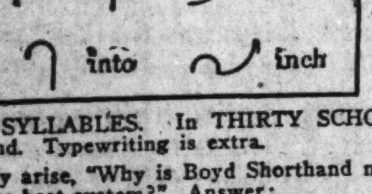
Logical, Scientific and Complete



Applies to All Words, Common or Technical

Signs represent SYLLABLES. In THIRTY SCHOOL DAYS you graduate in shorthand. Typewriting is extra.

The question may arise, "Why is Boyd Shorthand not taught in all schools, since it is the best system?" Answer:

Boyd Shorthand has been promoted for only fifteen years, and is now taught in all the principal cities. High Schools and reliable Business Colleges are adopting the system as rapidly as arrangements can be made. No other business has grown so extensively in so short a time. Publishers of the old line system derive a revenue from their books and will promote their system as long as anyone will study it. They claim the longer the time, the more profit to the school on a monthly tuition. They have been at it so long they are set, and oppose any advance, though sixty per cent of their pupils are failures and drop out after the first month or so, because of the complex system. In Boyd Shorthand only three per cent do not complete the course, for reasons not in any way connected with the shorthand system.

Education is the most important thing in life. We prove to you that Boyd Shorthand is the right system for you to study. Our textbooks are standard, and every facility in instruction and accommodation is at your disposal. Catalog on request.

Why They Laugh in Vaudeville.

RIALTO.

Burchart and Roberts:

"How are you feeling?"

"I have the chills."

"So have I."

"Shake. How did you get your chills?"

"While walking along the beach last Sunday a robber pointed a pistol at me."

"How could that give you chills?"

"Because I had nothing on but a bathing suit."

"Yes, but didn't you just say the robber kept you covered with his pistol?"

"You talk like a squirrel." [Walks a few steps away and comedian follows him.] "What are you following me for."

"A squirrel always is after a nut."

"Stop personalities with me and tell me is it true that you're working for John D. Rockefeller?"

"Not any more. He said something I didn't like, so I quit."

"What did he say to you?"

"Get out of here!"

"Is it a fact that Rockefeller talks to himself when he's alone."

"I don't know. I never was with him when he was alone."

"Have you any other job in view?"

"I'm in hopes of getting on the police force."

"I'll see if you know anything of the duties of a policeman. Suppose you were ordered to disperse a mob, what would you do?"

"I'd pass around the hat."

"Do you mean to say passing around the hat will scatter a mob?"

"So Billy Sunday tells me."

"Tell me one thing, when I see you in a full dress suit, how is it you never wear a watch?"

"Because I never have both out at the same time."

"Nowadays it takes a smooth man to get on top."

"Yes, and he's smooth on top by the time he gets there."

Among Us Mortals

Summer Cottagers

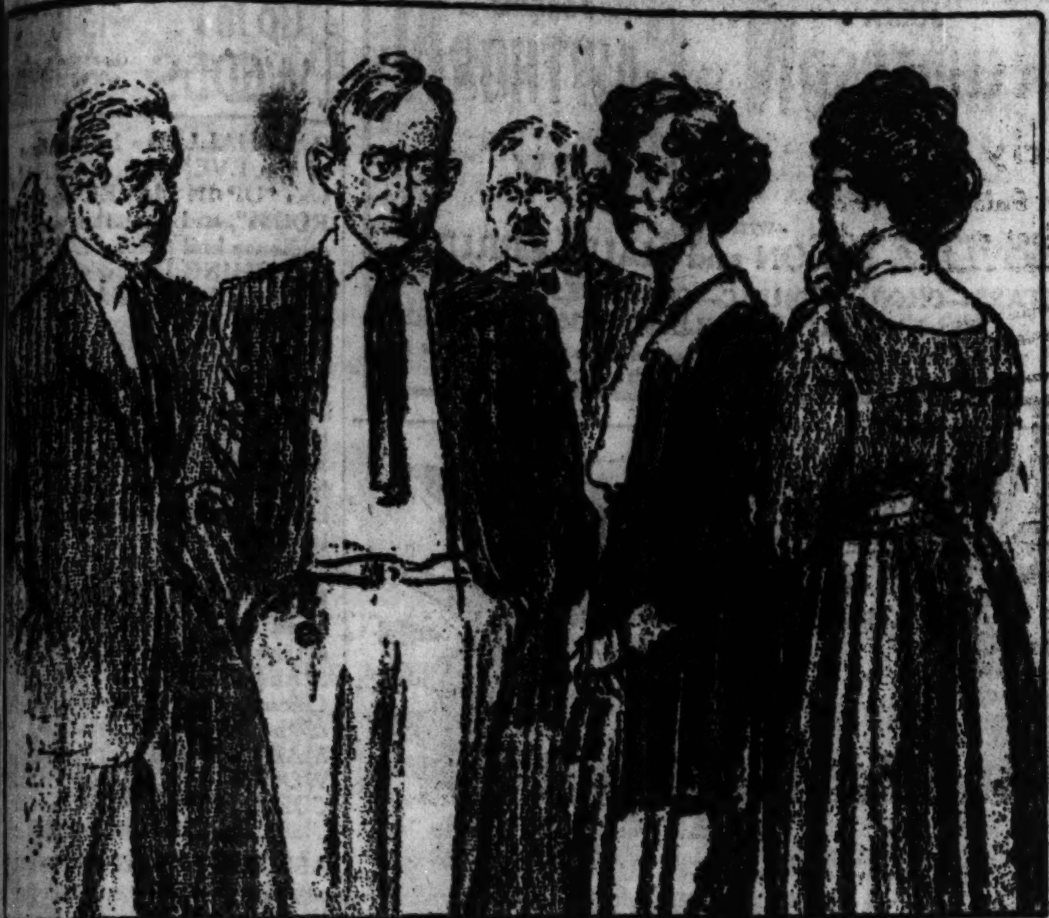
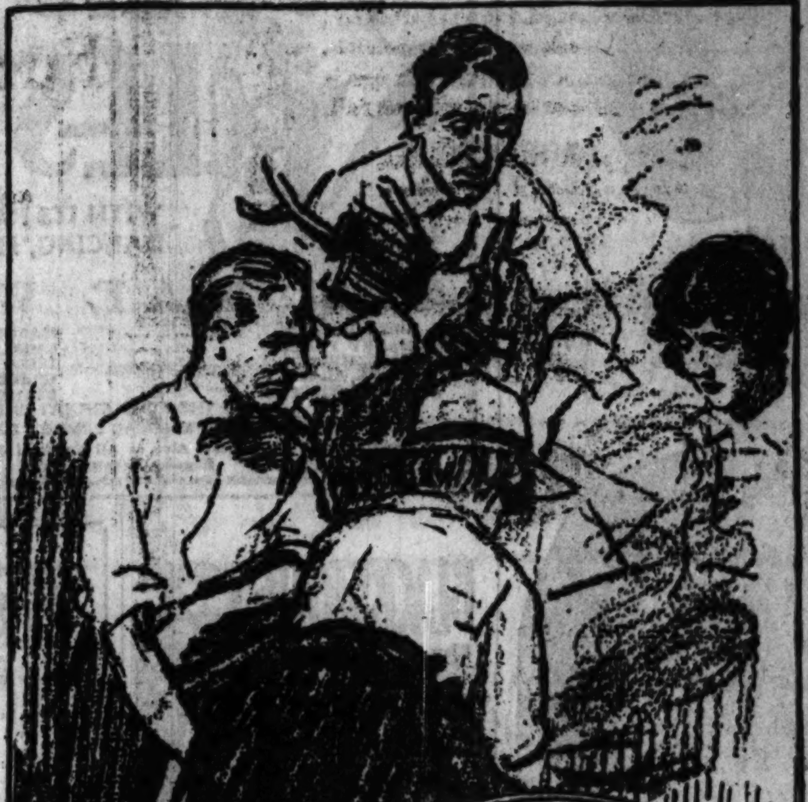
By W. E. HILL

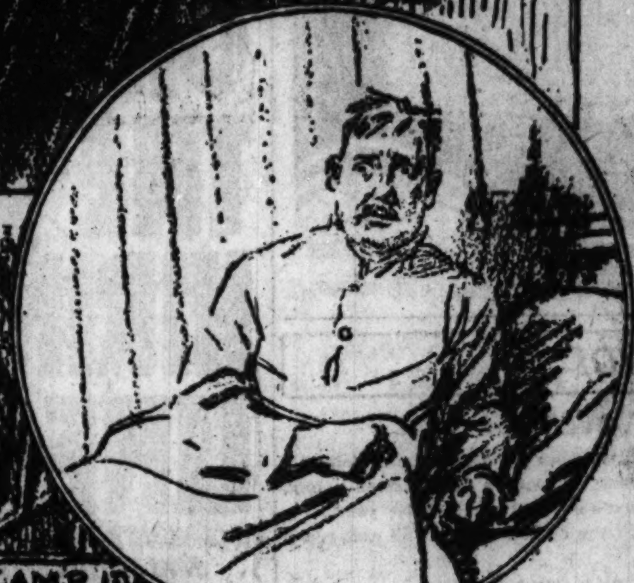
(Copyright, 1919, New York Tribune Inc.)



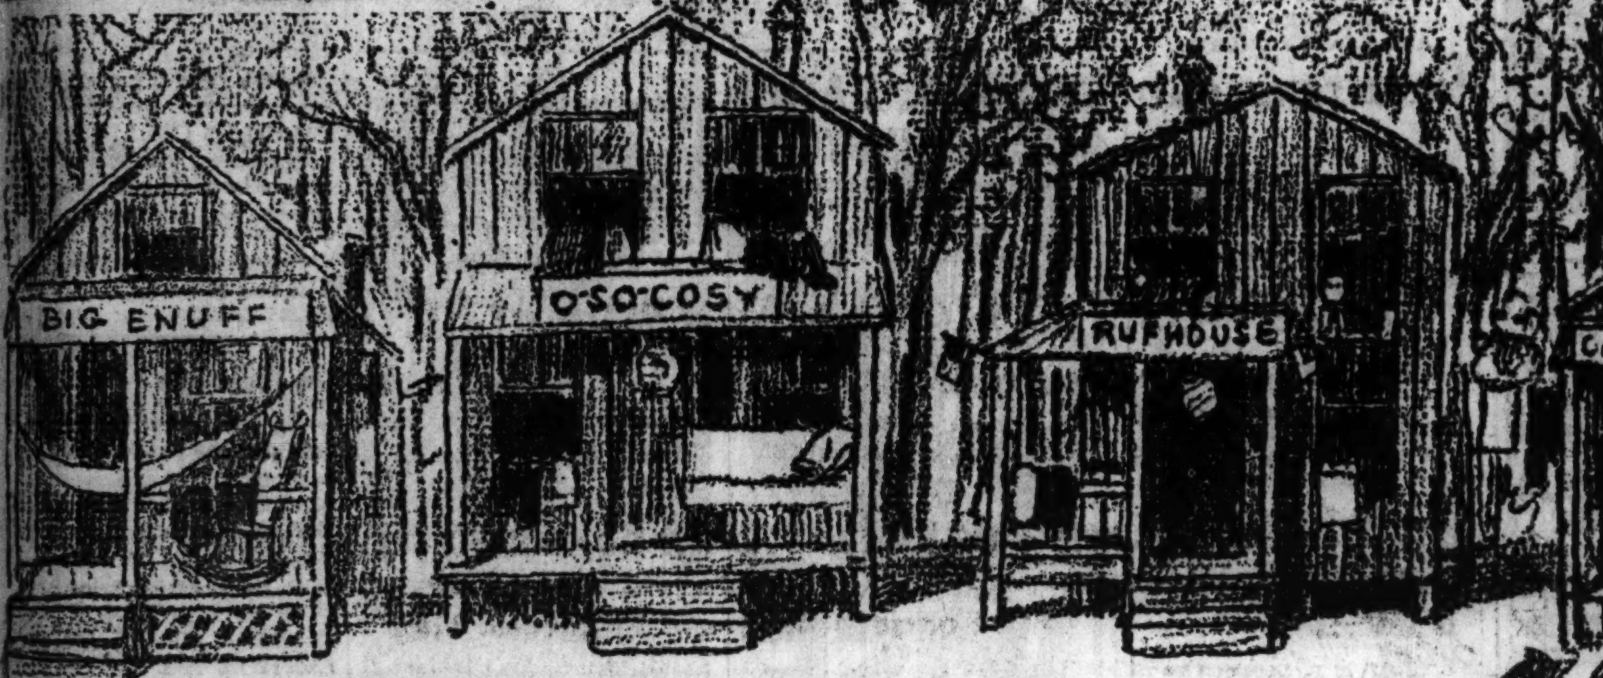
Charades at "Kamp Kilkare," where a little party is being given. Unfortunately, Mrs. Cubit's side numbers three outsiders who have never met before and who are no good at all at charades, or even thinking up words. Mr. Snick, after a great deal of hard thinking, has suggested the world "rancid"—that is, if any one can think of a way to act out the last syllable.



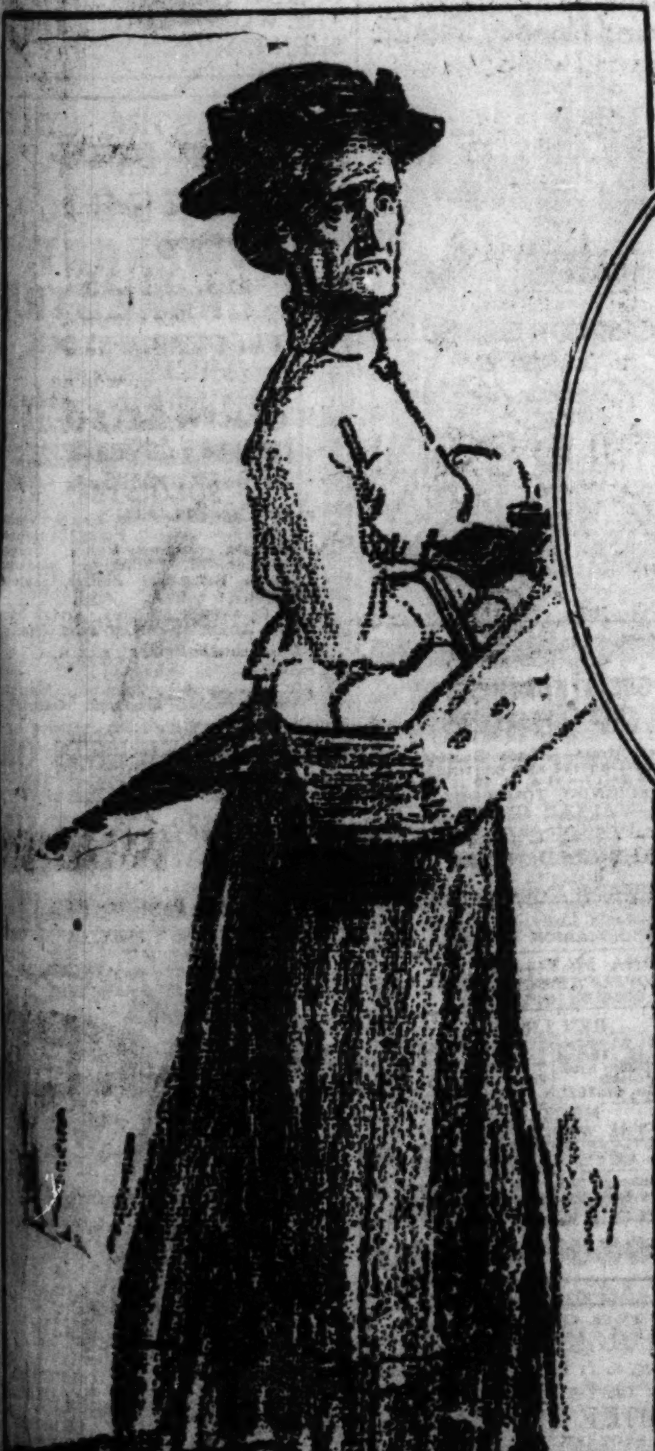
The corn roast, with the corn that won't roast.



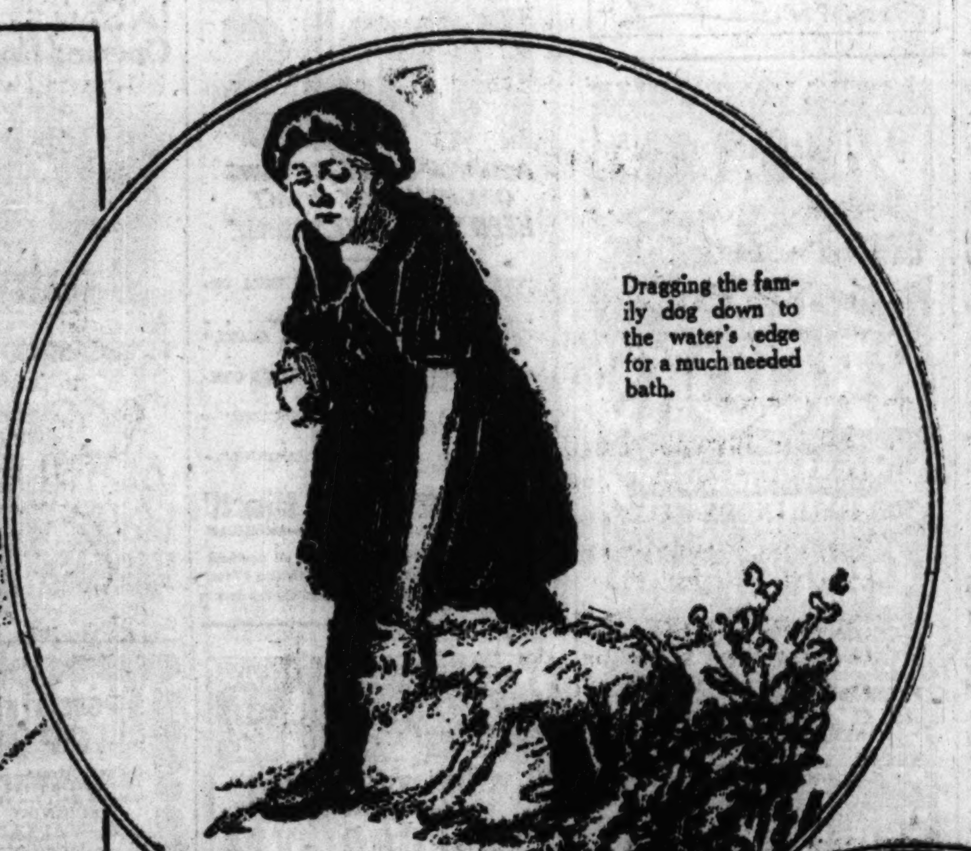
Mr. McCooey, up for the week, dwelt largely on the joy of going to sleep listening to the night sounds in the country. Mr. McCooey hadn't counted on the noises that come through the thin partitions of a bungalow.



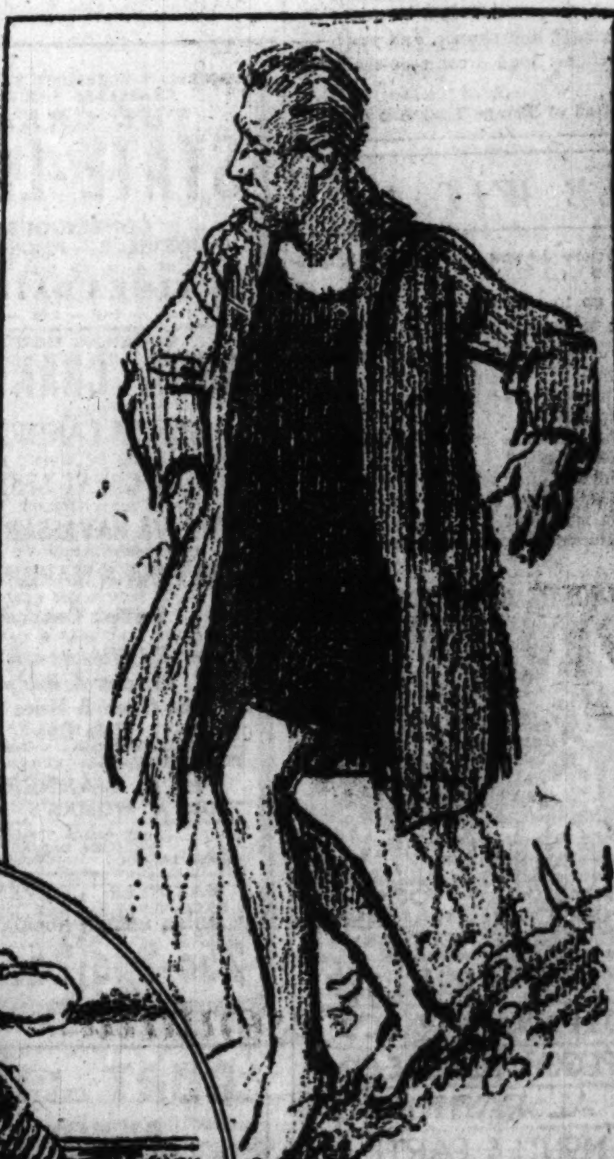
The row of cottages, all appropriately named, on the border of Lily Pad lake.



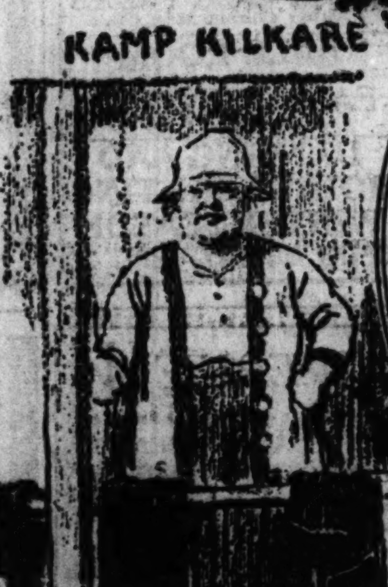
Mrs. Stebbins, who comes around now and then to sell eggs and butter to the cottagers—as a great favor and only at a slight increase over city prices—thinks city people are just plain crazy, more or less.



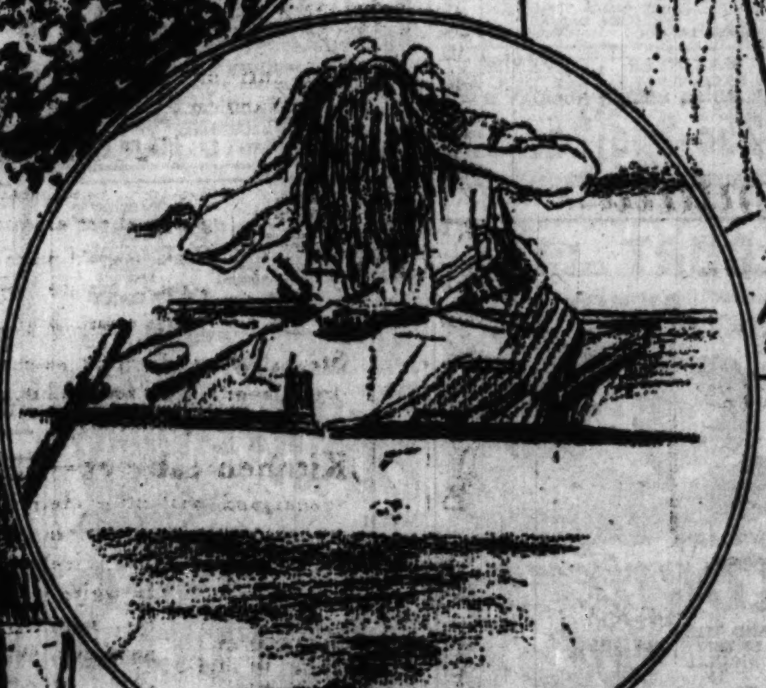
Dragging the family dog down to the water's edge for a much needed bath.



Dodging the sharp stones on the way down to the water.



"We never dress up at all at Kamp Kilkare," is Mrs. Rugg's slogan.



A shampoo on the lake.

THE THEATERS

WITH the advent this week of two new musical comedies, the renaissance of the theater in Chicago will begin to take shape. It took some considerable shape last week, Mack Sennett's Bathing Girls In Person being in our midst, but "Listen, Lester," and "The Canary" are expected to fill out the strike-emaciated old dear into a thing of symmetry and salubrity.

If, later on, Broadway, N. Y., will consent to loan us its "Nighty Night," its Grenij Village Show Full of Artists' Models, its Disappearing Diving Belles, and its various and sultry "Gaities" and "Follies," our cup of joys shall be filled to overflowing, and we can, with due impropriety, arise and chorus:

"Hip, Hip, Hooray!"

"Listen Lester" opens at the Illinois tomorrow night. "The Canary" begins tonight at the Colonial. New York listened to Lester at the Knickerbocker for a year, and the Canary chirped at the Globe for six months. Asked the eastern end of our leased wire if any of the Gotham papers had told what the plays were all about, the correspondent came back with this:

"A musical comedy with a plot! Are you crazy?"

So you'll have to struggle along on what enlightenment the press agent offers. Concerning "The Canary" he says:

"The story is whimsically founded on the French original of a famous diamond of that name. Joseph Cawthorn, as a modern maker of antiques, employed in a fashionable shop, by accident, swallows the gem which sticks in his throat. The ownership of the diamond is in dispute, and the efforts of a half dozen or so would-be proprietors to recover it, make the story. Julia Sanderson plays the rôle of a skillful young painter of 'phoney' art masterpieces, pledged in the shop years before. . . ."

The punctuation of the press agent leaves two points in doubt—whether Mr. Cawthorn is employed in the shop by accident or swallows the gem by accident; and whether it's Miss Sanderson or the phoney art masterpieces that have been pledged. You'll have to find out about this yourself.

The publicity wizard for Lester vouchsafes:

"The two acts are located in the most elite hotel in Palm Beach. . . . The story has to do with a bundle of letters held by a designing vampire woman from the temperamental widower, which are sought by the writer, their various individuals and methods and the resultant entanglement and mixups being interestingly amusing. . . . The chorus has been criticised for its beauty and gorgeous gowning."

Well, perhaps.

Ada May Weeks heads the cast, being presumably the designing vampire woman.

You'll have to hurry to see "The Passing Show." It's going on the road next week.

The Princess will open Sept. 24 with Mark Swan's "Keep It to Yourself." Sam Gerson says it's a rollicksome, frolicsome farce.

"The Acquittal" will open at the Grand Sept. 21. It is announced as "a Cohanized American play."

A third company of the Lorin Howard players has been organized as the National Theater company. It will alternate with the Imperial and Victoria companies, giving each play a run of three weeks at the National, Imperial, and Victoria theaters, inclusive.

Henri Scott, basso-baritone, will appear in vaudeville at the Majestic this week.

Ethel Barrymore's new play, written by Zoe Akins, has been named "Declassee." Which led the New York Sun to guess the comical critics would call it "Delicatessen."

Fanny Brice has signed a contract to Brice up the "Midnight Frolic," which Flo Ziegfeld will thrust upon the New Amsterdam (N. Y.) roof Sept. 22.

Winchell Smith and John L. Golden, producers of "Three Wise Fools," will stage a play of "faith, fun, and feuds" in the Blue Ridge mountains. It is called "Thunder," has Burr McIntosh in it, and will be seen first at the Criterion, New York, Sept. 22.

Lola Fisher is to be starred by George Tyler. Claire Kummer is writing a comedy for her now. Miss Fisher's electric sign possibilities were discovered several years ago at the Blackstone theater in Chicago, where she appeared in Augustus Thomas' drama, "Rio Grande." New York heard about her later.

Burns Mantle's Letter

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—There was not much jollifying the night the peace treaty in the actors' strike was signed. By the time the managers had affixed their signatures and everybody had shaken hands with everybody else present it was 3 o'clock in the morning, and the town, contrary to the popular western impression, was pretty much asleep.

Even the Lambs' club, where any Equity victory party would have been most likely to be staged, was wrapped in slumber, with only an occasional alert member wondering what significance could be attached to the third man's drawing one card. And practically all the lockers had been closed for the night.

Down in Great Neck, L. I., where there is a considerable colony of stage folk, the last rubbers had been played and all the wives and children and most of the husbands were in bed and asleep when suddenly there went scooting through the village a huge touring car tooting a vicious horn.

In the car was Ed Wynn, a comedian of parts and a contagious giggle, lately of the "Shubert Gaieties of 1919," and later than that an active participant in the strike. The car stopped before the home of Ernest Truex and honked wildly.

For minutes thereafter there was no response. The Truex family was all but paralyzed with fright. Young Ernest himself, despite a ferocious mustache, is not one who seeks trouble at 3 a. m. Yet he is good enough neighbor to heed any call of distress, and presently he appeared, somewhat hesitantly, wrapped in a part of the window curtain and an old fashioned nightie.

"Who-o-o is—who is it?" queried Ernest.

"It's Paul Revere," shouted Wynn, cupping his hands that the message might carry. "The strike is over!"

Ernest beat the home record for grabbing bathrobe on second floor and making the first floor in two jumps, and was soon embracing the midnight rider in the car.

From there they rode to the Jack Hazzard place, or it may have been to the Oscar Shaw place. Anyway, from there they went on. By 5 that morning there were a dozen Paul Reveres crowded into that car, and the Equity victory was being talked about the length and breadth of Great Neck.

So far the spirit of the actor toward the manager, and of the manager toward the whole wild world, organized or otherwise, has been fine. Saturday night, on five hours' notice, four plays were resumed, and at each of them several hundred prospective seat buyers were turned away. The companies included both Equity actors and Fidelity actors ("Fidos" is the town's popular name for them), but they were all too glad to have it over with and to be back at work to think of being mean or catty.

In the "A Voice in the Dark" company, for example, there were eight Equity members and seven who had embraced the Fidelity. But the diplomatic A. H. Woods had a box of candy in each woman's dressing room and a box of cigars waiting for each of the men. "Let's be pals!" read the gift notes, and the emotional players wept over them, being careful, naturally, first to cover both cigars and candy.

By Monday, however, there was an occasional report of misunderstandings and threatened reprisals. In the closed meeting of the Equity association, called to ratify the treaty, certain striking actors demanded to know what they had gained, individually, by being faithful. They were no better off than they were before, so far as work was concerned. One man reported that all the Fidelity members of the company with which he was associated had received a raise of salary, while he was still laboring at the old wage. The fact that he had done his bit in forcing a settlement that guaranteed chorus girls $30 a week in New York and $35 on the road, with shoes and stockings paid for by the firms they worked for instead of by themselves, or that he would hereafter be paid extra for all performances over eight that were crowded into one week, or that he would no longer be docked half his salary the week before Christmas and Holy week, when he was most in need of it all, did not appeal to him as representing a great victory. His own salary was still unraised.

From the early meetings of the Managers' association there came reports that certain members were already planning more trouble for themselves by seeking to be revenged upon those of their employés who had gone on strike. One manager declared that he would be absolutely goldarned if he would replace the old contract with the new. Another admitted that he was going to send the comedian he had under contract for a term of years on a long, long tour of the one night stands.

But it was the sense of those meetings that the stubborn members should be made to see the light. The peace agreement had been entered into in good faith, Arthur Hopkins explained, and every member of the association would be expected to live up to the promises of his representatives. Ways would be found, most of the managers seemed to feel, to force the bad boys to respect, even though they might not indorse, the spirit as well as the letter of the agreement.

Last week there were four attractions, dramatic and musical, on Broadway. This week there are twenty-seven, including Thurston, the magician, who edged in during the trouble only to be edged right out again when his assisting stage hands refused to help the disappearing lady in and out of the trick trunk.

The older attractions that were able to open quickly, if you happen to be interested in them, include:

Mr. Ziegfeld's "Follies," which cost that manager $9,200 a week for three weeks because he magnanimously offered to pay the salaries of all those who "stuck."

The Messrs. Shuberts' "Gaities," which resumes at the Forty-fourth street theater with Nora Bayes replacing Ed Wynn as the leading comedian.

"Monte Cristo Jr.," the long continuing Winter Garden bill.

"Chu Chin Chow," which was all ready to leave for Toronto when the blow fell, and is now here again for three weeks at the Century.

"Lightnin'," which picks up its year's run at the Gaiety with every indication of continuing another year. Frank Bacon was one of the most ardent of the Equityites.

"East Is West," with Fay Bainter practically the only Fidelity girl in her company.

"The Crimson Alibi," Mr. Broadhurst's mystery melodrama, one of the "Who Killed Cock Robin" series.

"The Challenge," at the Selwyn, with Holbrook Blinn, who was an Equity councilor until—— Well, just until.

"Friendly Enemies," with Louis Mann still in rare conversational form, revived for a few popular priced weeks at the Manhattan opera house.

"The Five Million," which was going [illegible]

MUSIC NEWS AND NOTES

"LA NAVE," a lyric drama, in three episodes and a prologue, by Gabrielo d'Annunzio, Italy's greatest poet of the present day, will be given its American premiere this fall by the Chicago Opera association, and Mme. Rosa Raiza will create the rôle of Basiliola.

It was given its world's premiere at La Scala, Milan, last November, and, while in the preparation of the libretto for Montemezzi's music, Tito Ricordo was forced to sacrifice some 3,000 lines, the action and the splendid development of the tragedy have been excellently maintained.

The early struggles and the early achievements of the Venetian state are symbolized by "La Nave" (The Ship). The daring of Dante is recalled in the somber picture of the passion of the two brothers Gratici for the lovely Basiliola. These brothers are enemies of her house, however, and, having sworn bitter vengeance against them, she creates tempest and storm through her power over them. Sin and shame and fratricide follow in the wake of her passion. But in the end righteousness triumphs. The woman pays for the wrongs she has committed and Venice moves on toward further greatness and further happiness.

This lyric drama has been arranged for the operatic stage by Tito Ricordo.

A new chamber music organization will make its initial bow to the Chicago public this afternoon at the opening of the twenty-second annual convention of the Zionist organization of America. This unique group which is called "Zimro" is a sextet consisting of piano, wood wind, and strings and its main object will be to center attention upon Hebrew music, both that of the old church and secular variety and of the new Jewish composers.

The Zimros started their travels in Petrograd in March 1918, and have played their way through eastern Russia, Siberia, Japan, China, Singapore, Batavia, and the Straits Settlements. The proceeds of their concerts are to go towards the erection of a great temple of art in the new republic of Palestine.

In connection with their tour it may be mentioned that a fellowship of Jewish artists, musicians, and literary men and women is being formed under the name of Almuth, the Hebrew word for art, to assist in the erection of the temple in Palestine.

The program for this afternoon's concert is distinctly Hebrew in character, and many of the numbers will be novelties to a Chicago audience. Here is the list:

Jewish sketch .......................... Krein
Jewish rhapsodie .......................... Aisberg
L. Berdichevsky.
Jewish dance [for two violins] ........ Kaplan
G. Mistechkin and G. Besrodny.
"To the Wedding" .............. Fitelberg
A. Redl and S. Bellison.
Romance of Jewish folk songs...... Weinberg
G. Mistechkin.
Suite 1 [arrangement for quintet by S. Bellison] .............. Engel

The members of the ensemble are: S. Bellison, clarinet; J. Cherniavski, cellist; G. Mistechkin, first violinist; K. Moldavan, viola; G. Besrodny, second violinist; L. Berdichevsky, pianist.

ly at the Lyric, but is now shut out by the Helen Keller picture and driven to the Maxine Elliott.

"Those Who Walk in Darkness," the story of the girl who tried to go straight in the country after a Sixth avenue experience in New York.

"A Voice in the Dark," the mystery murder novelty, in which a deaf woman and a blind man offer testimony in clearing up the crime.

"A Lonely Romeo," with Lew Fields active, at the Casino.

"The Greenwich Village Follies," a peppery show, full of artists' models, that has moved uptown from the Greenwich Village theater.

"La La Lucille," at the Criterion, and George White's "Scandals" at the Liberty, summer shows with autumn contracts.

The Hippodrome's "Happy Days," with the disappearing diving belles.

George Cohan's "The Royal Vagabond," the only bad comic opera that was ever "kidded" into a big success.

"John Ferguson," the best drama in town, but fearsomely serious for the tourist trade, at the Fulton, and "The Better 'Ole," revived by the Coburns at the Booth.

To these there were added this week four new plays that were all ready to come to Broadway when the strike broke: Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson's "Up from Nowhere," Mrs. Chauncey Olcott's new play, "Lusmore"; a farce that speaks for itself in its title, "Nighty Night," and "A Regular Feller."

Of the new ones I have only seen "Up from Nowhere." Not much of a comedy, considering the quality of its authorship. Just why the Messrs. Wilson and Tarkington write such excellent stories and such disappointing plays is one of the standing mysteries. But they do. For some reason they seem to grow conscious and artificial the minute they start a play, and, though they make a determined effort to be unconventional and human and bright, by the time they get to the second act they are swamped in convention and artificiality from which even their wit and their unusual well drawn characters cannot lift them.

"Up from Nowhere" is the romance of the new American—a melting pot product of the east side who picked up a fortune and some culture and reared a family of parisitic children. The story revolves about the effort of the father to prove to his son that the only reason his (the son's) old American fiancée is willing to marry into the family is because of the money it will bring her.

He has been a bad one with the women, has father, in his day, and he undertakes to expose the sordid fortune hunting instincts of the girl. Instead he falls in love with her and she with him—and there you are. The same old bachelors' romance with a new sash on.

There are good lines and good character bits, particularly a dodering old sea captain, well played by Cecil Yapp, and several well written and amusing scenes. Norman Trevor, gray at the temples, makes an attractive middle aged lover, and Ann Andrews an alluring heroine. The little play is good for an 'dis evening, but its staying qualities, we fear, are not good.

L'ENVOI

By Guy F. Lee.

When the last cached flagon is empty, and the bars are all ice cream joints,
When the blind tigers turn up their tootsies, as dead as the fourteen points,
We shall rest from a babble of chatter that's swatted our ears for years,
For our language'll be much emended with the curfew of whiskies and beers.

No more shall we call for a jigger, no longer a jorum request,
A souse and a stew from the amber hued brew shall slide nevermore off our chest;
We'll see no friend jingled or sizzled, nor witness him gargle an edge,
And a skinful of booze'll be obsolete news, along with the annual pledge.

A pickle shall mean just a pickle, a bun merely designate bread;
No oreide soaks'll spring hootch laden jokes while piped from the feet to the head;
Merry mucilage'll be but a mem'ry, and joy water absent shall be,
And a tall stack o' suds and a slug'll be duds, and we'll quaff only java and tea.

The kish and the sosh and the bundle, the package, the jag, and the still,
Shall join the high-lonesome in exile—their orders no further we'll fill;
The bat and the bust, boon companions of Bourbon and Rye, shall be o'er,
And our lives'll be pure as the water that makes 'em a terrible bore.

. . . . . . . . . . .

'Twill be lovely to lush in the future, when shots with a kick'll be gone;
We'll murmur, "O, no, we prefer H2O," and giggle, and simper, and yawn—
"Drink up," and "Here's bumps," shall be echoes: fond dreams of the sweet by and by
When we pass up the Idol Frumenti for the God of Things That Are Dry.

"Ring off; you're on a busy wire."

"I have a conundrum."

"I know; because there's a rooster on the other side."

"No, sir; because there's a colored man on the same side."

"That's terrible!"

"Here's one that's worse yet. What's the difference between a Scotchman and a banana?"

"I don't know. What is the difference between a Scotchman and a banana?"

"You can skin a banana."

"Something seems to worry you."

"I just saw a terrible automobile accident."

"A terrible automobile accident?"

"Yes; a jitney turned over in a man's pocket."

"I'd knock your block off, only you look too weak."

"I am so weak I need a tonic."

"Why don't you drink beer?"

"That's tootonic."

"Have you lived here all your life?"

"Not yet."

"How far is it to Aurora?"

"I think so."

"I mean, is it four, six, or eight miles?"

"Yes, sir."

"Your head is like a vacuum."

"And your head is like a dollar bill."

"How so?"

"One bone."

"Where do you get all your brightness?"

"I go to school."

"Is it public?"

"No; you're the only one that knows it."

"I mean, is the school public?"

"No; it's brick."

"I'm trying to find out if the school is open to all?"

"No; it's only open till 3 o'clock."

"How do you stand in your class?"

"On my feet."

O. L. HALL, the brilliantine of the EVENING JOURNAL, was "UP IN MABEL'S ROOM" and saw the vast audience hail the A. H. WOODS LAUGHING HIT with GLEE. Note: GLEE MEANS HILARITY.

PERCY HAMMOND, you all know Percy, meandered from the TRIBUNE office to "UP IN MABEL'S ROOM" and he as well as everybody was happy. Percy was caught laughing.

DEAR AMY LESLIE came from the Parkway Hotel and after a brief stay "UP IN MABEL'S ROOM" told all Chicago through the columns of the DAILY NEWS that MABEL would remain at the WOODS "TILL THE COWS COME HOME."

ASHTON STEVENS, the sapolio of critics, came from the HERALD AND EXAMINER in a yellow and after his visit "UP IN MABEL'S ROOM," declared it funny because it is written funny, constructed funny and characterized funny. Very nice "in you," Ashy.

CHARLES COLLINS, the connoisseur, who writes about shows in the EVENING POST, thinks "UP IN MABEL'S ROOM" is a success. Thanks, Charlie. We know it is. The box office says so.

FRED M'QUIGG got away from the EVENING AMERICAN long enough to spend an evening "UP IN MABEL'S ROOM" and received her with open arms. HAZEL is MABEL—Whichazel? HAZEL DAWN.

"THE EGG CRATE WALLOP."

[illegible] line.
[illegible] by Jerome Storm.
[illegible] at the Playhouse.

THE CAST:

[illegible] ....Charles Ray
[illegible] ....Colleen Moore
[illegible] ....Jack Connelly
[illegible] ....J. P. Lockney
[illegible] ....George Williams
[illegible] promoter....Ted Moore
[illegible] ....Otto Hoffman
[illegible] ....Ed Jobson

By Mae Tinée.

Why do the men like Charlie Ray?
You ask them and they laugh and say:
"Because I used to act that way
When I was young and callow!
My collars always were too tight;
My cuffs and trousers never right;
I'll tell the world I looked a fright
When I went out a-courting!"

Why do the girls like Charlie Ray?
You ask them and they smile and say:
"O, he's such a pathetic jay!
One craves the dear to mother!
We want to smooth his fevered brow;
To patch his clothes and tell him how We'd love him—if the law'd allow,
And we could make him happy!"

There you have it! Going or coming, Mr. Ray gets his audiences by the collar and sways them to suit himself. In this latest picture he's his own wistful, miserable, calf-like, dogged, and finally triumphant self—reaching the goal by means of a rousing good fight and receiving a just and charming reward in Miss Colleen Moore.

"The Egg Crate Wallop" is small town stuff boosted on its way to immortality by the excellent work of star and support. It is cleverly produced and should fill the theaters that show it.

Jack Lait has signed a contract which will give the Selznick Pictures corporation the exclusive right to his stories and plays for one year. It's all right with me.

The review of "The Miracle Man" will appear in tomorrow's paper. This picture has been much talked about and I'll take my whack at it in the morning.

Rumor hath it that about Oct. 1 David Wark Griffith will desert Los Angeles. It is his plan, they tell me, to build one studio on Long Island, another near Jacksonville, Fla., and another in France.

If Mary Pickford receives 1,500 letters a day, as they say she does, and saves them, she could go into the paper business in a matter of ten years or so, couldn't she?

I'm glad to tell you that Harold Lloyd, recently injured in a bomb explosion, is doing nicely. His doctors tell him he can plan on returning to work shortly.

Didst know that Conway Tearle is the husband of Adele Roland? They tell me he's terribly fussy when she wants to go away and asks petulantly, "What about the house?" Just like any other mere man.

Charlie Chaplin has a new comedy partner—Baby Jack Coogan, aged 4. Baby Jack draws a man sized salary, however.

Fannie Ward, it is expected, will shortly leave London for Paris, where she will appear in a photoplay especially written for her by Maeterlinck. The cast will be Anglo-French throughout.

Creighton Hale, Jackie Saunders, and Raymond McKee have been signed by World Film.

One hears a lot of stories about how the various stars are "discovered." They tell me that a certain blonde lady who appears most often in serials while skipping along a railroad track, carrying a pail of lunch to her husband, a mechanic, came within the range of vision of a man waiting for the train. This man, who was no more or less than a director, was charmed with her grace and turned to a native standing by. "Who is that girl?" he asked. The native answered. The director missed his train. Which is why the mountains are shy one blossom. Three guesses as to who the lady is?

Ask Me! Ask Me!

A. C. B.: I am glad you enjoy the column. Write to Zena Keefe at 219 West Eighty-first street, New York.

ELINOR: I don't think you sound so crazy. Address Norma and Constance Talmadge at 318 East Forty-eighth street, New York. A letter will reach Dorothy Gish at 4500 Sunset boulevard, Hollywood, Cal. You didn't ask too much and I hope I may be able to help you out some other time.

ARTHUR L.: Glad to send you the list, but I'll have to have a stamped addressed envelope. Vurrwekkum!

WISCONSIN: No! Once and for all I didn't catch a fish. Good reason why. There aren't any fish in Wisconsin. If anybody ever proved that beyond all reasonable doubt, it is I! There's not a fish that swims which could have resisted the bait I offered. And I wish you'd stop asking me if I caught a fish. All of you.

ARTHUR M. JR.: Suppose you'll be joining the movies next. Yes, they all seem to like California. If you get any nice exclusive "dope," don't forget the world's greatest newspaper, will you, Chicago boy?

MARGARET L. F.: Surely. Address Nazimova in care of Metro, Hollywood, Cal. She has been on the screen for several years. "The Brat" is her latest picture. Come again whenever you feel like it.

MARY JANE: Address the Lee children care of the Rogers Film company, Capitol Theater building, New York. Send scenarios for the Parson comedy producers to Christie. I'll mail you the list of studios if you'll send me that little old self-addressed envelope I'm always teasing for. Glad to do it.

BOB H.: No!

OLE TIMER: No!

MRS. A. L. C.: Dear knows they need somebody to read proof on the subtitles. I know of no way to apply for the position, save just to apply. Want a list of studios? Nope. Not a fish.

MARY V. B.: I'd help you if I could. Intelligence is at a premium, isn't it? O, well, there are a lot of really good pictures, after all. Honestly, don't you think so?

LILLIAN L. P.: Why should I say it is a "bum" picture when I don't think so? Just because that's your verdict is no reason why I should change my opinion.

Greatest Triumph
"THE BRAT"
It is novel. It has pep and kick. It is backed by a phenomenal record on the stage. It is bound to please you 100%. "The Brat" presents Nazimova for the first time in her astonishing career in the role of an American girl. She has a role that every American will adore. As a stage success it has been viewed by hundreds of thousands, until the central character is like one of the portraits of Dickens—almost a household word. "The Brat" is filled with human interest and no end of funny situations. A collection of slang phrases that makes George Ade's fables seem as simple as nursery rhymes.

1914—BY FIELD MARSHAL VISCOUNT FRENCH OF YPRES

INSTALLMENT XVIII.

ON the night of Nov. 6 came the information that the Austrians had been badly routed and driven across the San river by the Russians. Up went our hopes again like quicksilver; another week gone and we expected to see the Germans on our front weakened and reduced by the necessity of sending troops to save Silesia.

Our hopes and plans were fully discussed at a meeting held on Sunday, Nov. 8, at Foch's headquarters at Cassel. Foch was in one of his most sanguine moods, and I must confess to having strongly felt the infection of his hopeful disposition. Our military barometer, however, went up and down as swiftly and suddenly as that of a ship in a typhoon.

What filled my immediate thoughts was the dire necessity of relieving the tired out troops in the Ypres salient, and this was the point I impressed most strongly upon Foch, who, it seemed to me, found it difficult to talk of anything but "Attaque! Attaque! Attaque!"

He gave me some help in this matter; indeed, as much as he could, I feel sure, but not before most of those gallant troops were called upon to withstand the new and terrible onslaught which I shall presently describe.

Throughout the phase of the battle, fighting went on with varying success all along the line from La Bassée to the sea. Ploegsteert Wood was the scene of many violent engagements. The 6th division and 19th brigade to the south were constantly at grips with the enemy. All along the valley of the Douve and the Wytschaete-Messines Ridge the enemy was continuously active. But the point in the line which caused me the greatest anxiety was the dent between the 1st (British) and the 16th (French) corps at the canal to the north of Hollebeke. It is not too much to say that only by the display of the greatest gallantry and endurance on the part of the 3d cavalry division and the other troops engaged at that point was the enemy prevented from getting dangerously near our communications.

Each of the four phases into which I have divided this very brief and incomplete narrative of the battle of Ypres is marked by one important and far-reaching crisis.

In the beginning of the battle came the arrest of the German advance on the channel ports and the brilliant repulse of the enemy back to the Lys by the cavalry under Allenby and the 3d corps under Pulteney. The second phase is distinguished by the crisis of Oct. 31, while in the third phase occurs the memorable stand of the cavalry and other troops under Allenby on the Wytschaete-Messines Ridge.

The great feature of the fourth and last phase was the desperate assaults made against the Ypres salient on the 11th and 12th of November, in which the flower of the Prussian Guard participated, having received the emperor's personal command to make certain of finally breaking our line.

THE FIRST BATTLE OF YPRES

"We Need Help"—Foch.

IT was in the same conference room at Cassel in which I had been with Foch on the 8th, and where, as I have said, we mutually indulged in day dreams of imminent victory, that, on the evening of Nov. 10, I received the reports which warned me that another great crisis was at hand.

Foch informed me that an attack on a great scale had just begun against his line between Ypres and the sea. He had received reliable reports that the enemy had brought up five fresh corps from the south. He said that the Germans already had gained possession of the village of Dixmude, but had not yet crossed the Yser, which French marines and Belgians were holding against them. He added that he was being heavily pressed and was losing ground near Langemarck, and declared that he must move Conneau's cavalry division (holding the line opposite Messines) north to support him, and he asked me to put Allenby in to relieve Conneau. I agreed to this and gave orders accordingly.

Early on the morning of the 11th Haig reported that his position was being heavily shelled and that he was threatened with a powerful attack. Two fresh German army corps had come up in his front—namely: the Guard and the 15th.

In short, the Germans were about to deliver their final desperate blow, which they hoped would at last open up to them the road to the sea.

The situation was met by Haig with the same grim determination, steadfast courage, and skillful forethought which had characterized his handling of the operations throughout. A volume might easily be written of this day's fighting of Nov. 11, but it is only possible in these pages to glance at the particular points in the line of battle where the fighting was fiercest and where the issues were most vital at different hours of the day.

Up the Menin road came the first tremendous onslaught at half-past 9 a. m. on the front held by the 1st (Guards), 7th, and 15th brigades. At the first clash of arms the Germans pierced our line with a rush. This was splendidly disputed by the Royal Fusiliers under McMahon, their devoted and gallant leader, who was killed; while the battalion was almost annihilated. Reserves, however, quickly came up, counter attacks were organized and delivered, and the line was reëstablished.

About noon the critical point changed to the right at the canal, where the French were driven out of their trenches and fell back on Verbranden Molen. Gen. Vidal called on our 1st corps for support and help. The heavy fighting in the neighborhood of the Menin road had used up most of his reserves, and the enemy were still clinging to the woods in that part of the line and threatening renewed attacks; but, in spite of this, Haig was able to render the French sufficient help to enable them to make a little headway, though the situation in this part of the line was in doubt and caused anxiety all day.

Terrible Losses to Enemy.

ABOUT half-past 1 in the afternoon a fresh attack of great violence was delivered further north against the 5th brigade. This was thrown back mainly by our artillery fire.

About 3 o'clock the enemy began to mass in the woods about the Menin road, near the center of our line. On attempting to advance, however, they were caught between two fires, from the northeast and southwest, the Oxfordshire L1 and the Northamptons turning them out of the woods at the point of the bayonet.

Severe fighting went on till nightfall, units becoming much intermixed. The losses were very heavy indeed, the 1st (Guards) brigade mustering at night only four officers and 300 men.

The final result of this magnificent defense was that the attack was repulsed with terrible loss to the enemy, and the original line practically held throughout, save for the loss of some few and unimportant trenches.

Brig. Gen. FitzClarence, V. C., to whom reference has already been made, was killed. His name has justly become famous for many gallant deeds, but more particularly in connection with the crisis of Oct. 31.

The success of this great defense, like those which preceded it, was due in the first place to the quick grasp of the situation by Sir Douglas Haig, who so skillfully handled the scanty forces at his disposal, and economized his few reserves with such soldier-like foresight. Mutual support at critical moments was ensured by the whole-hearted coöperation of commanders of all units, great and small.

No words can express my sense of the gratitude which the country owes to the young officers, to the noncommissioned officers, and to the rank and file of this invincible army. When all has been said, it was their courage and endurance which spoke the last word.

While we were thus fully occupied about the Menin road the French were also being attacked all along their line to the north of Ypres, but the enemy was held off.

In accordance with the arrangements made with Foch, the cavalry corps took over the line opposite Messines on the morning of the 11th, when Conneau's cavalry marched north. Allenby was reinforced by two battalions of the 8th division, these battalions being replaced by two territorial battalions.

In the evening De Lisle's (1st) cavalry division was sent to reinforce Haig, to whom were also dispatched the Hertfordshire territorial battalion and two yeomanry regiments from St. Omer.

The situation north of Hollbeke at the canal (which the Germans had now crossed) was a source of much anxiety to me, and I made strong representations to Foch as to the necessity of strengthening his troops at that important point. He promised to reinforce Vidal at once with three battalions of chasseurs.

Lord Roberts' Last Days.

ON the evening of the 11th, Field Marshal Lord Roberts arrived at my headquarters on a visit, accompanied by his daughter, Lady Aileen (now Countess) Roberts. It is needless to say with what enthusiasm the field marshal was welcomed everywhere.

The martial fire which was the lifelong characteristic of this great soldier burned as brightly within him during these last few days of his life as when he earned his Victoria cross on the eastern battlefields over sixty years before. His presence, particularly at this critical time, in the midst of the army he loved so well—love which they returned to the full—acted as a timely inspiration and incentive to our weary and hard pressed troops.

That the tremendous energy of the great soldier remained unimpaired to the last was proved to me on the night of his arrival. He dined at my headquarters mess and after dinner I had a long conversation with him on the situation. It was getting late and I suggested that, as he had a hard day before him on the morrow, he should go to his quarters and get some rest.

He asked me when I generally got to bed. I told him that I took rest when I could, but never knew exactly when it would be possible. I added as an example of this that a conference was fixed for that night between 12 and 1 o'clock, when we hoped all the reports would be in. Nothing that I urged could dissuade him from remaining up and attending that conference, which he followed with his usual acuteness of mind and acute perception, although it lasted into the small hours of the morning.

The early dawn of the next day saw him perfectly fresh, going out to visit his beloved Indians.

On the evening of Friday, the 13th, the field marshal was suddenly taken very ill on his return home from visiting troops in the front, and he died on Saturday, the 14th, at about 8 o'clock.

On the morning of Tuesday, Nov. 17, a military funeral service was held at St. Omer, which was attended by everybody who could get there. Gen. Foch and De Maud'huy represented the French army. The Indian princes attached to the Indian corps were also present, and the Maharajah Sir Pertab Singh took his place on the motor hearse and acted as personal guard over the remains of the great chief on his last sad journey to England.

During the 12th the enemy attempted renewed attacks on either flank of the First corps, but was repulsed with great loss. Although the troops holding the Ypres salient were hard pressed and got little rest until they were relieved by the French, still it may be said that these attacks were practically the last of the really determined and nearly successful efforts made by the Germans during the first battle of Ypre.

The French were able to retake some of the ground they had lost, although the enemy still held on to Dixmude.

Weary Troops Relieved.

FROM Nov. 12 onward the chief anxiety I had was to get relief and rest for the troops which had been fighting so desperately in the Ypres salient, particularly the First corps. I had long interviews with Foch and represented to him the necessity for French troops to take over the whole of the ground there, at any rate for a time. At first he said there would be a great difficulty in doing this, but finally he promised to meet my wishes and agreed to start carrying out the relief on Sunday, the 15th, at latest.

On this I told Haig that no more troops would be sent to him, but that he would be gradually withdrawn into reserve, as he was relieved by French troops. The First corps troops were to be withdrawn before any others and brought into reserve as quickly as possible.

Foch was as good as his word. On the night of the 15th the French Ninth corps took over some of Haig's trenches and released two brigades of the First division, as well as some artillery. These all came into reserve on the 10th at Locre and Westoutre.

On the 13th our front on the Ypres salient was heavily shelled from 10 a. m., and infantry attacks commenced at 1 p. m. up the Menin road and against the sixth and Seventh brigades (First battalion the King's Liverpool) regiment, Second battalion S. Staffs regiment, First battalion R. Berks regiment, First battalion K. R. R. and Third battalion Worcester regiment; Second battalion S. Lancs, First battalion Wilts regiment, and Second battalion Royal Irish Rifles. The latter had their line broken, but it was restored by a counter attack. The enemy lost heavily.

Heavy attacks were made early on the 14th against the Ninth brigade (First battalion. Northumberland Fusiliers; Fourth battalion, Royal Fusiliers; First battalion, Lincs regiment, and First battalion, Royal Scots Fusiliers) in the same area, and later these developed along the whole front, but the Germans were everywhere driven back.

On the 13th the Indian corps became heavily engaged between Armentieres and La Bassee. Some trenches were lost and regained during the day, and the enemy made no progress.

On the early morning of this day a very gallant piece of work was carried out on our Ypres front by a storming party which was led by Color Sergeant Major Gibbon of the 5th (Northumberland) fusiliers. On the previous evening the enemy had gained possession of some buildings within our line. A gun was brought up by a cleverly concealed route to the closest

ASTRONOMY

THE SIGNS OF THE ZODIAC.

THE word Zodiac means a belt of animals. All the figures in the Zodiac are of living things, except Libra, the balance. The Zodiac is the zone about the heavens where the sun and moon and all the planets move. Its location can easily be traced by watching the moon as it journeys along from night to night. In the center of the Zodiac is the ecliptic, or sun's path. The planets' paths all follow along in various loops and curves near the ecliptic, but seldom exactly coincide with it.

The solar system is flat and disc shaped. If the orbits of the different members of the sun's family were material sheets, the whole system would look like a giant disc, 5,000,000,000 miles across, and in proportion to its size as thin as a sheet of paper. The earth is near the middle of the system, and well down in the plane of it, and in consequence we see all the other planets always confined to a narrow strip around the sky.

Thousands of years ago astrologers realized that there must be landmarks in the sky if the motions of the heavenly bodies were to be intelligently followed. The belt comprising the Zodiac was accordingly divided into twelve parts, and over each part, or sign, as it was called, a constellation was set. The signs begin with Aries, the Ram, at the point in the heavens where the sun enters the northern sky in the spring, and are counted eastward. Eastward is the natural motion of every body in the solar system, and with a few exceptions the sun, the earth, the moon, and all the planets and the satellites conform to it.

The signs of the Zodiac in order are. Aries the Ram, Taurus the Bull, Gemini the Twins, Cancer the Crab Leo the Lion, Virgo the Virgin, Libra the Balance, Scorpio the Scorpion, Sagittarius the Archer, Capricorn the Sea Goat, Aquarius the Water-bearer, and Pisces the Fishes.

The constellation of Capricorn is well placed this evening for easy identification. It is rather faint group, but in spite of this, it is quite clearly defined.

The figure of Capricorn is a mythical creature, half fish and half goat. Like all the other figures on the Zodiac, it is of extreme antiquity. History gives us no clew as to when it was invented, for at the dawn of writing we find star lore in a well developed stage.

The September Sky Map
DRAWN BY S. F. MAXWELL

The only planet in the evening sky is Uranus, found tonight in Capricorn. Any one who has an opera glass can find it with a little patience. It lies off the eastern tip of the constellation, as is indicated on the map.

Uranus was found quite accidentally by Sir William Herschel, the great astronomer of the eighteenth century. Sir William was one night sweeping up and down the sky with his giant telescope in search of comets when he found something that looked like a little green full moon. He watched it for a few nights, until its motion convinced him that it must be a new and hitherto unknown planet. Before Herschel's time, Saturn had been considered the outermost planet. It was supposed that there were only seven heavenly bodies; the sun, the moon, and the planets Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter, and Saturn. Indeed, whole philosophies had been built up around this supposed perfect arrangement of nature. The discovery of Uranus came as a distinct shock.

Revolutionary discoveries were not as common 150 years ago as they are now, and some people actually refused to believe it, arguing that there were seven holes in the head, and seven bodies in the sky, and an eighth intruder simply couldn't be.

Uranus shines like a star of the sixth magnitude. It is just barely visible to the naked eye on a dark night, but can easily be seen with a small amount of optical aid. Its color is green, and its lustreless gleam contrasts strongly with the snappy scintillations of the stars nearby.

range, the buildings were battered down, and our position was restored at the point of the bayonet.

On the 17th the Ypres salient was again the scene of heavy encounters. There was severe fighting, but we had a very successful day, inflicting great loss on the enemy south of the Menin road.

That Gallant 1st Corps.

THE 21st marked the end of the battle of Ypres, and I had the satisfaction of seeing our troops completely evacuate the Ypres salient. The whole of the 1st corps and the cavalry were in reserve. The fourteen battalions and the 2d corps, which had been moved up to support the 1st corps in the north, marched to rejoin their corps north of Bailleul.

I cannot close the narrative of this great battle without particularly emphasizing the part which was played by the 1st corps. They were thrown in suddenly to fill up the gap through which the Germans were preparing to pour in troops in order to seize the channel seaboard. They were called upon to advance and make good their ground in the teeth of numbers three or four times their own strength and against a much more powerful artillery.

In the great campaigns of the past we find special units singled out and handed down to fame, such as "the Light division" under Crawford in the Peninsular war, or "the Brandenburg corps" under Prince Frederick Charles of Prussia in the Franco-German war of 1870. I think we may rest assured that history will label the 1st British corps in this war with some such distinguished sobriquet.

TO OUR TWO LITTLE TRAMPS.

We rise to firmly deprecate
The way in which you ambulate
Around the lot the livelong day.
We also wish to rise and say
That while admitting as we should
Said ambulation does you good,
We'd like to have you come inside
Where it is rumored you abide,
And visit us, your maw and me——
Not often but occasionally.

From early morn till late at night
You never burst upon our sight,
We do not see you any more
Around our domiciliar floor,
Your little beans do not intrude
Upon our silent solitude,
And only now and then we spy
You crawling in the woods nearby
And hear the squirrels exclaim "Hurray!
Who sent these brand new nuts our way?"

Do not infer this diatribe
Is meant to hedge or circumscribe
Ambitious enterprise in you;
We have no such desire in view;
It's merely that we'd like to see
The two of you occasionally;
And, once acquainted, who can say
We might be right good friends some day?
So children hear our fervent plea:
Come visit us—your maw and me.

Dull Week in Art Circles; Textile Exhibit to Open

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

THERE is so little to chronicle about events in the art world during the last week that it would take a more elastic imagination than even that with which I am endowed to stretch the line or so into which the news can be condensed to more than a paragraph. But, on the other hand, the bulletin of the Art institute just published gives promise of many interesting affairs to come.

Beginning tomorrow and running through the next five days there will be an exhibition in Gunsaulus hall of the institute of a collection of American made textiles and fabrics shown under the auspices of the central states division of the Art Alliance of America and the Fashion Art league. At the joint luncheon to be given on Wednesday M. D. C. Crawford of New York will be the principal speaker.

A few words which have come to me concerning the aim of a part of this exhibit may not be amiss:

"The Fashion Art League of America, which is a Chicago organization founded fourteen years ago, numbers among its members artists, designers, modistes, and clubwomen from all parts of the country who are interested in what is correct, beautiful, and at the same time conservative in American made clothes.

"The aim of the organization is to revolutionize the entire clothes industry of America, beginning with the teaching of clothes craft in the schools and colleges, and continuing through the studio, the workshop, and the factory to the individual consumer, until a national appreciation of the correct in dress is realized. The organization has already accomplished much in practical cooperation with the schools and colleges in and about Chicago and plans to extend this work."

All the above by way of preface or apology to the fact that last week was barren of experience, except for the opening on Wednesday of the new rooms of the Chicago Camera club at 31 West Lake street. This club is doing a great deal to develop the processes of photography into the means of a fine art. The clubrooms, it is planned, will be open daily for the benefit of the members and there will be prints on exhibit at all times, while for special occasions special exhibits will take possession of the walls.

In connection with photography I came across this rather interesting item last week in the New York World. It reads:

> Color patterns of fish have been the subject of intensive studies in the Hawaiian islands through the last year by Prof. William M. Longley, for the department of marine biology of Carnegie institute. While the scientific purposes of the study were to determine the habits and environment of the species in these waters, the photographic results will be useful also in suggestions for industrial designs.
> Prof. Longley made most of his observations under water by means of an equipment of diving hood and submarine cameras, remaining at considerable depths for four or five hours at a time. While in this work he carried on experiments in submarine color photography.
> He reports that he is convinced of its feasibility, with the use of a special color screen to stop more of the shorter light waves than does the customary screen.

So now it only remains for some of our more daring members in the Camera club to follow this clew and present us with, as the result, prints of the marvelously hued citizens of our Pacific waters.

From Oct. 7 to 26, inclusive, the eighteenth annual exhibition of applied arts and the twenty-seventh annual exhibition of the Chicago Ceramic Art association will be held at the Art institute. In November a collection of books will be exhibited by the Caxton club in Gunsaulus hall, and wood engravings by Timothy Cole will be shown in the Print room.

The extension department of the Art institute was one of the leaders in the "own your home" movement that started into life last spring and has been encouraged by various institutions. A letter received by the department from Paul C. Murphy of the division of public works and construction development in the United States department of labor, accents the value of the work of the Art institute and gives it sincere appreciation:

> What the extension department of the Chicago Art institute is attempting to do is a laudable effort, which should commend itself to the attention of every city which wishes to see its citizens comfortably placed in homes where good taste in interior arrangement and furnishings means intelligent choice and not extravagant expenditure, where the outward treatment of lawn and garden forms a fitting frame for the building its occupants really call "home." It should have the earnest coöperation of large employers of labor who wish to see their workmen contented and satisfied, with advantages which are the common possession of every man and woman of good taste. It should have prime consideration from cities which plan to conduct own your own home campaigns, and it gives this own your own home section of the United States department of labor much pleasure to commend your work to own your own home committees and similar organizations having the welfare of their community at heart.

In the bulletin there is acknowledgment, too, of various gifts received by the institute during the last few months. Among them are the following:

An original drawing, "Icarus," by August Rodin, the gift of Robert Allerton; four pencil sketches of dogs and a decorative sketch in crayon by Hunt Diederich, gift of the Arts club; painting, "Clearing Up, Long Island Sound," by Edward B. Butler, the gift of the artist; collection of 328 valentines, 28 patchwork quilts, collection of needlework of the near east (131 pieces); Bennington door knob, added to Blanxius collection, the gift of Mrs. Emma B. Hodge; French doll, the gift of Albert Roullier; four pieces of pottery presented to Blanxius collection, the gift of Dr. F. J. V. Skiff; painting, "Moonlight, French Village," by George H. Bogert, gift of Milton L. Strauss; four bronze portrait plaques and one silver medal by Theodore Spicer-Simson, purchased from the Augusta Mannheimer fund; and an oil painting by Frederick W. Church, bequeathed by Mrs. M. Jennette Hamlin, in memory of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Dana Webster.

Exhibitions at the galleries:

Art institute—Memorial collection of Henry Golden Dearth. Old engravings loaned by Mr. and Mrs. Potter Palmer. Loan collections of paintings and engravings.

MAJESTIC.

Elizabeth Brice and William Morrissey:

"Forward, left, march, halt, right, march."

"For heaven's sake, sergeant, make up your mind what you want us to do."

"Don't you want to be a soldier?"

"It was wished on me. I was selected. I used to roll sugar barrels on a dock in New York and one day the dock just sailed away with me on it. The finest sight I ever hope to see is a boat load of sergeants sinking."

"Just look at those women, and I can't make them understand me. How can they be so beautiful and yet so dumb? The other day I drew a picture of a steak with mushrooms, as I wanted that to eat, and the waitress brought me an umbrella."

"Are you an aviator?"

"Well, I'm up in the air about you."

"Hello, sailor, I like soldiers."

"Well, we brought them over, didn't we? I've just been paid."

"How much?"

"Five million franks."

"Some pay!"

"Well, that's about $5.80 in American money."

"It surely must be great relief to mothers to get rid of some of these fellows that are in the army."

"Nine thousand actors enlisted to entertain the boys in France. Ninety came and the rest wrote songs."

RIALTO:

Bert Lewis: Last summer, while the thermometer hovered around 90 degrees, and walking behind a fat woman was the only shady spot that one could find, I met Judge Brown on Main street.

As he was wiping the perspiration from his face I said to him, "In this weather, judge, you want plenty of sharp iced drinks. Did you ever try gin and ginger ale mixed?"

"No," said Judge Brown, "but I've tried several fellows who have."

And there was the case of Pat O'Toole, who became delirious from sunstroke. The doctor, calling next morning, asked his wife how Pat was getting on.

"Fine," said Mrs. O'Toole; "during the night he asked for water several times."

"Ahem," said the doctor; "still flighty."

Another time O'Toole fell down an elevator shaft, and at the hospital they kept him alive for eight days on brandy and milk.

"Just my luck," said O'Toole afterward. "I was unconscious the whole time."

Many Drive a Hot Spot Chalmers 10,000 Miles or More Without a Penny's Outlay
So easily, so smoothly, so throblessly, comes the power from that magnificent Chalmers Hot Spot engine that it "tears down" but little in its long mileage.
Many persons drive a Hot Spot 10,000 miles or more before a penny is spent for garage attention.
Such a thing as a foul spark plug in a 10,000 mile run is uncommon.
Grinding of valves is far less frequent than in many engines of the old type.
Tires last longer than the guarantee.
Most persons drive a car about 10,000 miles a year, and ever so many go through their first twelve months in a Hot Spot Chalmers without opening their pocketbook, except for gas, oil and grease.
Hot Spot and Ram's-horn turn the trick. They kill vibration, make throbs impossible, provide the smoothest and the most consistent kind of power that comes from a gas engine today.
Try a mile with your foot on the throttle. You too will say Chalmers is one of the few great cars of the world.

THE SCHOOL COUNSELOR

"I will go with thee and be thy guide."—Everyman.

(For any information on schools or education write the School Counselor, Chicago Sunday Tribune.)

THE WORKINGMAN'S UNIVERSITY.

THE American night school is comparable somewhat to a young giant rapidly passing through the years of its early adolescence. Its growth has been astounding, and in both of its branches—the public and the private night school—it represents one of the most worthwhile phases of the modern educational movement.

There has never been a period in history when so large a percentage of the entire population was determined to get an education, nor when schooling embraced so many possibilities for men and women of all ages, and offered subjects of such varied scope.

Night schools are primarily for adults, that is, for boys and girls over 18. Earlier than this the schools are more in the nature of continuation schools and not, properly speaking, night schools.

Their amazing development reveals a healthful desire on the part of those whose youthful education has been curtailed to make up in other and different ways for their earlier limitations, and a realization, too, of how much education can mean in the way of better employment, higher pay, more happiness, and a deeper appreciation of the good things of life. Knowledge gained in the night schools has spelled success for many individuals, and its intensely practical schooling and the fact that its purpose is a definitely attainable one adds much to the general popularity which it is enjoying.

The private night schools in Chicago offer a wide variety of subjects. There are night schools for nearly every profession, every trade, every line of business, and every branch of art.

Work which is begun in the public high schools and night schools may be finished at the private night schools. Or one may start in on a subject which is utterly unknown and make definite and rapid progress through the private night schools. Their policy is concentration on the subject to be mastered and all energies are bent towards that end.

It is an unpalatable fact that many boys and girls leave school long before they ought to. They may have been seized with that vague restlessness which they mistake for a desire to work, or they may be driven from school by the really urgent need of the family for the money which they can make. Then later on, when they realize the advantages of training and education, they turn to that path of opportunity which is open to them—the evening school.

In their schools of commerce such subjects are offered as accounting, advertising, banking and finance, bookkeeping, business law, business psychology, commercial English, French, Russian, and Spanish; credits and collection, employment management and factory management, foreign trade and marketing methods, personnel administration and sales correspondence, South American trade, statistics, traffic and transportation and world commerce, real estate, public speaking, corporation finance, and memory training.

From such a list as this something can be seen of the possibilities along business advancement which these evening schools have to offer.

Again in the commercial lines of stenography and shorthand, in the schools for filing, every opportunity is given to study at night.

There are preparatory schools, too, at which a man or woman can make up high school work and prepare for certified public accountant, for law, for medicine, for pharmacy, for dentistry, college or university entrance.

There are technical schools offering technical courses. There are trade schools where instruction may be had in all the trades. And there are schools especially for automobile instruction and airplane engineering, where a man can go in the evening after he has completed his day's work.

Along the artistic lines evening instruction may be had in painting, illustration, design, cartooning, interior decoration, fashion and commercial drawing.

Music and dramatic art is possible, with a large variety of colleges for the prospective student and there is work in physical education preparing one for director of physical education, playground supervisor, dancing teacher, and swimming instructor. Domestic science schools have been thrown open in the evening and include courses for domestic as well as for professional use; institutional management, catering, principles of cookery and household management.

In the last few years a number of the universities in the city and surrounding territory have offered evening classes leading towards university degrees and with all the courses credited towards these degrees. Not only a technical education, an industrial training, a trades training is possible in the evening now, but a college education and a college degree in liberal arts and in science, may be had in evening work.

If you wish any information on these schools, day or evening, public, parochial, or private, write the School Counselor, THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE.

The following is a list of the public schools, elementary and foreign, high school and technical, which will offer evening classes the coming year.

The abbreviations following the name of the school indicate the kind of courses offered—elementary, grade work, English for foreign born, high school courses, technical, commercial, etc. Many of the elementary evening schols also have manual training for boys and cooking and sewing for girls.

NEW Mitchell SIXES

OUR VICTORY MODEL
A 16-Year Development

Less Fuel Cost

Less Wear—Less Upkeep—More Endurance

THIS new Mitchell embodies over 100 changes, worked out in the two war years. Some of them reduce the fuel cost. Waste of power has been eliminated. A thermostat has been added. By a new method the gasoline is completely vaporized.

Motor wear has been reduced. This by greater smoothness and by better balance. Cylinders are ground—an expensive operation. The crankshafts are twice balanced on two new-type machines.

Lasting Newness

In scores of ways endurance has been added. There are larger parts, better materials, 123 drop forgings.

There is finer workmanship and more exacting tests. Over $300,000 has been spent on new machinery and equipment.

There is a new-type clutch. Brake efficiency has been increased by new design. The steering gear is ball-bearing. The rear springs are long cantilevers, which mean matchless riding comfort. And ample tests have proved these springs unbreakable in use.

The body frame is extra staunch. The steel frame below it is made 1½ inches deeper. Extra coats of finish give a lasting luster. A new-grade top with plate glass windows has been added. It is a stylish car.

The body is new in lines and color, finish and equipment.

Most of these changes are designed to give you a Six that stays new.

See What They Mean

Come and see what these hundred changes mean. Not the first season only, but in years to come. You will want a car built like this Mitchell when you buy a Six to keep.

And we bring it to you at a very modest price. This fact is due to Mitchell factory efficiency. The Mitchell plant builds the complete car—motor, chassis and body—by the latest cost-reducing methods.

This new Mitchell is, by long odds, the finest car in this class on the market this year.

Risk Men Make Big Increase in Insurance Rates

Owners of Medium Price Cars Suffer Most from Advance

CAR thefts have boosted insurance rates nearly 2,000 per cent in five years. This is shown by the report to Motor Age from the Automobile Insurance company, which compiled its statements from records of St. Louis, Kansas City, Chicago, Detroit, Denver, Memphis, and Wichita. The table, as given here, reveals the owner of the less expensive car as the principal sufferer at the hands of the car thief. In fact, rates on the larger cars have increased only slightly. The rates follow:

Cities that border on two or more states, it has been found, are the most fertile fields. Cars stolen in one state are driven across the line, and then the state in which the car was stolen is powerless to summon as witnesses the parties to whom the stolen cars are disposed of.

To correct this condition Representative Cleveland A. Newton of Missouri has a bill which he will introduce shortly to make it a federal offense to steal a car in one state and drive it into another. This would permit the trial court to summon witnesses from any state in the union if necessary to procure a conviction. The bill is indorsed by the National Automobile Dealers' association and the St. Louis chamber of commerce.

My Funniest Motoring Experience

Every one who has taken the road in a motor car has some story to tell. What is your best one? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "My Funniest Experience." Write as briefly as possible, on one side of the paper only, and address Automobile Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. Manuscripts submitted in this contest cannot be returned. Make a copy and keep it if you wish to preserve what you have written.

Unexpected Passengers.

My strangest motoring experience occurred when ranching in Wyoming. My partner and I escorted two school ma'ams to a dance given by a rancher seven miles distant. It happened that two young fellows from town cut us out with the girls, dancing every set with them. When they took them in to supper we decided to go home. It looked like rain, so, hopping into the front seat, we started off at top speed. When nearly home the rain came down suddenly and decidedly, and, to our consternation, from the back seat some shrieks, yells and howls. I investigated, finding two lively babies securely tied into the seat, where their mothers evidently put them for safekeeping, as the beds had been taken down to make room for the dancers.

We turned around. I attempted to quiet the kids, with no effect. Our lights went out, the car skidded, the rain poured and the babies squalled terrifically. Thus we made our slow and painful return trip. We found the loss had just begn discovered. The babies were hugged and kissed by their mothers, we were overwhelmed with thanks, and I was so delighted to be rid of my charges that I freely forgave my girl for jilting me, for that ride convinced me that the single life was the safest.

Absent-Minded Dad.

My father is a university professor and several days ago proved himself to be as absent minded as he is reported being. Dad and I were the only occupants of our car. The road was being repaired and gravel had been thrown on so deep that our car refused to go. I got out in order to tell dad which way to guide in order to get into the tracks made by other cars and dad drove on. I started after him, but when he kept on going after getting through the gravel I decided I was in for a walk to the next town. But I finally saw the car stop about a half mile farther up the road, so I walked to it. "How did you happen to wait for me way up here," I asked when I reached him and he answered, "I entirely forgot you were along and don't know how soon I would have thought of it if I hadn't struck gravel again.

Brakes Stop Talk.

A friend of ours became the proud possessor of a new type of car whose good points he was determined to force us to admit. He took us one afternoon through the park and a mile or two along the boulevard, dilating voluminously upon the merits of the car, and apparently oblivious to the fact that it was laboring and that a dull grinding noise was obtruding itself upon our impartial consciousness. As he paused to take breath, a strange, wild, listening look came over his face. He bounded out, examined the rear wheel, reëntered the car and shamefacedly released the brake, which had been set before we started.

After that we did most of the talking.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS—By High Speed

Readers who wish measurably prompt replies to requests for motoring information will do well to provide a stamped and addressed envelope, so that they may be answered by mail. Limitations of space are such that only a few of the many inquiries received can be answered in this column.

Please let me know the best method of removing road oil from the body of an automobile. Can it be done without injury to the paint?

W. L. BELL, Lost Nation, Ia.

Road oil is best removed with more oil. That is, a good grade of lubricating oil applied with a soft cloth will take the road oil off without injuring the finish. This is the practice recommended by the builders of one of America's finest and most expensive cars. Lubricating oil also makes a very durable body polish.

Please tell me through your columns the best thing to use to remove carbon. I have been told to put one tablespoon of varnish remover in each spark plug, and in fifteen minutes to start the engine.

J. G. M., Olney, Ill.

Varnish remover mixed with a small amount of ammonia makes as good a carbon remover as there is on the market. Kerosene is also very good if applied when the engine is hot.

Will you kindly publish in your columns the route from Chicago to Iowa City, Ia. I plan to leave here by Sept. 20.

Go west through Oak Park to Forest Park, there turning south to Hinsdale and west to Naperville. Here pick up the Cannon Ball trail following it southwest through Aurora, Sandwich, Earlville and Mendota to Princeton. Leaving the Cannon Ball at Princeton continue west through Sheffield, Geneseo, Moline, Davenport, Ia., and West Liberty to Iowa City.

Free Cement for Counties Unable to Finance Work

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 13.—Since the organization of the Lincoln Highway association it has been the policy of that body to promote permanent construction in those counties and states where funds were available to make such construction possible, but where the general public was not conversant with the benefits to be derived from investing in concrete roads, by constructing in many of the counties along the route demonstrating sections or "seedling miles." These single miles, while financed by the local communities, were built with material supplied by various cement companies through the Lincoln Highway association.

The association has to date given away for the construction of these unit miles more than $150,000 worth of cement at present prices. It was the theory of the association that wherever such a seedling mile or demonstrating section of permanent construction was built it would provide such a contrast with the prevailing mud and dust that local demand would soon force additional construction of the same character.

The latest seedling mile to be built with cement contributed by the Lincoln Highway association is that now under construction in Dodge county, Neb. The offer of the free cement was made to the county over three years ago, but, as local funds have not been available and federal aid was necessary to put through the project, construction has been delayed.

Due to the efforts of the association and particularly through the active work of George F. Wolz, state consul for the association, the final contract providing for a federal aid road includes the construction of six miles of concrete paving.

The 3,000 barrels of cement provided for the original seedling mile, which will be a part of the six miles, was provided by the Sandusky Portland Cement company of Cleveland, O., which contributed 7,500 barrels of cement for such construction.

Petitions are already out for the construction of like permanent pavement from Fremont east to the Douglas county line to join with the construction now under way from Omaha to the county line. When this work is completed in the two counties it will provide thirty-eight miles of paved highway from Omaha west and make a good start toward a trans-Nebraska paved Lincoln highway.

Memorial Trees Suggested.

Dr. Frank Crane, the noted writer, in a recent editorial syndicated throughout the country, strongly approved of the idea of planting memorial trees along the Lincoln highway in memory of the heroes who gave their lives during the great war. He says: "Patriotism is beautiful and the sentiment is beautiful which wishes to commemorate in some fitting way the heroism of the men who went to die in France, but why must all sentiment run in ruts of convention? An idea has been advanced which is equally sensible and beautiful. It is so plant memorial trees along portions of the transcontinental Lincoln highway route."

Thousands of Americans Trying to Go Abroad

FOLLOWING GOVERNMENT'S PERMISSION FOR EUROPEAN TOURS

Raymond-Whitcomb Prepared for This Emergency by Making Reservations on Steamers, Both Going and Returning.

TOURS SAILING SEPT. 17, OCT. 4, OCT. 22, OCT. 29 AND NOV. 1, WITH PARTIES RAPIDLY FILLING

The tide of pleasure travel has definitely turned to Europe once more, following the recent announcement of the State Department that passports will be issued this month for tourists to France, Belgium and Italy. Thousands of Americans who wish to see Paris and the Battlefields of the Great War before time and restoration alter their character are now trying to get steamship accommodations, which are not sufficient to meet the new demand.

The exceptional tours to Europe announced by Raymond & Whitcomb Company will solve the difficulty for many travelers, as this enterprising company foresaw the emergency and secured excellent reservations on the best steamships both going and returning.

Remarkable Itineraries

The Raymond-Whitcomb Tours to Europe are from six weeks to five months' duration and allow choice of many remarkable routes, including Paris and the Battlefields, Belgium, the French Alps, the Chateau Country, Pyrenees, Provence, the Riviera, Italy, Sicily and Algeria. Chateau-Thierry, St. Mihiel, the Argonne, Verdun, Rheims, Ypres, Hindenburg Line and all the most important battlefields will be visited—many of them on the anniversary of the Argonne Offensive, the greatest of all American victories.

Europe Now Ready

Latest advices from Paris give the assurance that no trouble need be anticipated regarding hotels or food.

On the other hand, prospective travelers are advised to avail themselves of the service of an established tourist organization that is more familiar with the bewilderingly new and constantly changing conditions than the individual traveler can expect to be.

Parties Limited

The parties are strictly limited by the steamship space available, and persons who contemplate taking advantage of this first opportunity to visit Europe since 1914 should write or telegraph at once for the company's booklet, containing rates, dates and full information. Address Raymond & Whitcomb Co., Raymond Building, Beacon and Park Streets, Boston, or 225 Fifth Ave., New York.

Not High Priced Tires

Users of Michelin Casings and Michelin Ring-Shaped Tubes are naturally fond of telling friends about the truly remarkable service they get from Michelins.

In consequence, Michelin Tires have secured so wide-spread a reputation that many a motorist believes they must be high-priced.

That this is far from true—that Michelins are in fact very moderate in cost—you can prove by comparing the prices below with those of any other good tires.

Gasoline Costs Must Be Lowered

Your gasoline cost is a lot more than it should be. The price is high, and the quality is low. This is an expensive combination for every man who owns a motor. But what are you going to do about it? You can't change the price, and you can't improve the quality. The only thing to do is reduce the quantity. From 25% to 40% of all the gasoline you buy is wasted—absolutely wasted. It goes through your motor without ever being vaporized sufficiently to explode. It is just like shoveling dollars down a rat-hole—they never come back. What you need is to explode every last drop of that gas.

The Automatic Steam Carburetor Does It

By injecting steam into the mixture, it increases vaporization so that all the fuel is exploded—every particle of it. Steam is the best known solvent for carbon—in fact, carbon cannot form when steam is present. Thus the Automatic Steam Carburetor keeps carbon out, increases combustion, saves cleaning and repair bills, keeps your intake manifold hot in all seasons, gives you five to seven more miles per hour, a third more miles per gallon, stops minor oil troubles.

Cuts Your Gasoline Costs 25% to 40%

Let one of these dealers install an Automatic on your motor (automobile, truck, tractor, motor boat or airplane.) Use it 30 days. Satisfy yourself that it does all we claim for it and more. If it doesn't do it, we authorize them to return the purchase price. The cost is only $15.00.

Expect to Have Lots of Trouble in Unalignment

Parts Out of Line and Careless Driving the Cause of Many Ills

BY HIGH SPEED.

SATISFACTORY operation of the motor car is impossible without accurate alignment of the parts. This will probably be strange doctrine to many, perhaps to most car owners, who may never even have heard of alignment. Nevertheless it is absolutely true. The efficient and satisfactory operation of the various mechanical units of the chassis depend entirely on those units being correctly aligned. Let them get out of line and all sorts of trouble immediately follow. Gear teeth break, intense friction is set up, and minor ills quickly grow into major failures until the car must be extensively overhauled to put it on the road again.

The car owner will readily understand that when the vehicle first comes from its maker all the various parts are properly aligned and so run perfectly. When the car is carelessly handled this perfect alignment and balance is quickly lost and trouble begins. If the car owner will devote the same attention to maintaining correct alignment that he is advised to bestow on lubrication his familiar troubles will never even begin. Consequently he should take this warning to heart.

One of the commonest cases of misalignment is that of the front wheels, which is immediately made evident in an excessive tire wear, which may result in the destruction of the casings in a few miles of running. The alignment of the front wheels is determined by the condition of the steering system, the front axle, the bearings and various minor parts. It is quite possible to throw the front wheels out of line in a hard bump against the curb. The car owner ought to check up—or if he cannot do it himself have the service station do it—the alignment of the wheels at least twice a year. If the wheels have been subjected to any severe bump, which might throw the wheels out of line, the checking up should be carried out regardless of any set time for the operation.

It is possible also for the rear wheels to get out of line, depending on the condition of the rims, the bearings, the axle, etc. Trouble developing in the rear axle is likely to throw the wheels out of line. For instance, if the rear axle is not properly lubricated, mechanical derangements are inevitable and these tend to throw the wheels out of line. It is quite possible by careless driving to throw the rear axle out of line. For instance, if the car is started with the hand brake set, the differential ring gear or an axle shaft may very likely be broken. The strain has simply been too much for the parts and the weakest of them has snapped. If the brake is applied while the wheels are in the air, as they are likely to be much of the time when the car is going over rough road surface, the wheels will be locked when they strike the ground and the result will likely be a snapped driving pinion. These are simply instances of careless or actually bad driving which are likely to throw the various parts out of alignment and make satisfactory operation impossible; and be it noted they are simply a couple of instances from many similar troubles that may occur.

Let us examine briefly some of the more important locations where misalignment of the parts may be expected. First, there is the engine, and in this unit it is quite possible to throw the connecting rod out of the perpendicular line as regards the crank shaft. When this occurs the piston, instead of moving straight up and down in the cylinder, rubs against the side wall, wearing the cylinder in an oval form, so that it must be rebored to restore its usefulness. Again, the crank shaft itself may be thrown out of its proper alignment, generally because of wear in the bearings. When this happens the connecting rods will be thrown out of due line, with results as noted above and further excessive wear in the bearings will occur.

In addition to the crank shaft there are a number of minor shafts in the mechanism which are likely to get out of alignment. For instance, if your car is fitted with a magneto and you don't oil the shaft on which the armature runs, rapid wear will result and the shaft will drop out of line.

The really efficient service stations are very particular in this matter of being sure that the mechanical units of a car sent to them are correctly lined up, because they realize that satisfactory operation is impossible until perfect alignment is secured.

Motor Trucks' Use of Our Highways Means Wide Roads

Structural Changes Will Result in Most Road Building Plans

BY S. E. BRADT.

[State Superintendent of Highways.]

ILLINOIS is facing the problem of building a state-wide system of roads which will be called upon to sustain not only the heavy traffic of today, but also the anticipated increase in traffic which will develop within the next two decades. The use of the motor truck for transportation, now in its infancy, seems likely to become as universal as the use of the passenger motor car; and looming up as it does as the most important element in the future movement of freight, must consequently be considered one of the principal governing factors in the design of modern highways.

These conditions in Illinois are not dissimilar to those in other states, and therefore all far-seeing highway officials have now to cope with the problem of building highways which will have the stamina to join with the heavy truck in "delivering the goods" of tomorrow.

The anticipated use of a connected system of country highways in Illinois by motor trucks has resulted in certain modifications in practice in highway design, all of which have resulted in increased cost.

The selection of the rigid types of pavement—such as brick, concrete or bituminous concrete on a concrete base—for practically the entire State Bond Issue road system is largely due to the destructive action of motor trucks on the lighter, cheaper types of road surfacings. If passenger car and team traffic alone were to be built for the lighter types of pavement—such as, for example, bituminous macadam, surface treated macadam or plain water bound macadam—could be used satisfactorily and a great saving in first cost could be made. With heavy truck traffic to cope with, however, it would be financial suicide to build any but the most substantial roads on the main routes.

Motor trucks are also directly responsible for the almost universal adoption of greater thickness in rigid pavements than has been used in past practice. This amounts to about one inch increase in all standard types, entailing a resulting increase in cost.

Instances are on record where even rigid roads have been broken down by heavy truck traffic because they lacked the requisite flexural or slab strength. The standard of thickness used in Illinois has undoubtedly been entirely adequate for present needs, but an increased standard of thickness has been adapted to safeguard the vast investment that is now being made in roads—the $84,000,000 which is now available from the Federal Aid and the State Bond Issue for the construction of a connected trunk line system of highways.

In order to provide a still further increase in the strength of pavements the specifications for these new roads have been made much more rigid than those which have been used in the past. Better materials are insisted upon; more exact methods of proportioning and more careful attention to construction details are now required, and a more accurate finish and more thorough drainage and compacting of the earth subgrade upon which the pavement is laid is demanded.

The construction methods of the Illinois division of highways formerly in use were well in advance of general practice. Nevertheless, the methods now specified will result in pavements much superior to the rigid pavements which have been built in the past.

The anticipated increase in truck traffic is responsible also for the construction of wider roads than would have been necessary if only ordinary team and automobile traffic were to be carried. On those routes where two lines of traffic can reasonably be expected an additional width of at least two feet is demanded, with a proportionate increase in cost. Should congested mixed traffic develop even greater widths may be demanded, and the widening of many of the main trunk line roads in the future will not improbably become necessary.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

THE Gramm-Bernstein Motor Truck company of Lima, O., has purchased the property on Wabash avenue, between Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth streets, and will erect a new salesroom and service station. The new building will cost about $225,000.

D. McCall White and E. C. Howard, who recently resigned from a leading Detroit automobile factory, are preparing to enter the market with a new car. There has been a rumor to this effect for some time and it recently has been substantiated.

A Liberty motor made under government specifications is being displayed at the Marshall Field store.

A new plant for the Victor Manufacturing and Gasket company is nearing completion at 5750 Roosevelt road.

George M. Dickson, president of the National Motor Car and Vehicle company, declared that it will be at least another year before there is any appreciable closing of the existing gap between supply and demand for motor cars.

The Chicago Private Chauffeurs' Benevolent association will be addressed by D. G. Roos, assistant chief engineer of the Locomobile company, Sept. 20, at the company's showroom, 2000 Michigan avenue.

Gasoline is cheaper than shoes; use your car more, said H. P. Branstetter.

A. J. Banta, manager of the Maxwell Motor Sales company, said his company's entry in the national motor truck development tour, which ends at Milwaukee Oct. 4, has broken many gas, oil, and water records.

The Walden-Worcester company of Worcester, Mass., which makes socket wrenches, is building a new addition to its plant.

E. E. Bloom, export manager for the Haynes company, returned from a two months' stay in Europe. He said the opportunities for American cars in Europe was large.

Edward S. Jordan, president of the Jordan Motor Car company, believes there is going to be a big demand for roadsters.

Absolute integrity on the part of the automobile merchant in his relations with the buyer is what counts in the success of the industry, Charles B. Voorhis, general sales manager of the Nash company, declared at a dealers' meeting at the Nash factory.

The car shortage situation has no effect on the business of the Bearings Service company, except to increase it, the officials claim. They stated that hundreds of car owners were having their old cars fixed up while waiting for deliveries on new ones.

New Nash Four.

The Nash Motors company is to build a four cylinder car in a plant to be constructed in Milwaukee. Transfers of forty-one acres of land at Clement street and Oklahoma avenue have been made to the company and contractors are ready to carry out the construction of this new factory without delay.

The company is also making substantial additions to its main factory in Kenosha, where Nash six passenger cars and trucks will continue to be built.

Work on the Milwaukee buildings will be completed within the next twelve months. It is planned to bring the production of the Milwaukee plant as early as possible up to a point of production equal to the passenger car production of the Kenosha plant.

American Car Wins.

A 200 mile road race over the rough roads of northern Argentina recently found a car from the United States winning first money. Overdan Piovano crossed the line in front in four hours and nine minutes. He attributed his victory to his United States chain tread tires, which stood up well in spite of poor going. He drove an Overland.

Get the motor power you pay for

When you pay for gas you pay for power—but you don't get it if your piston rings leak.

If you haven't correctly designed piston rings in the cylinders of your motor, a great deal of the gas you buy will pass by them. This wastes power.

McQuay-Norris Leak-Proof Piston Rings with their exclusive two-piece angle-to-angle interlocking construction act equally all around the cylinder walls. That's the reason you should install them in your car. They increase power—save gas—and by keeping lubricating oil out of the combustion chambers they decrease carbon.

They are made in every size and over-size to fit every make and model of motor. Your repair man can get the proper sizes for you promptly from his jobber's complete stock.

How We Go At It

First we look into the battery to see if you put water in it.

Then we use the hydrometer which is the one reliable way of knowing the condition of its charge.

Then, if no special cause of trouble appears we put it on the line to see if it will take a charge.

But if there is plain indication of serious trouble we open the battery up and find out exactly what's what.

Don't trust your battery to amateurs or artists in guesswork, who claim they can tell inside condition by outside inspection.

Come here where you find adequate machines and apparatus to really inspect, charge and repair any battery.

Keep Tidy Garage and Owners Will Largely Profit

Unnecessary Disorder in Public Garages Drives Away Business

If you went into a restaurant and found it conducted in an untidy manner you would not be apt to go back there again. Why not carry out this idea and apply it to garages?

Motor Age has launched a campaign of education for the garage owners who do not believe in keeping their places in a manner which not an eyesore to the car owners who must patronize them. The paper says that many garage men can get a few lessons on "housekeeping" from any well conducted service station.

Mechanics in dirty clothing, floors stained with oil and water, tools lying around, work benches covered with odds and ends, and a general appearance of carelessness are some of the matters complained of which need correction.

The article said:

"Let us consider the lack of cleanliness in the repair shop. Of all the crimes a service station can commit against its customers the greatest of these is to maintain an unclean garage. There is nothing that gives a customer a worse impression of an institution than to have it turn out dirty work. And this is not an occasional error. It is a very common one. Yet most service managers think of this most important phase of their business last.

"If you enter a restaurant and find dirty tableware you immediately loose your appetite and wonder whether or not you should stick around and face the ordeal which your first impression of the place has led you to believe is coming. There are many garages that give its customers this same impression on their initial inspection. And the other fellow with a nice, neat place gets the business and you wonder where he gets his drag. And he gets lots of business more than he can handle. Yet the fellow with the shifty garage will not look around and make comparisons between himself and the others that are doing business to find out where the trouble lies. Think it over.

"How often we have noticed a transient motorist drive up to a garage, give it the once over, and then pass on to inspect others. The motorist knows from experience that if he can find a neat appearing place he also will get good, neat work done. If you have ever had that happen to you walk across the street and give your place a critical inspection, just as a prospective customer would, and then figure out what you have to do to make amends with yourself and your business.

"It's really marvelous what a few dollars worth of paints, several buckets of water, and a few brooms will do for a garage. Let's don't do it once in the morning and then seek the easy chair, but let's keep at it. That's the way that people get things done in this world—by keeping at it. Some morning you will come to and find out your business is away beyond your fondest expectations.

"While the exterior gives a visitor his first impression, the interior must be kept in harmony with the surroundings to carry out the ideas which have been fostered. This demands that the shop part of a garage be as neat as its salesroom and that the workmen be kept as neat as it is possible to do."

Expensive To Buy Motor Trucks By the Ton

Look at the Use of a Motor Truck from the Transportation Angle and the Economy of Packard Efficiency is Apparent

STRENGTH is not necessarily a matter of weight in motor trucks or anything else.

For example—there are two ways of making a steel rod strong. One way is by making it bulky—the other is by scientific heat treatment—a stronger rod from one-half to one-quarter the size and weight.

• • •

Motor truck transportation must move goods at the lowest cost—you must be able to figure on the costs beforehand and depend upon their correctness afterward—or there is no science to it.

Motor truck transportation as a science must start with an efficient motor truck.

To get to the transportation value of a motor truck, you must dig under the pretty paint which covers it.

Just because a truck looks like a brute—built up with tons of extra metal—is no sign it can go the distance or do the work.

Motor trucks built to sell by the ton wear themselves out under their own weight.

They consume nearly as much gasoline and oil without a load as an efficient truck uses when loaded.

They are more expensive to maintain as they grow older, because poor workmanship and uneven quality in material show up to a greater degree the longer a truck is in use.

Packard trucks are built for transportation efficiency.

Where weight is needed for strength, we use weight—but where it is not needed, no expense is spared in replacing it with whatever science has to offer.

For example, Packard represents the highest heat-treating achievement as applied to commercial vehicles. Parts of a Packard truck, heat-treated, show from 35,000 to 62,000 pounds per square inch more strength than the average of other makes.

Packard quality begins to show from the start off. It shows more and more as the mileage increases. It outlasts the paint by years. There are a hundred thousand economical miles built into every Packard. Many Packard trucks have run twice that.

Packard efficiency counts in the science of transportation.

Your business man wants, not only low costs, but dependable costs.

Both these, the use of the Packard truck insure him.

To business men who have not yet begun to place trucking on a scientific cost-keeping basis, we offer the services of the Packard Freight Transportation Department.

You need not be a Packard owner to avail yourself of our aid. Packard Service in this respect is without charge and truck owners may use it without feeling under obligation.

50,000 Dealers Sell Goodrich Tires

The Army of Goodrich Dealers, ready to furnish the User with Goodrich Tires wherever he is, or wherever he goes, means many significant things to him—above other things, a wide-spread, popular approval of Goodrich Tires.

But first it means that 50,000 dealers, more than half in the country, have confidence in Goodrich and Goodrich Tires; that 50,000 men whose business it is to know tires, believe in the skill and sincerity of Goodrich tire making, and the certainty of Goodrich tires making good in actual road performance.

A dealer knows he can sell any tire once. But he also knows he must—to succeed—have tires, like Goodrich, which resell themselves on service delivered to the user.

Furthermore, the Dealer like the User, is safeguarded by the frank open-handed certification of Goodrich's More-Mileage Adjustment—6,000 Miles for Fabric Tires—8,000 miles for Silvertown Cords.

The Goodrich Certification measures out—as everything else you buy is measured out—the minimum you, with proper usage, get from Goodrich Tires.

Finally, 50,000 Dealers enlisted to furnish America with Goodrich Tires because they were first to know what the whole motoring world now knows and says, "Goodrich has THE TIRE."

Actual photograph of the 14-truck fleet of the William Fullerton Motor Truck Service of this city, every unit of which is shod with Goodyear Solid Tires

Mileage Tests Put Goodyear Tires On This Busy Chicago Fleet

> "Previous to five years ago we used different leading makes of solid truck tires. Since five years ago we have never used anything else but Goodyear Solid Tires. And it is our decision to use only Goodyear Solid Tires in the future. Our reasons are the same reasons that have caused many others to take the same action."
> —William Fullerton, Manager, William Fullerton Motor Truck Service, 3455-7 So. Morgan Street, Chicago

EIGHTY Goodyear Solid Tires constantly equip the 14-truck fleet of the William Fullerton Motor Truck Service of this city, for the simple reason that they have earned their places on every wheel.

Five years ago Goodyear Solid Tires won adoption on this motor caravan by outdistancing several other leading makes of solid tires in mileage tests conducted under regular working conditions.

And their later mileages, recorded as they have matured during the last two and one-half years, have averaged 22,062 per tire, a figure decidedly impressive in this particular type of service.

For the Fullerton trucks are hard-working trucks and their eighty Goodyear Solid Tires must grind along all day under heavy cargoes of sheet steel, paper and other dead-weight materials while encountering car tracks, bad pavements and dangerous litter.

We talked about the eighty to Mr. Fullerton, who stated that part of the credit should go to a local Goodyear Truck Tire Service Station which has made tire conservation practical despite the frequently unfriendly conditions encountered.

If you are a truck owner, observe that this same combination of tire quality plus tire service is conveniently available to you through one of the well distributed local Goodyear stations listed below.

Also note that your hauling conditions can be met with exactly the correct type of Goodyear Truck Tire—either the Solid, Cushion or Pneumatic—and with the correct type of neighborhood service for that tire.

WANTED—MALE HELP.

Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

SALESMEN—EXPERIENCED TIRE SALESMAN. Our need is for men to aid in the rapid development of this company. Our business has reached the proportion where it is necessary for us to build up our own distributing organization.

Capable men, who really are producers, will be able to qualify for executive positions. In the next few years there will be more big jobs than big men.

Men who meet our qualifications must be above the average.

We do not want the salesman who is continually seeking a change. We want men who have ability to think for themselves, who plan ahead, and who in their present capacities do not see the chance to display their ability or to have it rewarded. We want men who are successes, and the only reason they would consider changing is because their present organization is too big or too hide-bound.

This opportunity is no way to sudden wealth. You would start with us on your present salary. It will be up to you to convince us.

But you will later receive salary in proportion to your earnings and your worth to this company.

We have no so-called starting salary, nor do we have a regular scale of increase. It is absolutely up to the individual.

Neither will you step into an executive job at once.

We promote men from our sales force and make our selection on ability that has been proven.

There are several territories open. They are all in the Middle Western States. In some territories the salesman will make his headquarters away from Chicago. He will find the work hard and calling for all his ability, but he will have the backing of intelligent sales direction and a product second to none. The big field jobs are yet to be made. Our future executives are probably in our sales force. This opportunity is identical to that offered by the biggest companies in the early days of their expansion, but our expansion has been more rapid and the job will come quicker to those who make a success with us.

Tell us about yourself by letter. The way you present yourself on paper will decide whether or not a personal interview will be arranged.

All replies will be treated with the strictest confidence.

Address THE MILLER RUBBER CO., 2329 Michigan-av., Chicago, Ill.

WE WILL PAY

$250 EACH

FOR FOUR SALESMEN AND WE WILL PAY THE SALESMEN $25,000 AND UP PER YEAR.

Several times we have advertised in The Tribune for big money-making salesmen. Men who have come in our office thought it strange that if we had a proposition which was actually paying such big money that we would have to advertise for men.

We can sell nearly every man who comes in our office and who is situated so that he can go 100 to 300 miles from Chicago on taking up this work. We are getting a lot of good men, but owing to the rapid development of our business we want a lot more and want them quick.

So we are willing to pay $250 apiece for four men. We don't want just a single four, but we want several groups of fours—they do not need to work together, and if you can get four good salesmen in our office who mean business you can make $1,000.

Here is perhaps the most remarkable and profitable sales proposition that was ever made. Our average commission is in excess of $500.

Now listen. We will pay a salesman an immediate bonus of $50 for each and every prospect qualified in addition to the commission. Besides paying this bonus for prospects we do the closing.

Now listen again—we have men in the field who have recently joined our organization who are averaging nearly a prospect a day. We are an old established concern, in busines more than half a century, and have facilities of doing twenty-five to thirty million dollar business within the next year. If you have the money-making germ in your blood, come into our office at once.

No matter how skeptical you are, if you know a good thing when you see it do not lose any time. The choicest territory in the country is open right now and we are paying double the commissions we expect to pay new men who start in a short time. Will give you exclusive virgin territory which contains from 500 to 1,000 logical prospects and tell you how to get to them with the least possible lost motion. We want men who are real salesmen, who can unquestionably qualify as to ability and integrity.

Call 9 to 11 a. m. or 2 to 3:30 p. m., or write, giving outlines of your experience and earnings.

Suite 301, 109 N. Dearborn-st.

Below is what some of the men say who called in reply to a recent advertisement:

Sept. 11, 1919.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

This is to certify that I made a trip from Toledo to Chicago on the 10th inst., as a result of a Tribune advertisement regarding the proposition referred to above.

After spending two days in Chicago and thoroughly investigating the proposition from every angle, I find it to be much better than represented by the Company in their advertisement.

After several years as President of a bank and a Government Auditor during the war, I consider this connection more valuable than any I have had previously. After I was in Chicago one day I wired one of my friends in Toledo, who came down on the next train, and who has already taken up the work. Two more will do so upon my recommendation, as soon as I return.

I met a large number of salesmen in the office of the Company who had responded to an advertisement, and did not find a single one who did not say that it was all and more than they expected it to be.

Very truly yours,
O. R. JONES,
1706 Madison-st., Toledo, Ohio.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

We, the undersigned, have called at the office of the Company the above advertisement referred to on Thursday of this week, and find the proposition all and more than it is represented to be in the advertisement.

GEO. A. HUNDERSON,
C. V. FANT,
O. A. LEWIS,

VOCATIONAL SERVICE
means occupation, situation, position, job, or whatever you may call it—in words.
BUT in reality—it means this to
YOU
You have the experience, the qualifications, the ability and the desire for better things.
STILL
you cannot tell your prospective employer how good you really are; if you did, he would think you were an egotistical fool. You know this is true.
You absolutely NEED
our service—because we not only advise you—but furnish the position and actually sell your services to the employer.
OUR plan eliminates all "hit or miss" methods because the placing men in our offices are trained EXECUTIVES, not "has beens" or "hope to be's"—but men—real hard hitting, red blooded business men.
SERVICE
is our by-word and we will make good. Ask any real business organization why they use our service and they will tell you that the VOCATIONAL
Bureau makes no promises they cannot fulfill, no camouflage, no bunk, just plain facts which produce definite results. In a few words, we actually do make good.
500 ORDERS NOW!
Managers, Purchasing Agents, Clerks, practically any vocation is included in this list. You cannot lose. Opportunity knocks, listen! Monday's a good day.

ADVANTAGES
GIRLS
BY MONTGOMERY WARD & CO.
ARE
TO PARENTS.

Many mothers bring their daughters here because they have learned of the excellent working conditions and the unusual opportunities for advancement.

They realize, as we do, the responsibility involved in starting the young girl in the proper environment, where she will be placed in a position best suited to her qualifications and where the chances for promotion are good.

Not every girl can secure a position here—only those are accepted who, by reason of their good character and careful home training, fit properly into our organization.

Mothers bring their girls here because they know that we realize the importance of looking after our employes' welfare. They place their daughters in our store with a feeling of satisfaction and utmost confidence.

Good wages are assured, plus an ideal opportunity to learn the mail order business. Every department is a training school in itself, where interesting work is taught.

A position here affords a broader future to inexperienced girls than the average beginner's job.

Canada.

DAVIDSON DISTRICT,
SASK., CANADA.

Thrashing is in full swing now. Another good crop maintains our record of 16 years without failure. Parties going now are seeing better crops per acre on our $30 to $60 per acre land than have been raised this year on land down here worth nearly ten times as much. Further argument is unnecessary. The time to ponder is past. Now is the time to act if you don't want to lose the opportunity to get land in the last new country where land is still cheap and can be bought on easy 6% terms. You know what values have done here. Activity is commencing in earnest at Davidson now. Farms often pay for themselves in one and two crops. Living conditions absolutely modern in every way.

Excursion rates every Tuesday. Write for particulars and literature.

It is a passing opportunity if you delay.

$40 to $75 an Acre
for Fine Irrigated
COLORADO LAND

With the possibilities for development now assured under additional water, this land near Fowler will prove a good investment for many land buyers.

Fowler is close to the famous Rocky Ford neighborhood, and the land available has exceptionally rich, deep soil.

A new reservoir being rushed to completion will give 20,000 acres of this land an abundance of water, and farmers already on the land will sell some of their present holdings to better enable them to handle intensive cultivation possible under increased water.

The undersigned company itself has no land to sell, being essentially a farmers' mutual water company, comprised of farmers who own the land. Additional land owners will also own their own water.

Corn, wheat, alfalfa, beans, milo maize, Kaffir corn, sorghum, are grown now by irrigation. Splendid cantaloupes and watermelons, also big yields of sugar beets, can be grown.

There is very little low priced irrigated land left. Write us at once if you would like to know about some of it.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

FARM HOMES

ARE YOU among the thousands who intend moving to the country as a solution for the serious problems that now confront wage-earners and city people everywhere?

WHY NOT TRADE the hot pavement for cool grassy plots—your strange neighbors for real friends—your stuffy flat or house for a real home—your fire escape for a big front yard—the noisy clatter on brick pavements and the rattle of the street cars for the health giving country air, and last, but not least, plenty of pure food raised by your own hands instead of wilted vegetables and high priced foods you must now buy of your grocer? Country homes are solving all these problems today. You can't accomplish all this without work, but if you are willing to work you can do it.

NOW, THE QUICKEST AND SUREST ROAD to a good farm home is by the "SWIGART WAY." We have over 40,000 acres of hardwood soil in the Southern Peninsula of Michigan, in Antrim and Kalkaska counties, where are produced abundant crops of potatoes, wheat, oats, millet, beans, rye, clover, alfalfa, and all the delicious Michigan fruits that command the best prices everywhere. This land is being sold now in 10, 20, 40, 80, 160 acres, larger tracts for stock raising, at the extremely low prices of $15 to $30 per acre on very easy monthly terms.

THE "SWIGART WAY" is the sure way. We have been in business for over 20 years and know what the new settler needs to make a success. We loan money to erect buildings and buy live stock. Our agricultural experts aid you in your farming work. Our free insurance protects you in case of death and there are many other ways we help our settlers that is all told in our big free booklet.

IN OUR DISTRICT we already have most all the conveniences of the city, such as telephone, hard roads, good schools, churches, R. F. D., movies, market towns, and railroads. We are taking people there every day, and on our last excursion, of Aug. 19, over fifty made the trip and nearly all became farm home owners. We are planning for another big excursion soon. Take this first step today by writing for our big free booklet, also excursion dates and rates. It will start a change in your life that will make you better financially, physically, and morally.

AT THE CROSSROADS

EVERY DAY men—broad shouldered, able bodied men—come into our offices to find out about the proposition our company offers the public. They tell the same story of the city life, expressing their heart's desire—that of wanting to safeguard the future of the family. They express their uneasiness of the future. They tell us about forebodings of coming uncertainties with their trail of stagnation, unemployment, and hard times generally.

We all realize that the present uncertain conditions cannot last much longer. A more or less violent change is bound to come sooner or later, and with every passing day it becomes more and more apparent that this change may come sooner than expected, and when it comes no one can tell how serious the conditions will be, or how long our troubles will last. If history of past wars with their aftermaths of unsettled conditions is a criterion of what we must expect, years will join the yester-years before our industrial life shall become steady and normal again.

CITY LIFE.

City life increases your uncertainties. Even though you may produce labor, you do not produce food directly, nor do you manufacture other necessities of life. Thus you have no reasonable control of the effects caused by the law of Supply and Demand. No doubt the "HANDWRITING ON THE WALL" warns you to prepare. But can you prepare yourself against all eventualities if you trust the "frail craft" that now holds you and yours, even should the current drag you into a whirlpool of unknown depth and dangers?

City life with its ensnaring conveniences and tempting luxuries may appeal to many, but the one who builds his and his family's future upon the quicksands of a city's promises takes upon himself a responsibility that will be wearisome to carry. His earnings may suffice today, but what guarantee has he that the conveniences and luxuries of a great city will remain his tomorrow and for years to come as the failing powers of his advancing years begin to remind him of unpleasant possibilities?

COUNTRY LIFE.

Do you see beggars on the crossroads in the country? Do the men who own their farms apply to their communities for assistance to support their families? When Life's Evening comes, do the men who own farms need to worry? No! WHY? BECAUSE THE FARM is the sure and sufficient pension for the good and faithful worker, where the CITY HOME is a continuance of worry and expense.

No matter what disturbances occur, no matter how restless the world is, the man who sits on his own farm surrounded by his family is assured of enough to eat and drink, and the surplus—and a surplus there will always be where steady work is directed by good judgment—will always provide the other necessaries of life, some years possibly more generously than others, though one thing is sure; a good farm pays well for good and faithful work from the first days of the pioneer to the later days of a settled farm community.

REALITY.

These are, therefore, your alternatives: The City or the Country. The choice is yours. It is yours now. It will not remain yours long, as there are too many who choose in favor of the country. And the cheap land, which is the only kind of land that holds out a promise for you, will soon be gone if you tarry—if you dare not break away from old customs, habits and environments. To leave the city with its modern conveniences and many luxuries for the sturdy life of a pioneer in Oconto and Forest Counties, Wisconsin, no doubt frightens many, but it will never un-nerve the true man mated to a true woman. All intervening fears and anxieties have been swept away long since by the courage of a new, inspiring vision of a future home, a home of their own and "a new job" in which the man and woman and even the children are their own masters and their own working-men.

We sold 80 acres a few days ago to a young man from Chicago, Ill. He made a payment on the land. He was happy and satisfied. He returned home with a contract and told his wife an inspired story about the great, open out-of-doors waiting for them up North, and told it in the way of a man who longs for a man's work. No fear, no obstacles, clouded the sky. All he could see was Work and Success with a Home of their own and all that these things mean to the American citizen, beckoning. What happened? Was his message received with the loyal faith of a true mate? No. Her cheeks paled; her eyes shot resentment as his story ended. She wanted nothing of country life. She wanted nothing of all those things her husband most desired. She killed the plan. She willfully, resentfully destroyed the foundation of her and his own future home. The man who had planned with foresight and courage came back here to our office a few days ago, and explained shamefacedly the circumstances to the writer. We realized his misery and the problem he was up against, cancelled his contract and returned him his money.

Is this your case, too, or have you and your mate the courage to carve your own happiness and independence out of a country that offers you the chances of a true man and a true woman?

WHAT IS YOUR CHOICE? The city or the farm? Work and uncertainty, or work and security?

If you choose the latter alternative, we sincerely invite you to visit us or write us for further information about our district and our excursions. We pledge our HOME LANDS CREDIT SYSTEM as our guarantee for our willingness to assist you on your road to

"YOUR OWN HOME."

COMMUNITY CENTER.

We have just begun Community Centers. Inland towns have been laid out where schools, stores and tradesmen will be located. Our Graduate Agriculturists are at the present time organizing short courses in agriculture for the late Fall and Winter, laying foundation for marketing cooperations, and also making arrangements for entertainment for the Winter in connection with libraries, social gatherings, etc. Our settlers here do not feel alone. They all realize that the Home Lands, Inc., bring the community life of the older settlements to the settlers from the beginning.

OUR LANDS

are located in the Oconto River Valley, Forest and Oconto Counties, Wis. They are close to railroad towns, schools, roads, etc. Our prices range from $20 to $30 per acre for agricultural land. Stony land is sold at much lower prices as grazing land. Sandy and swampy land unfit for agriculture we do not offer for sale.

AN OPPORTUNITY.

I was chief engineer for the largest cereal manufacturing concern in the world and know the business and its possibilities thoroughly. I want to meet a progressive man with $25,000 to $40,000 to go into this line with me. A good clean business record is just as important in this case as capital. I am willing that both myself and my proposition be rigidly investigated. I would prefer a man about my own age, 35 to 40. To the right party this field is full of great opportunity. I have a market for more than we can produce from the beginning. Address Y 411, Tribune.

SALES MANAGER—MAKE $300 TO $1,000 per week and upwards. Get in on this right now. Something entirely new. After ten years' experimenting The Standard Coal Oil Burner has just been perfected. Burns common kerosene—the cheapest of all fuel. A boon to the housewife, restaurant or hotel where cook stove is used; so simple a child can operate it; turn the valve and you have the fire. No fires to make or go out; no ashes; no dust; no clinkers; just good steady heat. One in a neighborhood sells the rest. Sells on its merits. No coil oil burner ever before to compare with it. A whale of a money maker. Exclusive territory to managers able to finance themselves. Call and see demonstration. Standard Coal Oil Burner Co., Room 334, 29 S. La Salle-st., Chicago.

UNDERTONE OF REAL ESTATE MARKET REMAINS FIRM

REALTY HOLDERS WAIT HOPEFULLY FOR HIGH PRICES

Acreage in Demand for Improvement with Homes.

Although comparatively few real estate transactions of note were recorded during the week, the undertone was strong, brokers reporting that property is being firmly held. Uncertainty over the building outlook continues to be the chief element that is holding back what, it is believed, would quickly become an active market if the situation could be cleared up in satisfactory manner.

In a number of cases recently brokers have found that property offered at a certain price could not be obtained at the specified figure. When it became evident that the buyer would give what was asked, the holder promptly pegged up his figures a few notches. This is one of the indications that the holders of property are confident they can obtain good prices by waiting for developments. A good market for vacant property, which has been long neglected, is one of the possibilities when the general situation improves.

Acreage in Demand.

Acre property with good transportation facilities is in demand. This type of property is to be built up, as soon as conditions permit, with small homes, where the sites are suitable for this purpose, and it seems evident that there is a considerable demand on the part of the public for places of this sort.

Improved home property, with modern improvements, is scarce. A rather good demand for homes is reported. A number of transactions in property of this type have been closed recently. In some of the more popular suburban districts it is said that there is practically nothing to be had by those who wish to purchase homes.

In general terms the present market is described as having a healthy tone, although it is evident that many are waiting, both buyers and sellers, until they can see their way clear for the future.

Speculating on Changes.

Brokers and owners of property have been speculating on the changes that are to be looked for when building operations finally are resumed, and some of their views are interesting. The growing cost of building, the expense of upkeep, the general desire for economy, and even trouble over the servant girl problem are expected to bring considerable changes in the type of buildings that will be put up in the future.

"With the great increase in the costs of labor and materials," said Adolph F. Kramer, "it seems to me that hereafter we will see little of the old type of structures that were so familiar. I refer especially to the three story buildings, with three, six, or more flats.

"It is probable that hereafter we will see mostly buildings of from six to twelve stories, of reënforced concrete or street construction. These will contain apartments of one, two, or three rooms, with kitchenettes. They will represent a semi-hotel proposition. We can also look for some large apartments of the more luxurious type that will rent at high figures.

Says Builders May Quit.

"On account of the changes that seem imminent it would not surprise me if a number of the old time builders would find it difficult to adapt themselves to the new conditions and would decide to drop out of the game—at least until the time comes when they can figure profitable investments on the new scales of rents and costs of construction. They do not like the present uncertainties.

"It is evident that there must be a general readjustment of income, as well as with reference to the cost of construction. We must become accustomed to these changes. It naturally follows that the old buildings are likely to enhance considerably in value."

A building which is being put up in New York is an instance of the change that is going on with reference to construction of luxurious apartments. The building is to be at 910 Fifth avenue. It will house seventeen families, whose rents will aggregate $441,500 annually. There are to be ten simplex and seven duplex apartments, which will rent for from $18,000 to $30,000 a year. It is said that these rents, in comparison with the number of square feet involved, are the highest ever paid in any city.

Modern Improvements.

The building is to have every convenience for its tenants. The duplex apartments will contain twenty rooms, one of which will be a salon, 24x40 feet. There will be seven baths, five open fireplaces, and six master bedrooms.

The tenants may have meals in their own apartments or go to the café, which, in summer, will be in the roof garden. Separate quarters are provided for the servants, and each apartment will have its own service elevators. A limousine can driven into the building to pick up its passengers. The demand for apartments de luxe, of this type, is said to come from the wealthy, who figure that it is cheaper to live in this manner than to maintain separate homes, which involve big investments and heavy expense. It also enables the tenants to save much time in trips to the business district.

LEASES SHOW BUSINESS NEED OF NEW SPACE

Various Firms Remodel Property Rather than Build.

Activity in property available for manufacturing or for warehouse purposes was shown by several leases which were closed during the week. Property of this class that can be made ready for use on short notice is reported to be in considerable demand. This is attributed partly to the uncertainty and delay that would attend building operations if the business firms were to attempt to go ahead with construction plans.

Buildings at the southeast corner of Fifteenth and Laflin streets have been leased by the United Cigar Stores Company of America for a term of fifteen years at an annual rental of $30,000. The buildings contain 145,000 square feet of floor space. They are of heavy mill construction, sprinkled, and are served by switch tracks. The buildings are to be used for the wholesale end of the lessee's business and for warehouses. They are being remodeled at a cost of $75,000, under the supervision of W. G. Uffendell, architect. The lease was from G. D. Grosvenor and was negotiated by J. J. Harrington & Co.

For Clothing Factory.

Hart, Shaffner & Marx are to manufacture clothing in a building at 512 to 520 South Wells street, which the firm has just leased. The building covers 70,000 square feet and is the only one remaining in the wholesale tailoring district which is available for this purpose. It is four stories and has light on three sides. The First Trust and Savings bank acted for the owners of the building, and E. T. Teich & Co. for the tenants. The rental for a term of years is $95,000.

L. Kaufmann & Co., dealers in foreign exchange and securities, have leased the store at 114 North La Salle street for a term rental of $21,000. The lease was negotiated for Frank G. Hoyne & Co. by E. J. Perlberg.

The unexpired term of the lease of John Early for the store at 127 to 129 South La Salle street has been taken by Babcock, Rushton & Co. at a rental of $24,000. This space will be added to that already occupied by the lessee, and is to be fitted up for the bond and stock business. The lease was negotiated by Ben K. Babbitt of John R. Magill & Co.

South Halsted Lease.

The R. W. O'Shaughnessy estate has leased to the Bake-Rite corporation for Jacob Solomon the two story brick building at 6345 South Halsted street. The lease is for thirteen years at a total rental of $40,000. Joseph Schwartz was the broker.

The sixth floor of the building at 14 and 16 North Franklin street has been leased by the Adams estate to the Crandall Packing company. The lease was negotiated by J. G. Kirk & Co. It is for a term beginning May 1 next, at a total rental of $25,000.

A four story mill construction sprinkler system building at 2510 to 2518 Calumet avenue, containing 74,000 square feet, has been leased by H. Melvin Mahin to the Magnetic Motors corporation. Mark Levy & Bro. were the brokers. This building was recently leased by the owners, Mrs. Ruth Porter and James F. Porter, to Mr. Mahin.

KARPEN LEASES BRUNSWICK WEST SIDE PROPERTY

The deal which gives S. Karpen & Bros. control of the leasehold of the plant of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender company, at the southeast corner of Twenty-second and Ford streets, will mean a considerable increase in the productive capacity of the new lessees. It is thought that an option for a ninety-nine year term, which is contained in the lease, will be exercised.

The building is 283 by 150 feet and is four stories. It is owned by John McConnell and is under a twenty-five year lease. The rental is $7,200 a year until 1922, and $8,400 for the remainder of the term. If the ninety-nine year option is taken up $50,000 must be paid. The rental then becomes $3,750 for the first twenty years and $5,000 for the rest of the term. The deal was negotiated by Francis H. Quail.

The adjoining building on the south is also owned by S. Karpen & Bros., who are now operating a plant across the street. The firm is putting up a large factory at Long Island City, N. Y., and has a plant at Michigan City, Ind. All of these are to be used for the manufacture of furniture.

CHICAGO REAL ESTATE BOARD HOLDS OUTING

Favored by ideal weather conditions, the twentieth annual outing of the Chicago real estate board at the Olympia Fields Country club on Tuesday was a marked success. Despite the fact the price of tickets was $5, over 100 members of the board and their guests attended, a large percentage of whom participated in the program of games and sports, for the winners of which an unusually attractive list of prizes had been provided.

The outing committee which had the affairs in charge was John A. Carroll, president of the Hyde Park state bank, chairman; Adolph F. Kramer, Harry F. Prussing, D. Harold Hoffman, and Fritz Steinbrecher. The efficient executive secretary, Herbert A. Cole, was master of ceremonies, and ran off the program without a hitch.

Golf was the leading feature in the way of sports, four contests being scheduled. There was the usual contest between the "Sox" and "Cubs," which the former, under the leadership of Fritz Steinbrecher, won by a score of 8 to 5, Homer Schneider being the leader of the "Cubs." The games included all sorts of foot races, etc. Luncheon was served at 12:30 and dinner at 6:30, when the winners of the various events were awarded prizes. The latter were donated by Harrison B. Riley, president of the Chicago Title and Trust company; A. Lincoln Green, president of the Real Estate Index company, and Ivan O. Ackley, president of the real estate board. The Dolan cigar shops donated a meerschaum pipe.

U. S. BUILDERS ARE OFFERED BIG JOBS ABROAD

Construction work in foreign countries is likely to occupy much of the attention of American contractors hereafter, who are equipped to handle such business. Stone & Webster report that they have been asked by Japanese interests to undertake a hydro-electric development that will involve about $5,000,000.

This firm is also figuring on dock developments in the Mediterranean that will cost $10,000,000 to $12,000,000. Its engineers are to leave soon for Greece where they will investigate a hydro-electric project in the vicinity of Saloniki that will cost $5,000,000.

The Ulen Engineering company of Chicago, which is owned by Henry C. Ulen, and Stone & Webster, has taken large contracts for municipal improvements in South America.

Bungalow Project Waits End of Building Tieup

Improvement of a large tract at the southeast corner of Yates avenue and Eighty-fourth street is one of the projects that is awaiting settlement of the building tieup. Christian P. Zacher has just purchased forty-eight lots in this locality from the Merchants Loan and Trust company, with the intention of improving all of the lots with bungalows. The lots lie between Eighty-fourth and Eighty-fifth streets, Yates and Phillips avenues.

Another deal in outlying property that indicates future development was the purchase by Edward E. Britton of the interest of his former partner Louis C. Miller of Akron, O., in a tract of sixteen and one-third acres in the Irving Park district. The tract is at the southeast corner of Irving Park boulevard and Central avenue. This tract is to be subdivided and placed on the market.

Sheridan Road Residence Purchased for $45,000

Transactions in high class residence property are being reported with increasing frequency. Property of this type is said to be in greater demand than for a long time. During the week the sale was recorded of the residence of Frederick W. Moeller at 5838 Sheridan road to William R. Edwards of the Edwards & Bradford Lumber company, for $45,000. The lot is 50 by 150 feet. The house contains eleven rooms. The sale was negotiated by James J. Parker & Co.

A twelve room residence in Wilmette has been sold by C. P. Hodgson to Anna Shampay, at an indicated valuation of $22,500. The house is at the southwest corner of Central and Fourth avenues. It has a sun parlor, sleeping porches and a garage.

FLAT BUILDING SALES FOR WEEK FAIRLY ACTIVE

Louis Geyler Buys Two Buildings in Hyde Park Boulevard.

Sales of apartment properties were fairly numerous during the week, but few were of any special significance. The scarcity of flats has caused many of these properties to appear more attractive. Several of the purchasers said they had bought for investment, as they believe they can fill the buildings steadily with desirable tenants.

One of the interesting purchases was made by Louis Geyler, who now has control of a group of high class apartment buildings that face on both Hyde Park boulevard and Madison Park. The buildings are just west of Dorchester avenue. This strip was occupied for many years with dwellings of the old type, but it is being built up with apartments.

The latest purchase by Mr. Geyler covered two buildings at 1226 to 1230 Hyde Park boulevard, and 1225 to 1229 Madison Park. The buildings were sold by Gustav G. Anders for an indicated consideration of $102,000, subject to an incumbrance of $83,500. Hedberg & Bistor, in connection with H. O. Stone & Co., were the brokers. There is a frontage of seventy-five feet, with a total depth of 183 feet. Mr. Geyler conveyed property on the South Shore drive, fronting the South Shore Country club.

A three story building at the northeast corner of Madison street and Parkside avenue containing twenty flats has been purchased by Joseph Schumacher from Jerome L. Deimel, subject to an incumbrance of $61,500. The purchaser gave in part exchange the northwest corner of Hermitage avenue and Taylor street and the premises at 109 West Austin avenue. The transaction was handled by Leo P. Perron, J. Braun being associated in the deal.

Hilda W. Olson has purchased a six apartment building at 4629 to 4631 Malden street from Alice M. Sexsmith for $25,000, subject to an incumbrance of $13,000. In part payment the purchaser conveyed a two story store and flat buildnig at 6923 North Clark street, subject to an incumbrance of $5,000. William L. Wallen Jr. of William L. Wallen & Sons represented both parties. A number of other apartment sales in the Rogers Park district have been closed by the same brokers.

Store and Flat Sold.

The store and flat property at the southeast corner of Broadway and Catalpa street, 50x150 feet, has been purchased by Mary Dyer and David Brown in a cash transactions for $30,000, subject to an incumbrance of $15,000. W. G. Young & Co. represented both parties.

A building at 5684 and 5686 Ridge avenue, containing six apartments of five rooms each, has been sold by Rose K. Slotkin to Edward Osgood for $33,000, subject to a first mortgage of $16,000. The lot is 50x150 feet. Both parties were represented by O. P. Curran Jr.

Oliver L. Watson, who has just purchased the Drexel square apartment building on Fifty-first street, 100 feet east of Cottage Grove avenue, intends to remodel the structure and arrange it for small flats. The lot is 100x208 feet. The purchase was from Omar H. Wright, subject to an incumbrance of $35,000. Mr. Watson has obtained a loan of $175,000 for six years at 6 per cent, for which the Central Trust company is trustee.

Railway Employes Gain; Owners Lose.

The demand of railway employés that the roads be turned over to them and that they be given a share of the profits, in addition to their wages, calls attention to the way they have profited in the last few years, while the average stockholder was losing money on his investment.

Five years ago passenger conductors received $165 a month for running 5,580 miles or less and 3.8 cents a mile for extra mileage. Now they receive $187 for 4,500 miles or less and 4 cents a mile for all over 4,500 miles. Freight conductors formerly received $4.18 to $4.52 for a day of ten hours, or 100 miles. Now they get $5.40 to $5.92 for eight hours, or 100 miles.

Baggagemen formerly received $76 a month. Now they get from $124 to $135. Passenger brakemen formerly received $68.75 a month and freight brakemen $2.78 to $3.14 for a day of ten hours, or 100 miles. Now the former are paid $120 and the latter from $4.08 to $4.48 for eight hours, 100 miles or less.

Passenger engineers five years ago earned from $4.30 to $5.15 in a day of ten hours, while freight engineers received from $4.75 to $6.50. Now the wages are from $5.60 to $6.60 for the former and $6.08 to $8.50 for the latter, with an eight hour day.

Passenger firemen formerly earned $2.65 to $3.15 and freight firemen $2.80 to $4.25. Now they get from $4 to $5.20 and $4.24 to $5.75, respectively.

The wages of other classes of workers have not been so uniformly standardized. Most shopmen now receive 68 cents an hour, compared with 52 cents two or three years ago. Station agents and operators formerly received from $45 to $115 a month, according to the amount of business at their respective stations. Now they receive nearly twice as much, on an average, besides having more assistants.

It must be remembered that the foregoing figures do not give the entire increase in wages, because now, with eight hours as a standard, there is necessarily much overtime work, which is paid for at higher rates.

While the employés have been profiting enormously the market value of railway bonds held by investors has shrunk $1,500,000,000 and that of stocks about as much.

Iowa Electric.

J. T. N.—The Iowa Electric company has outstanding $1,054,000 of first mortgage bonds and $108,550 of notes secured by bonds as collateral. Its balance sheet of Dec. 31 last showed also $472,426 of floating debt. Net earnings in 1918 were $133,974, which is nearly twice the interest on bonds and bond secured notes, but leaves only a moderate surplus after total interest charges. The company has issued only $527,075 of stock, $312,900 of it being preferred. The bonds have a wide margin of security, but the company is not well financed in other respects, having too little stock and too much floating debt.

Brief Answers.

F. M. S.—The Associated Almond Growers have reputable backing and can give good title to land they sell. Whether cultivating the land will prove as profitable as hoped we cannot predict.

D. B. McL.—Cities Service Bankers' shares each represent one-tenth of a common share. They have been reviewed.

BOULEVARD LINK WORK DEVELOPS REALTY PRICES

The strong effect which municipal improvements have in increasing values of real estate is being shown by transactions along North Michigan avenue. About two years ago A. W. Shaw & Co. bought land on this street with the idea of improving it with a building to house the firm's publishing business. The land became too valuable for the purpose and the firm decided to locate its publishing plant on Cass street, between Huron and Erie streets.

The most recent deal on the newly improved thoroughfare was the purchase last week by Col. Robert R. McCormick of the northeast corner of North Michigan boulevard and East Ohio street, for an indicated valuation of $185,000. The transaction was handled by Paul Steinbrecher & Co. The purchases include the corner, 25x100 feet, a lot 44x100 feet, lying 73 feet east of the corner, and 48 feet on Ohio street, having a depth of 100 feet, lying 25 feet east of the corner. The purchases include 11,700 square feet.

Earnings of Oil Companies Exceed Previous Years

New York, Sept. 12.—[Special.]—Current earnings of the big oil companies are understood to exceed those of previous years, owing to the all-around demand for petroleum products. Prices of refined products generally are on a better basis than in the last few years. This is especially true of kerosene, which has again become one of the active lines of trade.

There is now a more evenly balanced demand for gasoline, kerosene and lubricating oil than has existed for several years. The big gasoline demand of the last few years was offset by lack of kerosene business.

North Edgewater Plans Big Building Operations

North Edgewater is preparing to take part in the general development as soon as it is possible to go ahead with building operations. Several apartment buildings and storage warehouses, it is said, will be put up on Broadway, between Bryn Mawr and Devon avenues. This district has been rather quiet for the last three years.

Plans for a court apartment building which will contain forty suites, to be put up at Broadway and Ardmore avenue, are being prepared by Samuel Ohlander.

LONGS CONTINUE TO SELL CORN; OATS DECLINE

Increased Liquidation in Both Big Factor in the Market.

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Increased liquidation and demoralization was the big factor in corn and oats, with the poorest buying support the trade has had, and a drop to lower levels than heretofore, with the inside for the season so far made on the deferred futures. September corn led and closed 8c lower, while deferred futures were off 3c to 3⅛c. A rally of 1c was made in the distant futures, while September closed at practically the inside for the day and week. Cash corn was off 9c to 12c, with the close at the bottom. No one seemed to want to buy anything except when they had it sold first.

Oats, like corn, were sold on stop loss orders, particularly toward the last, and closed with losses of 2¾@3⅛c. Provisions had better support for the near futures, but January was weak and lower, losing [illegible] on ribs, while lard finished unchanged. October ribs gained 10c and lard 13½c, while pork was off 15c.

Southwestern markets were as weak as Chicago, with about the same declines on corn and oats. In Minneapolis oats lost 2@2¾c, and in Winnipeg 1½@2c.

Prices have been on the down grade for thirty days, with the most drastic decline in the last week. Cash corn is off over 30c, September 28½c, December [illegible], and May 11c from the close a week ago. Oats show losses of 5@5¾c. Rye, however, is up 2@2¼c, and barley [illegible]c lower. Provisions have not escaped, pork losing $2.00@4.10, lard $1.00@1.60, with September leading, and short ribs $1.55@2.22½ for the week.

Corn Prices Slump Badly.

Continued liquidation by scattered longs, especially in September, combined with an utter lack of buying except such as was furnished by shorts and holders of daily and weekly bids, carried the deferred corn futures off 4@4⅛c from the previous day's close to a new low level for the season. September dropped 8¾c to $1.35½, or within 3¾c of the inside figure made on March 12, and 62½c under the high of July 10. The new crop futures at the bottom were off 45¼@[illegible]c from the top made July 29. The break has continued forty-seven days.

Cash grain has declined as rapidly as in September, being off 5@12c for the day, with the basis about the same as Friday, 2@2½c over the future for the No. 1 and No. 2 grades. The country sold over 100,000 bu old corn to arrive, mainly ten and twenty day shipment, at $1.40⅝@1.44⅛ for No. 2 yellow. Eastern demand was better, with sales of 150,000 bu.

Longs Sell Oats Freely.

Disgusted longs sold oats freely, and with limited support prices declined readily, at the low point showing 2¾@3c under the previous close, with the finish at the bottom to ½c above, with September 64½c, December 66½c and May 68⅝c.

Numerous stop loss orders were uncovered on the way down, while the most effective buying was by shorts and by cash houses, who were removing hedges against shipping sales of 400,000 bu to eastern distributors. In two days 700,000 bu have been sold. Country offerings remain light, and farmers in general are commencing to hold grain, especially in the northwest. Sample values were 1@4c lower, with receipts 103 cars.

Rye Lower with Corn.

While there was fair buying of rye futures by cash houses, the break in other grains made an easier undertone, and the close was 2@2¼c lower. The bulk of the export demand of late is said to be from countries that will reship it to Germany. Offerings on spot were small, with No. 2 about 1c over September, with sales at $1.41¾. Receipts, 5 cars.

Barley was weak and 3@4c lower, demand being rather slow in sympathy with the decline in corn and oats. Spot sales of malting were at $1.25@1.31, and feed at $1.15@1.26. Receipts, 25 cars.

Flax seed at Duluth closed 5c lower; October, $4.67; December, $4.45. Winnipeg, 5c lower; October, $4.55; December, $4.34.

Timothy seed firm. Country lots, $8.50@11.00. March, $12.25 bid per 100 lbs. Toledo, 5c higher; October, $5.45 per bu of 45 lbs. Clover seed firm. Country lots, $30.00@40.00 per 100 lbs. Toledo, 10c higher; October, $30.60 per bu of 60 lbs.

Provisions Have Better Support.

Buying of lard and ribs by Hately and Cross Roy, particularly the latter, for October, absorbed the offerings and made a stronger market, despite the demoralization in corn, the close being higher. On January product, however, there was only fair support and increased offerings, with a lower finish, as was also the situation in October pork. There was nothing in the hog situation to create renewed uneasiness. Cash trade remains light, but shipments of lard and meats for the week aggregated 35,728,000 lbs, compared with 34,195,000 lbs the previous week and 15,041,000 lbs last year. Prices follow:

$10,300 Paid for Board of Trade Membership

The last trade in board of trade memberships was at $10,300 net to the buyer. This price was made by a party who had to have a membership on a certain day last week. Another buying order was in at the same time and they were forced to pay the same price as the other. Recent applications are Edward Lichtenberger, Wallace Templeton, M. F. Cudahy, R. M. Lockhart Jr., A. L. Rossner, F. L. Richards; for transfer, A. S. Templeton, W. B. Lathrop, W. B. Craig and estates of Charles Lichtenberger and Patrick Cudahy.

HOGS IN ILLINOIS.

Hogs on farms in Illinois are 6 per cent less than last year.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Although prices have had a drastic decline with the heaviest liquidation of the season, particularly in cash and September corn, few traders see anything to buy it on, except that there has been a big break. Conditions for the present are regarded as against the bull, and despite the heavy selling on stop loss orders in the last thirty minutes yesterday further liquidation was looked for, although small rallies are expected from time to time. The country and longs generally have made series losses and the trade is more bearish now, taking the rank and file, than they have been for a long while. Conservative people, however, who have been bearish are advising against a continuation of short sales on breaks. Traders who fought the advance in corn for months turned bullish on the first 10c break and have been fighting a decline since. There are many traders who are predicting $1.00 for December corn before there is any good on the buying side.

The Updike house was an enormous seller of corn futures yesterday, being more conspicuous than any other. Thursday and Friday they were large buyers. The heaviest selling yesterday in December was from $1.20 down, while in September liquidation was on from the south. The only buying in September was by cash houses.

A little hedging has been done in September corn against the cash holdings in the country and in transit, which has saved shippers from losses, although the September has been at a discount. Yesterday's trading in the No. 2 grades of corn was at 1½c to 2½c over the September, the latter for white and yellow, and the smallest so far this season. The country sold 100,000 bu of corn on overnight bids, but offerings late in the day were limited.

Oat specialists said that there was the first indication of liquidation in their market yesterday that has been experienced, and they predicted more. Part of the liquidation yesterday was by Ware & Leland. A few of the pit traders and commission house gossip writers said at the close that liquidation was over and the market oversold.

There were inquiries here yesterday for new corn for export in January, but nothing was done.

Bids on corn and oats were bought freely at the start of those trading in indemnities, but latterly offers were in active demand from commission houses, who were the largest sellers of futures during the day.

Embargo on shipments of wheat to Kansas City from the country has been lifted, effective at once. The blanket permit system is now in operation and carriers will be allowed to load a total of 310 cars daily for shipment to Kansas City.

"Twenty-four Days on a Troopship," J. Ralph Pickell's, of the Rosenbaum Reviewers, latest novel, is now off the press. It covers his impressions during a European trip of three months, during which he reported the conditions prevailing which have now become the main depressing influences in grains.

Primary receipts of wheat for the season to date aggregate 147,115,000 bu; corn, 163,086,000 bu, and oats, 35,524,000 bu. Last year wheat receipts were 156,766,000 bu, corn 260,581,000 bu, and oats 68,251,000 bu.

CASH GRAIN NEWS

Shipping sales at Chicago Saturday: Corn, 150,000 bu; oats, 400,000 bu.

Cash wheat prices showed little change. Elevator interests picked up the heavy winter wheat at ½@1c over the basic, while the line grades and the poorer kinds went at the basic figures. The government took most of the No. 4 and No. kinds. Springs sell readily when choice. Receipts 398 cars. Minneapolis was 5c higher. For the week arrivals were 2,773 cars, against 4,402 cars the previous week, and 3,527 cars last year. Hard winter at Kansas City was 1@3c higher and red unchanged to 1c higher. St. Louis unchanged at the basic price.

Offerings of cash corn were rather liberal, and while eastern demand was good, prices dropped 5@12c, and closed at the bottom. No. 1 and No. 2 grades brought 2@2½c over September. St. Louis was off 8¼@11½c, Kansas City 6@7c, Omaha 8@13c, and Peoria 7½@8c. The latter had 44 cars, and Chicago 177 cars.

Domestic shipping sales of oats were the largest in many days, but sample values were 1@4c lower, closing at the bottom. Receipts 103 cars. St. Louis declined 2@2½c, Kansas City 2@3c, and Omaha 4@4½c.

Only a handful of hogs arrived yesterday. Trade was rather uneven at the start, but general selling was steady with previous day's average. Top hogs sold at $18.25, like late Friday, while the average price at $16.70 was 10c below that day, owing ot poorer quality. About half the packers were out of the market and the Armour and Swift houses purchased 4,500 out of a total of 7,000 sold to all interests. About 3,000, mostly held from earlier in the week, were unsold at the close, being held on orders from the country.

Average price of hogs for the week at $17.35 was lowest for any week since July, 1918, standing $1.10 lower than previous week and $2.60 lower than a year ago, which was a record to that time. The price for the week stands $4.85 lower than the record level of less than two months ago, showing how prices have dropped in a short period.

Hog receipts at Chicago for the week were nearly 40,000 larger than previous week. Eleven markets received 401,000 hogs for the week, being 102,000 more than previous week, 16,000 more than a year ago, and 57,000 more than the eleven year average for same week. Average weight of hogs at Chicago, estimated at 255 pounds, was 1 pound less than previous week, but 4 pounds heavier than a year ago.

Arrivals of cattle, hogs, and sheep at twenty markets for the year to date totaled 47,250,000 head, being the largest on record, and an average of 1,277,000 head per week. Hog arrivals at 25,936,000 made up over half the total, cattle totaled 10,200,000, while sheep were 11,114,000. Of the grand total, Chicago alone has received 11,279,000 head of stock so far this year, not including 500,000 calves, which are counted separately. The total arrivals at the twenty markets represent the enormous valuation of $2,200,000,000 on the open market.

The few cattle offered Saturday went at unchanged prices. Average price of good beef cattle for the week figured $15.50, being 25c lower than previous week, $1.10 lower than a year ago, but $5.35 higher than eight year average for same week. The average price was $1.90 less than four weeks ago, when $17.40 was recorded, standing highest on record. The top for the week at $18.00 was $1.35 lower than the top during the record average week.

No change was noted in the market for the moderate Saturday arrivals of sheep. Trade was very uneven during the week, but the average price of lambs at $15.50 was 75c higher than previous week but $1.75 lower than a year ago. Sheep averaged $7.90, or 85c above previous week, $3.95 lower than a year ago, but $1.05 higher than eight year average for same week.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 25,000 cattle, 23,000 hogs, and 40,000 sheep, against 33,108 cattle, 26,268 hogs, and 41,259 sheep corresponding Monday a year ago. Next week's estimated receipts 77,000 cattle, 85,000 hogs, and 150,000 sheep.

Eleven Years' Production

An analysis of certain statistics furnished by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, relating to the Motor-Truck Industry of America, indicates that:

On the basis of this year's estimated production of 328,000 motor-trucks, it would take the industry eleven years to meet a potential present day domestic market for three and one-half million vehicles of this description.

This condition is significant to the well-informed investor, who realizes that the opportunity to grow with an industry, despite our diversified manufacturing activities, is "simmering down" to a select few, and of which the manufacture of motor-trucks easily ranks the first.

The Seven Per Cent Cumulative Preferred Stock of the Winther Motor Truck Company, Kenosha, Wisconsin, a successful and growing corporation, destined, we believe, to become a leader in the industry, appeals to such investors for the reason that it is fully safeguarded, has a high NET yield, is well secured, and at the prevailing price carries with it the privilege of substantial participation in the Common Stock earnings of the Company, conservatively estimated at $1.90 per share.

CHICAGO BANKS' OBLIGATIONS AT RESERVE CUT

$35,251,278 of Loans on U. S. Collateral Retired.

Banks in the Chicago Federal Reserve district reduced their obligations at Reserve bank in the last week by $29,291,535. They retired $35,251,278 of lonas made on government collateral. But they increased their borrowings on other bills by $5,759,643. Meanwhile other reserve banks paid off loans at the local institution to the extent of $19,406,500.

No special announcement was made as to the occasion for the large reduction by the member institutions, although coming from all over the district the contraction may be regarded as a favorable evidence of continued improvement in the money situation.

The total change in Reserve bank's position in the matter of bills held was a reduction of $47,667,734.

Banks Gain Cash.

The weekly statement of the New York associated banks showed a gain of $25,788,000 in cash. This is rather a noteworthy increase. But the most significant change was an increase of $169,784,000 in demand deposits. But for this extraordinary expansion the surplus reserve would have made unusual improvement. As it was, the increase totaled $13,655,080, bringing the item up to $45,681,280. At this level there is no suggestion of money discomfort. The treasury department drew down its balances at the banks by $72,231,000. Th figures now stand at $181,609,000. The statement:

Germans Seek Credits.

The appended, from an eastern authority, bears evidence of being a correct presentation of the attitude of the New York banks in the matter of extending credits to Germany. The statement follows:

"An officer of a prominent bank whose name is frequently mentioned in connection with rumors of credits advanced to Germany, says that his institution is being approached almost daily by various German interests with requests for credits, but that in every case the application is refused.

"The bank has three representatives in central European countries studying the situation there, and until they have reported their findings the bank is not likely to entertain any proposition from those nations for a long term credit.

"It is learned, however, that New York banks are assisting German importers individually with exchanges of credits at a certain rate of exchange. Dollars are advanced here against marks placed to the banks' account in German centers. Selling of these marks is largely responsible for the weakness which the currency has recently shown in the local market."

CHICAGO STOCKS

Swift & Co. stock was inclined to be weak on the local exchange, selling off 2 points. Stewart-Warner was advanced 2 points. Union Carbide was irregular and closed slightly below the final price of the previous day. There was a fair market in the issue.

Armour & Co. preferred has shown a tendency to firmness in the last few days, and the price yesterday closed at 104¼. National Leather stock sold off to 18½. This offering has not been received with the market favor that characterized the segregation of Libby-McNeil and Swift International.

It is probable the impression that the leather industry is at the peak is responsible for the lack of market enthusiasm. However, at 18½ the shares are selling at 185 per cent of par.

POLICE STRIKE COLLAPSE PUTS PEP IN STOCKS

Gains of 2 to 5 Points Made in Active Industrials.

The New York Times.

New York, Sept. 13.—[Special.]—Today's dealings in stocks expressed relief over the collapse of the police strike in Boston, a development which was considered in some speculative quarters as a significant setback for the program of the American Federation of Labor in its present aggressive campaign. Doubtless considerable short covering aided in bringing about gains of from 2 to 5 points or more among the most active industrial issues, but there appeared to be a fair volume of new buying for the long account. This was demonstrated as well among the railroad shares as in the ranks of the industrials.

The turnover, in the neighborhood of 500,000 shares, was substantial for a Saturday. The best quotations of the session were established midway in the two hour period, the latter transactions being directed partly by realizing sales.

Watches Labor Situation.

The financial community awaits with interest possible important developments this week in the labor field. The steel union leaders have established headquarters in the heart of the industry and the utterances coming from this center reflect what seems to be confidence that a wide following will accept the strike call a week from Monday.

The union strike managers are preparing an appeal to workers not affiliated with unions to act in sympathy with the union members, with the purpose of tieing up as many plants as possible. These plans were laid before the Boston strike went down to such complete defeat, and while special circumstances surround the situation in the New England city, it hardly would be surprising if the event had much impression upon workers in industries. At least it serves to concentrate attention upon the proposed steel strike and may have influence in causing the strike movement in other directions to be checked, pending the conference on Oct. 6 between capital and labor at Washington.

French Exchange Declines.

Outside of consideration of labor matters the markets had little to engage attention today except a further recession of French exchange. A sharp decline of 12 centimes in a market which seemed to lack support through buying orders all the way through carried the check rate to 8.68, a new low record. At this level the franc had an exchange value of no more than 11.5 cents, compared with the normal quotation of 19.3, the discount being in excess of 40 per cent. Sterling was steady, as were the other exchanges except lire, which lost a little ground.

CHICAGO CURB STOCKS

The local unlisted securities market has been fairly active, although the trend of prices has been somewhat irregular. Butler Bros. sold at 241, but reacted at the close to 237 bid, offered at 240. Great Lakes Dredge and Dock advanced about four points to 81 bid, with light offerings. Consumers company preferred was somewhat stronger at 88½ bid, offered at 89½. Kellogg Switchboard and Supply improved in the bid price to 203, with stock offered at 207.

Motor stocks were practically unchanged. After selling at 31 Reo Motor Car reacted at the close to 30¼ bid, offered at 30¾. Paige-Detroit was neglected at 37½@38½. National Motors was slightly easier, being offered at 28, with buyers at 26½. Auto Body was firm, 13@14. Duplex Truck improved to 10¾ bid, offered at 11¼.

Sugar issues showed slight improvement, Columbia being quoted 17¾@18¼, selling at 18. Holland-St. Louis, after selling at 16, advanced to 17 bid, with light offerings at 18. Michigan was quiet at 11¼ bid, offered at 12.
